SUBJECT: 2014 IL Republican Primary Memo

This Chicago Tribune/WGN-TV poll is based on a sample of 600 confirmed registered voters in Illinois likely to vote in the March 18th Republican primary. The potential margin of error for a sample of 600 is +/- 4% at the 95% level of confidence. Interviewing was conducted by phone with live interviewers from Wednesday - Friday evenings and Saturday daytime, February 5-8.

Registered voters are screened to determine voting likelihood - registered to vote where they now live, absolutely or fairly sure will vote, and voted in one of last two GOP state primary elections. Illinois is one of the states that do not have party registration. Self-described party identification is a variable.

GOVERNOR CANDIDATES

In 2010 Bill Brady lost to Pat Quinn in the race for Governor by tenths of one percentage point. Brady wants to win this primary to defeat Quinn next November. But today 42% of voters have no opinion of him. Primary day is five weeks from now

Q 10c. Dan Rutherford, is your opinion of him...favorable, unfavorable, do you have no opinion, or have you never heard of him?

The three candidates above were known back in 2010. But now in 2014 they seem be almost forgotten.

At first newcomer Rauner was unknown until he began running frequent TV campaign ads. Rauner campaign TV ads dominate the race Rauner's opponents apparently cannot afford to do the same now only five weeks out. They complain Rauner is trying to buy the Republican nomination.

Q 11a-b. Candidates for Governor in the Republican primary are...Bill Brady, Kirk Dillard, Dan Rutherford and Bruce Rauner. If you really had to decide right now, for whom would you vote?

Republican primary voters side with Rauner that his wealth makes him independent of special interests while a few side with his opponents' accusations that he is trying to buy the nomination.

METHODOLOGY [NEW]

Chicago Tribune/WGN-TV polls are based on Registration Based Samples (RBS) telephone survey of known, confirmed registered voters who have voted in elections and likely to vote again. We sample voters who have voted at least once in the last two elections and who say they are eligible to vote where they live now. In the past two general elections one was a presidential election. Interviewing is conducted on evening weekdays and daytime weekends. Poll respondents are contacted with live interviewers by phone. Respondents have either landline or cell phones compliant with Federal Communications Commission regulations.

For samples of 600 can say with 95 percent certainty that results will potentially differ by no more than plus or minus 4.0 percentage points near 50%. Results under or over 50% have smaller margins of error. Within state segments the sample margin error will have larger margins of error.

Elections district voter turnout within a state is the basis for stratified sample areas. Our area stratification in Illinois has been in use for over 20 years. Sample areas within the state is possible using stratified Registration Based Samples (RBS) of known areas voting throughout the state.

State voting districts includes major urban city wards within Chicago, suburban townships within Cook county, five individual counties within the metro, and 96 upper and lower counties in the out-state area. This is called stratification based on consistent past voter turnout patterns over the years. Sample error diminishes with properly stratified Registration Based Sample (RBS). Poll sample frames are stratified by known sub-state election districts voting over time to diminish sample error with consistently known patterns of voter areas turnout.

We take into account that registered voters do not necessarily always vote. So we screen for voters who have voted at least once in two recent elections. For example in the 2010 general election 3.7 million Illinois voters voted well below the number of eligible registered voters 8.8 million. And in the 2012 presidential year, 5.3 million voted also well below the 8.9 million voters eligible to vote. [General election data source: U.S. Election Project.]

Contrary to the more common Random Digit Dial (RDD) sampling from the last century, Registration Based Samples (RBS) do not include the general voting age population only, do not include eligible voters only, but we do include known, eligible voters who voted at least once in the last two elections.

Poll Estimate Error: One half the difference between the election margin and poll margin for the top two candidates. That difference - if added to one candidate and subtracted from the other - would exactly match the election margin. This is the only error measure comparable with sample margin of error, the method used by the National Council on Public Polls since 1997. Above three of four years the difference was one percentage point.
