the environmental disaster in the gulf, people would be hungry for this sor= t of thing. Maybe they are and just don't know about it. I'd like to change= that--for my uncle's sake.=20

I'm reaching out to various mechanical engineers and physicists here in= the Research Triangle area of North Carolina, but thought I'd ping the lis= t to see if anybody had any relevant contacts that they wouldn't mind shari= ng offlist. In addition, if you feel like writing a story on a potentially = groundbreaking technological development--one that could realistically go a= long way toward solving our nation's energy crisis--then I'd be happy to s= peak to you as well. Lord knows that the publicity wouldn't hurt.

Again, I know that this comes out of left field and probably sounds far= fetched, but I assure you that I am very, very serious.

Linda and my beloved little brother Ben (aka the Cool Perlstein) is manager for the bassist Tommy Stinson, of Guns 'n Roses and formerly the Replacements. Here's an announcement for a fundraiser he's doing--Ben's inviting reporters to come along with them for the graduation at a school Stimson supports, but even just an announcement (and I'll post a reminder just before the time of the auction) blogs or, say, the Nation's news briefs page would be fantastic. Also, it's a nice little update on still-horrific conditions on the ground.

The world's attention=A0has=A0turned elsewhere as Haiti struggles to recover from the historic January earthquake. No country has suffered such a=A0massive disaster in a century; 3% of the 9 million population died, a like number suffered injury and illness and 20% are now homeless. The situation in Port au Prince is still threatened=A0by=A0the chaotic situation existing there. Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere has little infrastructure, making=A0every task more difficult.

TOMMY STINSON is committed to aiding the fundraising and awareness building efforts in Haiti by working with the Timkatec Centers, three schools located in Petion-Ville, a suburb of Port Au Prince.

Tommy, currently in Guns N=92 Roses and Soul Asylum and formerly of The Replacements, Bash & Pop and Perfect, will hold an online fund-raiser by selling personal and donated items on his website, www.tommystinson.com, in late July. Items will include a signed GNR bass guitar, two retired custom-made plaid suits from his GNR tours, a week-long vacation in the Bahamas, and more. Everyone who makes a donation of any amount to Timkatec as part of the fund-raiser will receive a free download of =93Don=92t Deserve You,=94 the first single off of Tommy=92s upcoming solo release, which is currently in production (release date TBA).

The three=A0Timkatec schools=A0support 500 children and desperately need financial support. Timkatec 1,=A0a residential Primary school founded in 1994, brings some relief and normalcy to=A0500 kids=A0in the post earthquake=A0chaos by providing food, shelter, education and structure=A0to homeless and abandoned children, some just 5 years old. Timkatec 2,=A0built in 2005, is=A0a trade school for destitute=A0teenage boys, training=A0as plumbers, electricians, tailors, shoe makers and construction workers;=A0Timkatec 3, founded in 2009,=A0trains teenage girls as cooks, hairdressers, seamstresses and child care workers.=A0The results are=A0improvements in health, literacy and self-esteem and above all, the ability to=A0support one=92s self. Currently, funding for Timkatec comes from "The Friends of Timkatec in America", founded by the O'Shea family and friends in 2004 to build Timkatec 2 and fund its operations. More information: http://www.timkatec.org/

Consider these facts:

150 students and employees are=A0unaccounted for and=A0have been replaced from the thousands of newly homeless.

Medical treatment for the girls is a significant new unplanned expense.

A psychologist is on staff to advise the kids suffering from post-traumatic stress as frequent after-shocks still=A0occur.

Many Timkatec students=A0still sleep outside.

The need to assist staff with minimum housing and clothing so=A0they could return to work is an unplanned expense.

The water and fuel situation is critical and expensive. Food is 15-25% higher in costs.

Tommy is planning on attending the graduation ceremonies at Timkatec 2 in Petion-Ville to hand out diplomas on Saturday, July 31, 2010. Would your publication be interested in sending a writer along with Tommy to Haiti cover this story? The travel would commence on Thursday, July 29th, returning Sunday, August 1st. American Airlines flies directly into the Port au Prince Airport. All ground transportation and accommodations would be arranged,

I look forward to speaking with you about the possibility of having one of your fine writers accompany Tommy on this extraordinary endeavor.

yes, I wish those naive dupes had figured out a way to outsmart the party establishment in '68 -- despite my revolutionary politics, I would have had a hard time not asking people to vote for McC.

I don't think anyone has argued that potentially viable progressive candidates shouldn't challenge sell-out incumbents. I don't think Obama is close to being that kind of incumbent, by the way (his backtracking on civil liberties notwithstanding). But I voted for EMK in '80 and Bradley in '00 -- and would defend those decisions today.

I covered Kobe's rape case and went into it with pro-prosecution assumptions. The details have faded from my memory, but I remember thinking that the government made the right choice in dropping the charges.
Obviously, Kobe benefitted from excellent lawyers and unlimited resources, but I also concluded that it was a very weak case. Which is not the same thing as saying he was innocent, either.

I, too, have been creeped out by Kobe since the rape accusation. It seemed to me there would be very huge downside for a working class young woman to accuse a megastar with a bottomless legal budget of rape. It would be obvious that she, as much as him, would go on trial.

Of course we have no idea what happened, but it would seem that no sane person would press a false accusation under such circumstances.

On a much more trivial note, thanks to Matt Yglesias for this wise note on the (absurd) Bryant/MJ comparisons now going on:
http://yglesias.thinkprogress.org/2010/06/the-kobe-canard/</a=

Matt's analysis is backed up by that of the economist/basketball theorist Dave Berri. http://www.wagesofwins.com/Kobe8.html That chart compares Pierce and Bryant in their primes (8 years ending in the '08<b= r> season) with MJ in the last eight seasons of his career--including those weird ones in D.C. Even with that skew, MJ emerges as clearly superior to the others, and Pierce and Kobe as roughly equal.

FWIW, the NASCAR fans who whined about Toyota getting in annoy me less than those who find excuses to insinuate that only Americans see how stupid soccer is. The sport did start as stock car racing, and I can see how bringing foreign cars sort of betrays that history. But they got eaten by a global economy.

But that's quite the point: A home is like stock. You can sell it. You may not want to. You may not want to rent, or you may want it to continue to appreciate, or you may feel emotionally tied to it. But that doesn't make it an asset that you can't sell. If I have 2.5 million and have decided to put most of it into fine art and a bit into an apartment, I'm not less rich than if I have 2.5 million stocked away in my home. And that would become real clear if I ever needed to tap that money, or I decided to retire to Florida.
The idea that people with net worth above $2 million aren't rich because they don't want to sell their assets is strange -- and that's even more so because, as you note, you can borrow against the value of a home, so it both increases your worth and your access to capital. Homes are emotional to us, but they're also an asset, like any other, and they need to be accounted for that way as long as they can still be bought and sold.

The origins of the Pope nickname, as explained by Marc, are really pretty horrifying. Does it strike anyone else as problematic that the affectionate nickname for the JSOC commander is a joke about how awesome it is to refuse to obey the law?

Well, I agree with Daniel only up to a point. I take his point about the more o=

educatio=

say Obama lost the white working class 58-40--which everyone says--we're Indeed Daniel, well said. I'm trying to figure out why that email shouldn't be leaked by every single person on this list at precisely 9:35 tomorrow morning.

By the way, I too am seeking comment on this exciting and developing story, and I don't want to pull rank or anything, but my commenter wmd1961 HIMSELF
wants the story. I'm reasonably certain that's a him.

Eli, that Craigslist bit in your post is really interesting, even though it didn't work.

Meanwhile, I think this weird anonymous graf buried in Kurtz's column today is the first quasi-response from Gore:
http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2010/06/24/AR2010062406355.html

According to a source friendly with the Gores, Al Gore confirmed that he received a therapeutic massage in his hotel room that night, and likely from the therapist making the accusation. But, the source said, Gore remembers getting a massage without incident and the therapist leaving on good terms.

So Gore "confirmed" -- to his friend I guess? -- that the massage happened without incident.

But that's quite the point: A home is like stock. You can sell it.
You = may not want to. You may not want to rent, or you may want it to continue t= o appreciate, or you may feel emotionally tied to it. But that doesn&# 39;t = make it an asset that you can't sell. If I have 2.5 million and have de= cided to put most of it into fine art and a bit into an apartment, I&# 39;m = not less rich than if I have 2.5 million stocked away in my home. And that = would become real clear if I ever needed to tap that money, or I decided to= retire to Florida. The idea that people with net worth above $2 million ar= en't rich because they don't want to sell their assets is strange -=

- and that's even more so because, as you note, you can borrow against = the value of a home, so it both increases your worth and your access to cap= ital. Homes are emotional to us, but they're also an asset, like any ot= her, and they need to be accounted for that way as long as they can still b= e bought and sold.

but ezra, there's two huge probs with your thought experiment:
1) h= olding on to apple stock is not the same as holding onto your home. you hav= e to live somewhere. if you sell your home you have to deal with the hassle= of finding a new place to live and moving. if youve lived in a house for 3= 0 years, thats a psychological as well as logistical hurdle. so a lot of pe= ople who might be cash poor and house rich arent just going to pick up and = sell their house as easily as they would a gift of stock.

2) if your house appreciated $2 mil in value that's completely diff= erent than if you are given $2 mil worth of anything because it means, pres= umably, that all the other houses around you appreciated as much too. so, s= ince you need to move somewhere if you sell your home and you want to or ne= ed to stay in the same area, you wont make any profit.

this is the point that i think the non-new yorkers here are missing: if= everyone in ny has a more valuable home it doesnt mean they are all richer= than people everywhere else.

maybe you have to deal with the prepo= sterous cost of living here to fully appreciate it, but i dont think its ju= st an aversion to admitting that we journalists living in ny are rich. of c= ourse we are, relative to, say, waitresses in ny or anyone in cambodia.

but= are we richer than journalists in, say, Texas? I'd argue no. Just beca= use we might make more to cover the higher cost of living, or own homes wor= th more, doesnt mean we're better off if we dont have any greater purch= asing power.

it seems to me that everything from studies of wealth, or the attitudes= of the wealthy, to federal social policies should take cost of living into= account, and it strikes me as odd to see lefty wonks arguing otherwise.

I'm with Henry. There are things to admire about Germany, but I

I think this is only half right though. The German vocational training system used to work gangbusters up through the late 1980s, but is having big difficulties adapting to a service based economy. It still provides dignity to those who can get work as an apprentice, say, in a Mittelstand bespoke engineering company somewhere in Wuerttemberg, but is a poor fit with all sorts of other jobs. And while Germany still has a strong export oriented industrial sector in comparison to other countries, it isn't and can't be the major driver of employment.

I&=
#39;ve had my order in for the Geoghegan book for a bit, but I'm frankly a bit nervous about it. American lefties sometimes have a tendency to overidealize the European experience, and it is much messier than it sometimes comes across as being. A lot of German work institutions are based around the idea e.g. that married women will naturally stay at home. I hope that Geoghegan is a little less starry eyed than some about this (the blurb is a bit undimensional - but blurbs usually are).

Now back to your regularly scheduled programming on the rich ...

He writes about that eloquently: basically, that the institutionalization of vocational education provides a route to middle-class dignity for the non-cognitive-elite unheard of in the Geoghegan's new book, coming out this summer, "Were You Born on absolutely brilliant. =A0Having your cake--asserting civilian control, not in anger, but regret--and eating it too by hiring an even bigger

&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 to win the black vote or even that Joe Lieberman (po= st-2000) is going
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 to win the Jewish vote. Nonetheless, there is a bigg= er perception
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 issue at play. Relatively tolerant, socially liberal= white centrists
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 and independents are the audience in mind. An all-wh= ite GOP field is
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 going to strike a lot of these voters as behind the = times in
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 multicultural America. Phrases like &quot;a bunch of=
 white guys&quot; and
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &quot;straight white males&quot; are in the lexicon.=
 So if the GOP fields some
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 minority or female candidates, it may or may not win=
 over voters who
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 are themselves minorities, or women; but--or so I su= spect they&#39;re
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 calculating--it might very well help dispel bad asso= ciations the party
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 has among independent or swing voters as a bastion=
 of backward-
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 looking self-satisfied white men.
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 In other words, multiculturalism (of a sort) has won= culturally, even

&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 if it has not won as clear a victory politically.

&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; Here are some questions I have: &gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; 1) What&#39;s going on here? Is this just = tokenism? An attempt to &gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 prove

&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; the party is not racist? Or is this a of = Republicanism? How

&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 much of

&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; this is coming from the grassroots and

&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; 2) More than a few of these minority candi= dates are coming
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 from the
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; far-right, Tea Party wing of it=

 seems that the
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 Republicans
&gt;
&gt; &gt; &gt; =A0 =A0 &gt; &gt; are both moving to the right and becoming =

Eli, that Craigslist bit in your post is really interesting, even though it=
