

munist war-making capability, should be implemented. He concluded on this point that: "It is estimated that combined U. S./China capability to defend the OSI without discretionary use of nuclear weapons would be costly and probably ineffective. Less forceful alternatives in the long run would prove disastrous."³⁵