Course Description his 1 day, 8-hour program has been designed by Illinois Educational Training and Standards Board to provide students with the required 8-hour mental health awareness and response training. This course is meant to provide law enforcement officers with an awareness of mental health issues including a history of mental health systems, types of mental illness, signs and symptoms, common treatments, and potential interactions law enforcement may have on a regular basis with these individuals, their families, and service providers. Officer wellness and suicide prevention will also be discussed. COURSE GOALS: - Recognize the history of the mental health system and its impact on law enforcement and the criminal justice system - Discuss mental illness - Detail risk assessment and crisis response skills - Increase awareness of appropriate law enforcement interaction with individuals who have mental illness - Examine the Illinois mental health code and legal issues - Identify community resources - Understand the importance of officer wellness This course is taught by Lt. Troy Siewert of the Orland Park Police Department. Lt. Siewert has been with the Orland Park Police Department for 28 years and holds a Master's Degree in Criminal Social Justice from Lewis University. He is a certified CIT Coordinator, CIT Officer, Crisis Negotiator and Mental Health First Aid Instructor as well as a CIT role play evaluator for the Illinois Law Enforcement Training and Standards Board. Lt. Siewart started the OPPD Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) in 2015 and has developed the program into what is now recognized as a standard for best practice. In 2018, Lt. Siewert worked on a committee for the International Association of Chiefs of Police to update their model policy for Responding to Persons Affected by Mental Illness or in Crisis.

Policing and Policy

Memphis Police Aim To Cut Crime By 5%

The Memphis (TN) Commercial Appeal (10/7, Burgess) reports, "Next year, the Memphis Police Department will try to reduce crime by 5%, Memphis Police Chief C.J. Davis told members of the Frayser Exchange Thursday. 'Now that may not sound like a lot, but 5% is a lot when in 2020 we had 324 homicides alone. And when we're talking about violent crime we're not just talking about homicides,' Davis said. 'We can put resources in place to educate, we can put resources in place to be more visible so that other violent crimes like robberies, aggravated assaults and crimes that are associated with gang violence, we can curtail that, and that is what we will be targeting.'" The MCA adds, "Part of the effort will include working with the district attorney general's office to focus on the 20% of people who commit 80% of crimes, Davis said."

Austin Moves Ahead With Sixth Street Safety Program

The Austin (TX) American Statesman (10/7, Jankowski, Subscription Publication) reports Austin is "moving on plans to improve safety on Sixth Street – an initiative that came about after a June mass shooting in the downtown bar district, according to a memo from Austin Police Department Chief Joseph Chacon." A coalition of "public safety agencies and city of Austin departments have started work to improve lighting, tamp down underage drinking and create a standing EMS presence in the area on weekends, Chacon said in a memo to the City Council."

New York Governor Signs Bill To Combat Opioid Crisis, Decriminalizes Public Use, Sale Of Needles, Syringes

The New York Post (10/7, Rosner) reports, "Gov. Kathy Hochul signed a package of bills into law Thursday aimed at combating the opioid crisis – including one bill that decriminalizes the public possession and sale of hypodermic needles and syringes.” The new regulation, which is “effective immediately – eliminates a section of the state’s penal code that says possessing a needle or syringe in public is a class-A misdemeanor.”

Canadian Officers To Conduct Thanksgiving Weekend Traffic Blitz Focusing On Impaired Driving

CHWI-TV Windsor, CAN (10/7) reports Essex County OPP “will be taking part in a traffic safety blitz over the Thanksgiving weekend with a focus on impaired driving, seatbelt use and other offences.” Officers “will be participating in ‘Operation Impact’ starting Friday where they will be actively patrolling local roadways in hopes to reduce collisions as a result of speeding, lack of seatbelts or impaired driving.”

New Jersey Blocks Using Arrests, Citations As Markers For Promotion

The AP (10/7) reports from Trenton, New Jersey, “New Jersey police departments cannot consider the number of arrests made or citations handed out as criteria of an officer’s performance for promotion under a new law signed Thursday.” New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy “signed the legislation more than three months after lawmakers sent it to his desk.” According to the AP, “The measure’s sponsors said it was necessary because ‘for too long the way that perceived or real efforts by some officers to achieve “quotas” in order to attain higher evaluations ... can have a detrimental effect on our communities,’” state Sen. Shirley Turner said in a statement. New Jersey law “already prohibited police from using quotas for arrests and citations, though agencies could consider arrest and citation data as part of an overall performance evaluation.”

Kentucky Campaign Encourages Safe Driving Practices

AP (10/7) reports Kentucky is running Operation Crash Reduction from October 8 to 11. The campaign emphasizes “seat belt use to save lives.” The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet “is partnering with state and local law enforcement and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to support the initiative.” Officials cited findings that October was the likeliest month for fatal crashes between 2015 to 2019.

Are you looking to learn ways to incorporate a police chaplain at your agency? When an officer is in crisis, chaplains can apply their training in emotional and stress management, adversity, and spirituality to assist. A strong chaplaincy program can support a culture where officers feel comfortable seeking help and finding support. Chaplaincy programs can also serve as support systems for officers following critical incidents and other traumatic events on- or off-duty.

To learn more about how a police chaplain could benefit your officers, check out Providing Officers Support Through Police Chaplains. If you are interested in obtaining hard copies of this resource, email OSW@theiacp.org.

Additionally, if you or a chaplain from your department are interested in working with other chaplains to support police agencies, check out the Police Chaplain Section.

Security, Crime, and Drugs

Drugs Are Arriving On Cape Breton In Multiple Ways, Police Say

CBHA-FM Halifax, CAN (10/7) reports Cape Breton Regional Police “say cocaine is arriving on the island via several routes.” Const. John Campbell, who has spent four years working with the department’s street crime unit, said, “Like the movie Planes, Trains and Automobiles, you know, there’s multiple ways for it to get here because we’re an island. ... We’re seeing pure cocaine as it enters, as it’s imported onto the island, and then as it’s handed down to the different levels of trafficking, then it’s cut accordingly.”

Police In Brazil Find $3M In Nazi Memorabilia, Weapons

Reuters (10/7) reports, “Police in Rio de Janeiro said Wednesday they had found a haul of Nazi memorabilia and weapons worth an estimated $3.5 million at the home of a Brazilian man suspected of raping a minor.” Reuters adds, “Rio’s civil police said they found more than 1,000 items at the home of the 58-year-old unnamed suspect, including Nazi uniforms, periodicals, paintings, Nazi insignia, images of Adolf Hitler, flags and medals of the Third Reich. They also found guns and ammunition from the era. The haul was discovered after police went to the man’s home to serve an arrest warrant on suspicions he had raped a minor and abused other children in his condominium in the west of the city.”

Hong Kong Police Bust $26.9M Smuggling Ring

The AP (10/7) reports, “Hong Kong authorities on Thursday said they have made their largest smuggling bust, seizing goods including endangered species worth an estimated $26.9 million. The government said the smuggling ring operated using speedboats and that four trucks were also impounded in the raid.” The government “said a 34-year-old man was arrested in the operation that began in June and more details were set to be released. A statement said the customs department and the marine police small boat division descended on the smugglers who were operating in the city’s New Territories close to mainland China on Sept. 23. ‘This is the largest smuggling case among all forms of smuggling by air, sea and land detected by Customs on record in terms of the seizure value,’ the government said.”

Florida Could Follow Texas’ Lead On Studying “Magic Mushrooms” As Mental Health Treatment

USA Today (10/7) reports two proposed companion bills in the Florida legislature “would, if passed, direct the Florida Department of Health and the Board of Medicine to study the therapeutic efficacy of three ‘alternative therapies,’ MDMA, psilocybin (the substance found in ‘magic mushrooms’) and ketamine.” The Florida bills’ language “is identical to a bill passed in Texas earlier this year, said Rep. Michael Grieco, the House sponsor.” Grieco “said he ‘plagiarized’ the Texas bill, which is two pages, in the hopes that the Republicans who control the Florida Legislature will follow the lead of the GOP-led legislature in the Lone Star state.”

Technology

Recent Hacks Reveal Secrets That Raise Fears Of Collateral Damage

The Washington Post (10/7, Harwell) reports, “A chain of recent, devastating hacks is exposing some of the Internet’s most fiercely guarded secrets, stepping up a guerrilla struggle between tech firms and anonymous hackers and raising fears that everyday Internet users could get caught in the crossfire.” According to the Post, “Hackers this week dumped a colossal haul of data stolen from Twitch, the Amazon-owned streaming site, revealing what they said was not just the million-dollar payouts for its most popular video game streamers but the site’s entire source code – the DNA, written over a decade, central to keeping the company alive. That followed the hack by the group Anonymous that exposed the most crucial inner workings of Epik, an Internet services company popular with the far right, and triggered firings and other consequences for some of the company’s clients whose identities had previously been undisclosed.”

Reuters (10/7, Menn, Bing) reports from San Francisco, “The suspected Russian hackers who used SolarWinds and Microsoft software to burrow into U.S. federal agencies emerged with information about counter-intelligence investigations, policy on sanctioning Russian individuals and the country’s response to COVID-19, people involved in the investigation told Reuters.” The hacks “were widely publicized after their discovery late last year, and American officials have blamed Russia’s SVR foreign intelligence service, which denies the activity. But little has been disclosed about the spies’ aims and successes.” Reuters adds, “The reluctance of some publicly traded companies to explain their exposure has prompted a broad Securities and Exchange Commission inquiry. The campaign alarmed officials with its stealth and careful staging. The hackers burrowed into the code production process at SolarWinds, which makes widely used software for managing networks.”

Snapchat Launches New Tools To Stop Sale Of Counterfeit Pills On App

NBC News (10/7, Solon) reports, “Snapchat has developed new tools and educational content to crack down on the sale of deadly counterfeit pills on the messaging app.” The new “tools aim to warn users about the dangers of those pills in an effort to keep its community safe from the ‘devastating impacts of the fentanyl crisis.’” It also said that “it has improved the automated systems it uses to detect the sale of illegal drugs on the app, hired more people to respond to law enforcement requests for data during criminal investigations and developed an in-app education portal called Heads Up focused on the dangers of fentanyl and counterfeit pills.”

The Verge (10/7, Solon) reports, “When users search for drug-related keywords like ‘fentanyl,’ Snap says it will direct them to a new educational portal called Heads Up,” and is “also ramping up actions against drug dealers on its platform, including improved in-app reporting tools and proactive detection.”

Axios (10/7, Fischer) also reports on the new tools.

And when we're talking about violent crime we're not just talking about homicides,' Davis said. 'We can put resources in place to educate, we can put resources in place to be more visible so that other violent crimes like robberies, aggravated assaults and crimes that are associated with gang violence, we can curtail that, and that is what we will be targeting.'" The MCA adds, "Part of the effort will include working with the district attorney general's office to focus on the 20% of people who commit 80% of crimes, Davis said."

Austin Moves Ahead With Sixth Street Safety Program

The Austin (TX) American Statesman (10/7, Jankowski, Subscription Publication) reports Austin is "moving on plans to improve safety on Sixth Street – an initiative that came about after a June mass shooting in the downtown bar district, according to a memo from Austin Police Department Chief Joseph Chacon." A coalition of "public safety agencies and city of Austin departments have started work to improve lighting, tamp down underage drinking and create a standing EMS presence in the area on weekends, Chacon said in a memo to the City Council."

New York Governor Signs Bill To Combat Opioid Crisis, Decriminalizes Public Use, Sale Of Needles, Syringes

The New York Post (10/7, Rosner) reports, "Gov. Kathy Hochul signed a package of bills into law Thursday aimed at combating the opioid crisis – including one bill that decriminalizes the public possession and sale of hypodermic needles and syringes.” The new regulation, which is “effective immediately – eliminates a section of the state’s penal code that says possessing a needle or syringe in public is a class-A misdemeanor.”

Canadian Officers To Conduct Thanksgiving Weekend Traffic Blitz Focusing On Impaired Driving

CHWI-TV Windsor, CAN (10/7) reports Essex County OPP “will be taking part in a traffic safety blitz over the Thanksgiving weekend with a focus on impaired driving, seatbelt use and other offences.” Officers “will be participating in ‘Operation Impact’ starting Friday where they will be actively patrolling local roadways in hopes to reduce collisions as a result of speeding, lack of seatbelts or impaired driving.”

New Jersey Blocks Using Arrests, Citations As Markers For Promotion

The AP (10/7) reports from Trenton, New Jersey, “New Jersey police departments cannot consider the number of arrests made or citations handed out as criteria of an officer’s performance for promotion under a new law signed Thursday.” New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy “signed the legislation more than three months after lawmakers sent it to his desk.” According to the AP, “The measure’s sponsors said it was necessary because ‘for too long the way that perceived or real efforts by some officers to achieve “quotas” in order to attain higher evaluations ... can have a detrimental effect on our communities,’” state Sen. Shirley Turner said in a statement. New Jersey law “already prohibited police from using quotas for arrests and citations, though agencies could consider arrest and citation data as part of an overall performance evaluation.”

Kentucky Campaign Encourages Safe Driving Practices

AP (10/7) reports Kentucky is running Operation Crash Reduction from October 8 to 11. The campaign emphasizes “seat belt use to save lives.” The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet “is partnering with state and local law enforcement and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to support the initiative.” Officials cited findings that October was the likeliest month for fatal crashes between 2015 to 2019.

Are you looking to learn ways to incorporate a police chaplain at your agency? When an officer is in crisis, chaplains can apply their training in emotional and stress management, adversity, and spirituality to assist. A strong chaplaincy program can support a culture where officers feel comfortable seeking help and finding support. Chaplaincy programs can also serve as support systems for officers following critical incidents and other traumatic events on- or off-duty.

To learn more about how a police chaplain could benefit your officers, check out Providing Officers Support Through Police Chaplains. If you are interested in obtaining hard copies of this resource, email OSW@theiacp.org.

Additionally, if you or a chaplain from your department are interested in working with other chaplains to support police agencies, check out the Police Chaplain Section.

Drugs Are Arriving On Cape Breton In Multiple Ways, Police Say

CBHA-FM Halifax, CAN (10/7) reports Cape Breton Regional Police “say cocaine is arriving on the island via several routes.” Const. John Campbell, who has spent four years working with the department’s street crime unit, said, “Like the movie Planes, Trains and Automobiles, you know, there’s multiple ways for it to get here because we’re an island. ... We’re seeing pure cocaine as it enters, as it’s imported onto the island, and then as it’s handed down to the different levels of trafficking, then it’s cut accordingly.”

Police In Brazil Find $3M In Nazi Memorabilia, Weapons

Reuters (10/7) reports, “Police in Rio de Janeiro said Wednesday they had found a haul of Nazi memorabilia and weapons worth an estimated $3.5 million at the home of a Brazilian man suspected of raping a minor.” Reuters adds, “Rio’s civil police said they found more than 1,000 items at the home of the 58-year-old unnamed suspect, including Nazi uniforms, periodicals, paintings, Nazi insignia, images of Adolf Hitler, flags and medals of the Third Reich. They also found guns and ammunition from the era. The haul was discovered after police went to the man’s home to serve an arrest warrant on suspicions he had raped a minor and abused other children in his condominium in the west of the city.”

Hong Kong Police Bust $26.9M Smuggling Ring

The AP (10/7) reports, “Hong Kong authorities on Thursday said they have made their largest smuggling bust, seizing goods including endangered species worth an estimated $26.9 million. The government said the smuggling ring operated using speedboats and that four trucks were also impounded in the raid.” The government “said a 34-year-old man was arrested in the operation that began in June and more details were set to be released. A statement said the customs department and the marine police small boat division descended on the smugglers who were operating in the city’s New Territories close to mainland China on Sept. 23. ‘This is the largest smuggling case among all forms of smuggling by air, sea and land detected by Customs on record in terms of the seizure value,’ the government said.”

Florida Could Follow Texas’ Lead On Studying “Magic Mushrooms” As Mental Health Treatment

USA Today (10/7) reports two proposed companion bills in the Florida legislature “would, if passed, direct the Florida Department of Health and the Board of Medicine to study the therapeutic efficacy of three ‘alternative therapies,’ MDMA, psilocybin (the substance found in ‘magic mushrooms’) and ketamine.” The Florida bills’ language “is identical to a bill passed in Texas earlier this year, said Rep. Michael Grieco, the House sponsor.” Grieco “said he ‘plagiarized’ the Texas bill, which is two pages, in the hopes that the Republicans who control the Florida Legislature will follow the lead of the GOP-led legislature in the Lone Star state.”

Recent Hacks Reveal Secrets That Raise Fears Of Collateral Damage

The Washington Post (10/7, Harwell) reports, “A chain of recent, devastating hacks is exposing some of the Internet’s most fiercely guarded secrets, stepping up a guerrilla struggle between tech firms and anonymous hackers and raising fears that everyday Internet users could get caught in the crossfire.” According to the Post, “Hackers this week dumped a colossal haul of data stolen from Twitch, the Amazon-owned streaming site, revealing what they said was not just the million-dollar payouts for its most popular video game streamers but the site’s entire source code – the DNA, written over a decade, central to keeping the company alive. That followed the hack by the group Anonymous that exposed the most crucial inner workings of Epik, an Internet services company popular with the far right, and triggered firings and other consequences for some of the company’s clients whose identities had previously been undisclosed.”

Reuters (10/7, Menn, Bing) reports from San Francisco, “The suspected Russian hackers who used SolarWinds and Microsoft software to burrow into U.S. federal agencies emerged with information about counter-intelligence investigations, policy on sanctioning Russian individuals and the country’s response to COVID-19, people involved in the investigation told Reuters.” The hacks “were widely publicized after their discovery late last year, and American officials have blamed Russia’s SVR foreign intelligence service, which denies the activity. But little has been disclosed about the spies’ aims and successes.” Reuters adds, “The reluctance of some publicly traded companies to explain their exposure has prompted a broad Securities and Exchange Commission inquiry. The campaign alarmed officials with its stealth and careful staging. The hackers burrowed into the code production process at SolarWinds, which makes widely used software for managing networks.”

Snapchat Launches New Tools To Stop Sale Of Counterfeit Pills On App

NBC News (10/7, Solon) reports, “Snapchat has developed new tools and educational content to crack down on the sale of deadly counterfeit pills on the messaging app.” The new “tools aim to warn users about the dangers of those pills in an effort to keep its community safe from the ‘devastating impacts of the fentanyl crisis.’” It also said that “it has improved the automated systems it uses to detect the sale of illegal drugs on the app, hired more people to respond to law enforcement requests for data during criminal investigations and developed an in-app education portal called Heads Up focused on the dangers of fentanyl and counterfeit pills.”

The Verge (10/7, Solon) reports, “When users search for drug-related keywords like ‘fentanyl,’ Snap says it will direct them to a new educational portal called Heads Up,” and is “also ramping up actions against drug dealers on its platform, including improved in-app reporting tools and proactive detection.”

Axios (10/7, Fischer) also reports on the new tools.

Memphis Police Aim To Cut Crime By 5%

The Memphis (TN) Commercial Appeal (10/7, Burgess) reports, "Next year, the Memphis Police Department will try to reduce crime by 5%, Memphis Police Chief C.J. Davis told members of the Frayser Exchange Thursday. 'Now that may not sound like a lot, but 5% is a lot when in 2020 we had 324 homicides alone. And when we're talking about violent crime we're not just talking about homicides,' Davis said. 'We can put resources in place to educate, we can put resources in place to be more visible so that other violent crimes like robberies, aggravated assaults and crimes that are associated with gang violence, we can curtail that, and that is what we will be targeting.'" The MCA adds, "Part of the effort will include working with the district attorney general's office to focus on the 20% of people who commit 80% of crimes, Davis said."

Chiefs meet in Wood River to discuss recruitment, legislation

House Republican Leader Jim Durkin (center) and several other Republican House members met Wednesday, October 6, 2021, at the Wood River Police Department to hear the concerns of about 30 chiefs and sheriffs.

One of the big topics was the increasing challenges agencies are facing in recruiting a high-quality pool of applicants when they have openings. ILACP Executive Director Ed Wojcicki also attended and mentioned ILACP's current legislative priorities – another trailer bill to clean up more of the SAFE-T Act and concerns about what the Qualified Immunity Task Force might do. The host chief, Brad Wells from Wood River PD, is in the upper right corner of the photo.

Save the Date: Criminal Justice Career Day

University of Wisconsin Platteville will host its Criminal Justice Career Day on March 8, 2022. This is a great opportunity to meet and recruit from nearly 800 criminal justice majors on campus.

Please save the date and plan to come and share what a career in law enforcement in Illinois can offer. More details will be sent via email - send your information to cjcareerday@uwplatt.edu to receive updates.

Help former Crestwood chief's family in need

Former Crestwood Chief Tim Sulikowski's wife has been dealing with escalating medical issues since August and has been at Northwestern Hospital, in Chicago, since Sept. 9. She is currently on a ventilator and is expected to need at least one additional surgery related to her medical issues. Tim has exhausted his benefit time and will begin unpaid leave this week. The family is also responsible for their high insurance deductible and could use some support.

Chiefs meet in Wood River to discuss recruitment, legislation

House Republican Leader Jim Durkin (center) and several other Republican House members met Wednesday, October 6, 2021, at the Wood River Police Department to hear the concerns of about 30 chiefs and sheriffs.

One of the big topics was the increasing challenges agencies are facing in recruiting a high-quality pool of applicants when they have openings. ILACP Executive Director Ed Wojcicki also attended and mentioned ILACP's current legislative priorities – another trailer bill to clean up more of the SAFE-T Act and concerns about what the Qualified Immunity Task Force might do. The host chief, Brad Wells from Wood River PD, is in the upper right corner of the photo.

Massachusetts Superior Court Judge Rules Drug Defendants Seeking To Dismiss Convictions Tied To State Lab Must Show That Evidence In Their Case Was Tainted

The AP (10/6, Mulvihill) reports on Wednesday, Massachusetts Superior Court Judge Michael A. Ricciuti ruled that “drug defendants whose cases have not yet been dismissed because of rampant misconduct at a Boston lab are not entitled to new trials unless they can prove that evidence specific to their cases was tainted.” The AP adds that “tens of thousands of convictions have already been tossed because of tampering at the state drug testing lab,” and “hundreds of thousands of other defendants could still challenge their convictions.”

Missouri Supreme Court Weighs Taxation-By-Citation Law

The AP (10/6, Ballentine) reports, “Missouri’s Supreme Court on Wednesday once again weighed the constitutionality of a law against taxation-by-citation, one of few measures passed by state lawmakers in response to massive protests against police violence in Ferguson.” The court “heard arguments in the case over a 2015 law limiting how much revenue cities can generate from traffic fines and other tickets. The law cracked down harder on Ferguson and other St. Louis County municipalities, raising questions about whether the law unconstitutionally targeted those cities without reason,” but “Solicitor General John Sauer told judges Wednesday that ‘incredibly aggressive’ and ‘inequitable’ revenue-generating practices are more prevalent and pressing in St. Louis County, justifying the state’s tougher rules for the area.”

Laurel, Mississippi Police Host “Coffee With A Cop” As Community Policing Effort

The Laurel (MS) Leader Call (10/6, Bonelli) reports, "For the past 20 years, the Laurel Police Department has practiced community policing, getting out with residents and business owners to develop relationships and give back." The Leader Call adds, "Community outreach is an important part of the department's role to get officers out there so people can know who they are and officers can make important connections, Chief Tommy Cox said. 'Ninety-nine percent of police work is negative, and this just allows us to be a positive presence in the community,' Cox said. The department hosts events such as Coffee with a Cop so that community members can sit down and talk to local law enforcement and find out about the person behind the badge. The monthly event is at different local establishments to provide opportunities for people from all areas of the community to sit down and get to know officers."

Police In Hartford, Connecticut Use Drones To Track Stolen Vehicles, Search For Missing People

The Hartford (CT) Courant (10/6, Lurye) reports, "Hartford police have begun using drones to track four-wheelers, dirt bikes and stolen cars, and assist with other situations like missing person's cases and crowd control for large events." According to the Courant, "The new, grant-funded drone program officially began in August when officers used one of the devices to quickly sweep Keney Park for a missing 8-year-old, a job that would otherwise have taken 20 officers, Police Chief Jason Thody said during a news conference Wednesday. In a matter of minutes, drone footage covered the entire park, confirming there was no sign of the child, who was soon located elsewhere. 'We can cover so much area with a drone that would take a really long time with cops on foot, especially at night – putting cops in areas with flashlights out in the woods,' said Sgt. Chris Mastroianni, who leads the department's drone program. 'A drone can really take the place of that and do it really quickly and efficiently.'"

Seattle City Council Directs Police Not To Arrest People For Psilocybin, Similar Drugs

The Hill (10/6, Prieb) reports, "The Seattle City Council unanimously approved a resolution Monday to decriminalize psilocybin and a number of other psychedelic substances." Under the resolution, "Seattle's police will consider it among its lowest priorities to arrest anyone for the use of entheogens." Psilocybin, adds The Hill, "is categorized by the federal government as a Schedule 1 drug, the most restrictive group."

We need both drivers and passengers to wear seat belts at all times.’ Despite crashes in Arizona being down nearly 24% with 2020 having 98,778 crashes compared to 130,366 in 2019, 1,057 people were killed in traffic collisions in 2020 compared to 980 in 2019.”

British Columbia Sees Large Increase In Claims For Psychological Injuries Across Emergency Response Occupations

The Vancouver (CAN) Sun (10/6) reports, “Claims reported for psychological injuries have risen dramatically in recent years across many of B.C.’s emergency response occupations,” and “labour representatives and experts say that while some of the increases seem dramatic, the trend reflects more front-line workers feeling comfortable seeking help.” Ralph Kaisers, president of the B.C. Police Association, said the increase in claims may seem “alarming” yet “it also means more front-line workers are seeking, and in many cases accessing, the help they need.” He added, “I think we’re slowly getting to a place where when people need help, they’re actually asking for help.”

Lawmakers Call For Standalone Congressional Cybersecurity Panels

The Hill (10/6) reports bipartisan lawmakers on Wednesday “argued for the need to establish standalone cybersecurity committees in the House and Senate to address mounting threats and streamline an increasingly bogged down process to approve legislation.” During a panel at the Aspen Institute’s Cyber Summit on Wednesday, Sen. Angus King (I-ME) said, “No committee wants to give up an ounce of its jurisdiction, and cyber is scattered all over the Congress.” King also “noted that in order to get 25 cyber-related amendments into last year’s National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA), clearances from 180 committees, subcommittees and members had to first be obtained.” House Homeland Security Committee ranking member John Katko (R-NY) and Rep. Yvette Clarke (D-NY), chair of the committee’s cybersecurity subcommittee, “appeared on the same panel as King Wednesday, agreeing with the need to streamline jurisdiction in the face of mounting threats.”

Quebec Police Arrest Two Men, Seize Nearly 24,000 Methamphetamine Tablets

The Ottawa (CAN) Citizen (10/6, Gillis) reports, “Quebec provincial police said officers made two arrests as they seized four loaded firearms, one of them a handgun, and nearly 24,000 methamphetamine tablets in a raid in Gracefield on Wednesday.” Two men “were arrested at the home on Chemin du Lac des Iles [and] were expected to appear in court in Gatineau on Wednesday.”

Arizona Sees Deadliest Traffic Crash Year Since 2007

The Arizona Republic (10/6, Vandell) reports, “Despite seeing far fewer crashes in a year when many had to stay home, 2020 had the highest number of traffic fatalities since 2007, according to the Arizona Department of Transportation’s latest crash report.” ADOT Director John Halikowski “wrote in a posting on the agency’s website that improper driver behavior played a large role in fatal collisions. ‘According to the report, leading factors in traffic fatalities include speeding, impairment, reckless driving and not wearing a seatbelt,’ Halikowski wrote. ‘We need drivers to stop speeding and make safe lane changes. We need both drivers and passengers to wear seat belts at all times.’ Despite crashes in Arizona being down nearly 24% with 2020 having 98,778 crashes compared to 130,366 in 2019, 1,057 people were killed in traffic collisions in 2020 compared to 980 in 2019.”

British Columbia Sees Large Increase In Claims For Psychological Injuries Across Emergency Response Occupations

The Vancouver (CAN) Sun (10/6) reports, “Claims reported for psychological injuries have risen dramatically in recent years across many of B.C.’s emergency response occupations,” and “labour representatives and experts say that while some of the increases seem dramatic, the trend reflects more front-line workers feeling comfortable seeking help.” Ralph Kaisers, president of the B.C. Police Association, said the increase in claims may seem “alarming” yet “it also means more front-line workers are seeking, and in many cases accessing, the help they need.” He added, “I think we’re slowly getting to a place where when people need help, they’re actually asking for help.”

Lawmakers Call For Standalone Congressional Cybersecurity Panels

The Hill (10/6) reports bipartisan lawmakers on Wednesday “argued for the need to establish standalone cybersecurity committees in the House and Senate to address mounting threats and streamline an increasingly bogged down process to approve legislation.” During a panel at the Aspen Institute’s Cyber Summit on Wednesday, Sen. Angus King (I-ME) said, “No committee wants to give up an ounce of its jurisdiction, and cyber is scattered all over the Congress.” King also “noted that in order to get 25 cyber-related amendments into last year’s National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA), clearances from 180 committees, subcommittees and members had to first be obtained.” House Homeland Security Committee ranking member John Katko (R-NY) and Rep. Yvette Clarke (D-NY), chair of the committee’s cybersecurity subcommittee, “appeared on the same panel as King Wednesday, agreeing with the need to streamline jurisdiction in the face of mounting threats.”

Massachusetts Superior Court Judge Rules Drug Defendants Seeking To Dismiss Convictions Tied To State Lab Must Show That Evidence In Their Case Was Tainted

The AP (10/6, Mulvihill) reports on Wednesday, Massachusetts Superior Court Judge Michael A. Ricciuti ruled that “drug defendants whose cases have not yet been dismissed because of rampant misconduct at a Boston lab are not entitled to new trials unless they can prove that evidence specific to their cases was tainted.” The AP adds that “tens of thousands of convictions have already been tossed because of tampering at the state drug testing lab,” and “hundreds of thousands of other defendants could still challenge their convictions.”

Missouri Supreme Court Weighs Taxation-By-Citation Law

The AP (10/6, Ballentine) reports, “Missouri’s Supreme Court on Wednesday once again weighed the constitutionality of a law against taxation-by-citation, one of few measures passed by state lawmakers in response to massive protests against police violence in Ferguson.” The court “heard arguments in the case over a 2015 law limiting how much revenue cities can generate from traffic fines and other tickets. The law cracked down harder on Ferguson and other St. Louis County municipalities, raising questions about whether the law unconstitutionally targeted those cities without reason,” but “Solicitor General John Sauer told judges Wednesday that ‘incredibly aggressive’ and ‘inequitable’ revenue-generating practices are more prevalent and pressing in St. Louis County, justifying the state’s tougher rules for the area.”

Laurel, Mississippi Police Host “Coffee With A Cop” As Community Policing Effort

The Laurel (MS) Leader Call (10/6, Bonelli) reports, “For the past 20 years, the Laurel Police Department has practiced community policing, getting out with residents and business owners to develop relationships and give back.” The Leader Call adds, “Community outreach is an important part of the department’s role to get officers out there so people can know who they are and officers can make important connections, Chief Tommy Cox said. ‘Ninety-nine percent of police work is negative, and this just allows us to be a positive presence in the community,’ Cox said. The department hosts events such as Coffee with a Cop so that community members can sit down and talk to local law enforcement and find out about the person behind the badge. The monthly event is at different local establishments to provide opportunities for people from all areas of the community to sit down and get to know officers.”

Police In Hartford, Connecticut Use Drones To Track Stolen Vehicles, Search For Missing People

The Hartford (CT) Courant (10/6, Lurye) reports, “Hartford police have begun using drones to track four-wheelers, dirt bikes and stolen cars, and assist with other situations like missing person’s cases and crowd control for large events.” According to the Courant, “The new, grant-funded drone program officially began in August when officers used one of the devices to quickly sweep Keney Park for a missing 8-year-old, a job that would otherwise have taken 20 officers, Police Chief Jason Thody said during a news conference Wednesday. In a matter of minutes, drone footage covered the entire park, confirming there was no sign of the child, who was soon located elsewhere. ‘We can cover so much area with a drone that would take a really long time with cops on foot, especially at night – putting cops in areas with flashlights out in the woods,’ said Sgt. Chris Mastroianni, who leads the department’s drone program. ‘A drone can really take the place of that and do it really quickly and efficiently.’”

Seattle City Council Directs Police Not To Arrest People For Psilocybin, Similar Drugs

The Hill (10/6, Prieb) reports, “The Seattle City Council unanimously approved a resolution Monday to decriminalize psilocybin and a number of other psychedelic substances.” Under the resolution, “Seattle’s police will consider it among its lowest priorities to arrest anyone for the use of entheogens.” Psilocybin, adds The Hill, “is categorized by the federal government as a Schedule 1 drug, the most restrictive group.”

A message from an IACP partner:

A new global research study from Motorola Solutions, conducted by Goldsmiths, University of London, reveals the pandemic accelerated public acceptance of safety technology and its adoption by public safety agencies. Based on a survey of 12,000 citizens and interviews with 50+ public safety experts, it is an essential resource for understanding how to assess risk, integrate the right technologies, and secure community support. Twenty-Six Israelis Arrested As Part Of FBI-Israel Police Fraud Investigation

The Jerusalem Post (ISR) (10/6) reports that 26 Israelis were arrested on “suspicion of defrauding dozens of victims around the world as part of a joint investigation between the FBI and Israel Police on Tuesday.” The Israelis are suspected of “being part of a scheme disguised as cryptocurrency deals that defrauded millions of shekels from dozens of foreign citizens.” The suspects were arrested “as local authorities in a number of other countries conducted parallel arrest operations against the fraud network.”

Armed Men Kill 18 People In Northwest Nigeria

Reuters (10/6) reports, “Armed men killed at least 18 people and set ablaze cars and shops in Nigeria’s Zamfara state, where the government has imposed a telecoms blackout as part of a security operation against groups of kidnappers, two residents said on Wednesday.” Northwest Nigeria “has been engulfed in crisis” for nearly a year, “when groups of armed men began a spate of mass abductions from schools and other violent attacks on villages and on people travelling by road.” Two residents “said the attack on Kuryan Madaro village in Zamfara happened around 9 p.m. on Tuesday when a dozens of bandits rode into the village on motor-bikes.”

Joe/Kent,

This line item was purposefully cut from the budget, as offered by PD in the budget process (see attached spreadsheet). This seems like something they committed to skipping.

Playing devil's advocate: "I cut our community survey. Can I now spend that money?" (you see where this could go from outside perspective)

If this is done deal, no skin off my back- it's a relatively small expense. But this could get out of hand in the future. If departments are going to propose cuts to their budget, they need to stick to them throughout the year. Just something to be mindful of during next year's budget process with departments.

Hadley,

Please be advised that Police will be using the following accounts to cover the ITOA Conference ($2,315.00) that was not budgeted for in FY22. It was cut out of the budget last year but as this is an annual conference they attend, Police will budget accordingly in FY23.

12310-540115 - $500.00

Hi Laura,

Please see the attached invoice for the ITOA Conference. Please submit for PO.

I spoke to Susan about this last week and the ITOA Conference is normally taken from 12310-540115-80, but that account was left zero by Penze.

We will cover this year from the following accounts and reload that line for next year. Call me if you any questions.

Thanks.

Illinois' Voice of Professional Law Enforcement

Special Alert | October 6, 2021 Qualified Immunity Task Force plans second meeting this week; here's how to listen in

The state's Qualified Immunity Task Force, formally known as the Task Force on Constitutional Rights and Remedies, will have its second meeting Thursday, Oct. 7, from 12 noon to 2 p.m. via Zoom.

Several witnesses will testify. A report on the first meeting, an organizational meeting on Sept. 23, is below. The task force was established by the 2021 SAFE-T Act, which went into effect July 1. The task force is supposed to complete its report on qualified immunity and other constitutional remedies by Oct. 31, 2021.

The Illinois Chiefs' position is to oppose any diminishment of qualified immunity for police officers. The Board of Officers is following the work of the task force closely and having regular conversations about it. To access the agenda and the link to listen to the October 7 meeting, click here: <http://www.icjia.state.il.us/news/illinois-constitutional-rights-and-remedies-task-force-meeting-october-7-2021>

ILACP has a seat on this task force. We are represented by former Highland Chief and current Highland City Manager Chris Conrad, who is also an attorney. Anyone with comments or questions about the process should contact Executive Director Ed Wojcicki at ed@ilchiefs.org. We realize this is a major, major issue for our members.

REPORT FROM FIRST MEETING

From Chris Conrad, Highland, ILACP Representative to the Task Force

The Task Force on Constitutional Rights and Remedies conducted its first meeting on Sept. 23, 2021. This meeting was conducted virtually. There were some administrative missteps with the short timeline to conduct the meeting, but we did confirm the meetings are subject to the Open Meetings Act, so all future meetings public will be able to attend or monitor.

The agenda was short. The Chairmen (Rep. Justin Slaughter and Sen. Elgie Sims) read the statute and explained the duties of the Task Force. Each member went around the room introducing themselves and their backgrounds and who they were representing. After explaining my background, I explained that I felt it was my job as representing LE to try and make sure there are no unintended consequences that are not discussed before the task force issues its report.

I shared with the group the Taylor v. City of Milford case from the 7th Circuit decided in August. I shared the case for two reasons. First, it provides an excellent analysis, history and public policy reasoning behind QI, and is instructive on how judges in the 7th Circuit should treat and use QI. The case also overturned a district court order for pre-trial QI, so it was also an excellent example that the current legal framework is working at the federal level, suggesting that perhaps similar treatment at the state level would be prudent.

The representative from the Illinois Trial Lawyers Association, Mr. Larry Rogers Jr., later provided to the group a district court decision out of Mississippi where the DC judge made some rather (in my opinion) uneducated comments about the application of QI.

At the next meeting on Oct. 7. we are to hear from subject matter experts on QI. I submitted Jack Ryan from LLRMI as an expert on police liability. If the group has any additional experts they would like me to recommend, please forward me the information.

We are also to submit any potential treatises, articles, or other information we think would be beneficial to the group as well. Again, if there is anything the Chiefs would like submitted, please get to me. Vice President Dan Ryan, chief in Leland Grove, submitted a great article.

Rep. Slaughter did mention a report issued by a similar task force in New Mexico that he thought we should try and emulate. I have located the new law for New Mexico but have not been able to locate the report he mentioned. If anyone knows of the report he is referencing and can supply me with the report, that would be fantastic.

Future meeting dates:

- October 7, Noon-2:00 p.m.
- October 21, 3-5 p.m.
- October 25, 1-3 p.m.

Respectfully submitted,

Christopher Conrad

DHS Secretary: Domestic Terrorism Is DHS' Most Significant Challenge

In an extensive interview with USA Today (10/5, DeIGuzzi), Homeland Security Secretary Mayorkas said the “biggest” challenge facing DHS “is domestic violent extremism: That is the most significant terrorist-related threat to the homeland.” The Secretary also pointed to “challenges” at the Southern Border, “extreme weather events,” and “cybersecurity.” USA Today also features video from the interview on its website. In the footage, Mayorkas discussed how he views DHS as a “department of partnerships.” The Secretary said, “That is really the ethic and the culture I am trying to build not only, for example, in the area of domestic violent extremism where we partner with communities and equip and empower them to address the threat within their own neighborhoods, but also to address the great divide that defines so much of the challenges that we’re confronting.”

UK Plans To Increase Penalties For Disruptive Protesters After Climate Activists Block Roads

The AP (10/5, Lawless) reports the British government “said Tuesday it will bring in tough new laws against disruptive protesters, after environmental campaigners blocked roads, highways and bridges to highlight climate change.” Home Secretary Priti Patel “said the government would ‘close down the legal loopholes’ used by protesters, whom she labeled ‘criminals.’” Patel also “said she would increase maximum penalties for disrupting a motorway, create powers to stop some protesters traveling around the country and create a new offense of ‘interference with key infrastructures’ such as roads, railways and the press.”

Researchers Say Portland, Oregon Should Expand Non-Police Response Unit

The AP (10/5, Cline) reports from Portland, Oregon, “After receiving positive reviews, experts say a non-police first-response unit in Portland, Oregon, has the potential to be a ‘citywide solution’ for an alternative to non-emergency calls regarding people experiencing a mental health crisis or homelessness.” According to the AP, on Tuesday “during a City Council work session, researchers suggested the Portland Street Response team pilot program should be expanded, following a Portland State University study that evaluated the program’s first six months. ‘Our first recommendation is to commit the necessary resources toward the expansion of Portland Street Response to eventually make its services available throughout the city and during all hours of the day,’ researchers wrote in the report.”

California Ends Mandatory Minimum Drug Sentencing

The AP (10/5, Thompson) reports that California Gov. Gavin Newsom “ended mandatory minimum sentences for nonviolent drug crimes in the nation’s most populous state on Tuesday, giving judges more discretion to impose alternative sentences.” According to the AP, the mandatory sentencing law Newsom signed on Tuesday “grew out of what Democratic Sen. Scott Wiener of San Francisco called a failed war on drugs that disproportionately incarcerated people who are Black or Latino. Wiener said the bill Newsom signed is important particularly for those suffering from drug addiction,” but “the California Association of Highway Patrolmen said the penalties ‘work as a deterrent or a reason for individuals to get the treatment they need to turn their lives around,’” and it “predicted that allowing probation will increase the selling and use of drugs and other crimes.”

Acts of mass violence pose unique challenges for law enforcement leaders. Responding to these incidents while operating under extreme pressure and public scrutiny may be one of the most difficult experiences of your career.

The IACP’s Mass Violence Advisory Initiative is here to provide assistance if an incident occurs in your jurisdiction. Through the Mass Violence Peer to Peer Advisory Team, experienced law enforcement leaders and public information officers who have responded to similar incidents in the past will deploy to provide immediate and ongoing guidance at no cost to the community.

US Weapons Being Sold In Afghan Gun Shops And Smuggled Into Pakistan

The New York Times (10/5, Khapalwak, Zucchini) reports that “with the Taliban in power, more American weapons and military accessories are now being openly sold in shops by Afghan gun dealers who paid government soldiers and Taliban fighters for guns, ammunition and other” equipment. According to “three weapons dealers in Kandahar” who gave interviews to the Times, “dozens of Afghans have set up weapons shops in Afghanistan’s south, selling American-made pistols, rifles, grenades, binoculars and night-vision goggles.” The Times explains, “During the insurgency, the Taliban eagerly sought out American-supplied weapons and gear. But now much of that weaponry is being sold to Afghan entrepreneurs because Taliban demand has eased with the end of combat, the gun merchants said. They say that many gun dealers have smuggled the weapons to Pakistan, where demand for American-made weapons is strong.”

DEA, Oklahoma Narcotics Bureau Nab California Drug Kingpin

MyParisTexas.com (10/5) reports that the Oklahoma Bureau of Narcotics announced the arrest of Luis Alfredo Jacobo, an alleged California Kingpin, and charged him “with directing drug conspiracies that brought bulk quantities of methamphetamine into Oklahoma and Missouri.” According to a statement from the Department of Justice, Jacobo’s criminal enterprise brought approximately 2,000 pounds of methamphetamine into Oklahoma and Missouri.

“‘Methamphetamine continues to be one of the top drug threats in Oklahoma,’ said Eduardo Chavez, Special Agent in Charge of the DEA Dallas Field Division, which oversees operations in Oklahoma” and is participating in the investigation of the case. Chavez continued, “Simply put, methamphetamine destroys families across the state and within Oklahoma’s Indian Country. Our communities have felt the horrible effects of drug abuse and addiction. DEA Oklahoma is committed to make our communities safer and hold those accountable who push these deadly substances across our great nation.”

Twenty Charged, Drugs Seized In Tasmania Anti-Gang Operation

The Australian Broadcasting Corporation (10/6, McIntyre) reports, “An alleged leader of an organised crime group tried to flush thousands of dollars in cash down a toilet, police say, as they make 20 arrests during an anti-gang bust in northern Tasmania. In addition to the arrests, $143,000 in cash as well as guns and illicit drugs have been seized during the major five-week crackdown on gangs, authorities have said.” According to the Australian Broadcasting Corporation, the “joint operation by Tasmania Police and the Australian Federal Police (AFP) National Anti-Gangs squad targeted criminal networks in Launceston. ‘Anyone involved in organised crime in Tasmania should be warned that they’re in our sights,’ sergeant Nick Gibson from AFP National Anti-Gangs squad said.”

In Midst Of Canada’s Opioid Crisis, Cocaine Threat Emerges On Island In Nova Scotia

CBC News (CAN) (10/5, Moore) reports, “While Canada fights a deadly opioid crisis that public health officials say has only worsened during the COVID-19 pandemic,” law enforcement workers are very concerned about a cocaine threat on Cape Breton Island in the Canadian province of Nova Scotia. Cocaine “has been on the island for decades, but it has edged out other illegal and illicit substances in the past year and a half to become one of the most popular drugs in Cape Breton, leading to” fatal overdoses and other substance use disorder-related problems. Giulia Di Giorgio, who chairs a harm reduction advocacy group in Cape Breton, said some cocaine on the island has tested positive for the powerful synthetic opioid fentanyl, “which is really scary.”

Study Shows Effects Of COVID Pandemic On Police Departments

The Center Square (10/5, Bessler) reports, “A study shows that the COVID-19 pandemic has affected police departments around Illinois and will continue to for years to come.” According to the Center Square, the Western Illinois University Law Enforcement and Justice Administration “surveyed more than 200 Illinois police departments last year. After getting results from 73 out of 200 departments, the study’s researchers replicated the same study in Missouri and Ohio and received a total of 200 responses. ‘The survey results indicate that COVID-19 has significantly affected both the internal and external operations of these states’ police departments,’ LEJA Professor Niyazi Ekici said. ‘These ramifications are particularly profound as they relate to safety measures and risk mitigation strategies implemented to protect police personnel and the public they serve.’”

US Attorney General Directs Authorities To Address School Board Threats

The AP (10/5, Fields) reports Attorney General Garland on Monday “directed federal authorities to hold strategy sessions in the next 30 days with law enforcement to address the increasing threats targeting school board members, teachers and other employees in the nation’s public schools.” In a memorandum, Garland said there has been “a disturbing spike in harassment, intimidation, and threats of violence against school administrators, board members, teachers, and staff who participate in the vital work of running our nation’s public schools.” To address the issue, “Garland said the FBI would work with US attorneys and federal, state, local, territorial and tribal authorities in each district to develop strategies against the threats.” He said, “While spirited debate about policy matters is protected under our Constitution, that protection does not extend to threats of violence or efforts to intimidate individuals based on their views.”

US Supreme Court Rejects “Qualified Immunity” Suit Over Fatal Police Shooting

The Hill (10/4, Kruzell, Schnell) reports that the Supreme Court on Monday “declined to hear a dispute over the fatal police shooting of a schizophrenic man in a case that raised questions about legal barriers to suing government workers for alleged wrongdoing.” A lower federal appeals court last year decided that the officer was “entitled to qualified immunity, a controversial legal doctrine that erects a high bar a plaintiff must clear in order to successfully sue government workers for alleged misconduct while on the job.” The court rebuffed an appeal over a dissent from Justice Sonia Sotomayor.

Haiti Asks UN Security Council To Aid Its Fight Against Gang Violence

The AP (10/4, Peltz) reports Haiti’s top diplomat “implored the UN Security Council on Monday for help tackling gang violence and crime, saying the existing UN political mission needs to pivot toward strengthening security and law enforcement institutions in the crisis-wracked country.”

Foreign Minister Claude Joseph told the council, “It’s vital to take account of the new realities that the country is facing and that the mandate is adjusted accordingly.” Haiti’s National Police have been “working to follow recommendations that UN policing experts made this summer, the UN’s Haiti envoy, Helen La Lime, told the council.” But she said the force is “over-stretched and under-resourced.”

Denver, Colorado Police Bring Back Free Self-Defense Classes For Women

The Denver Gazette (10/4, McKinley) reports, “As Domestic Violence Awareness month begins, so do the Denver Police Department’s free self-defense classes for women, returning after an 18 month hiatus due to the coronavirus. ‘We have 15 women here. We had to bring down our numbers during covid but if we can save one woman, then that’s empowering for us,’ said Denver Police Department Community Relations Technician LaTrisha Guss.” Guss “says the martial arts classes are designed to give women confidence even if their attacker has a weapon like a knife or a gun and they do not. ‘If you feel like you’re in a hinkey situation, someone is following you they can take that fear and turn it into power by using their voice to scream out, and acknowledge what’s actually taking place.’”

The IACP will host the “Writing it Right: Documenting Human Trafficking” webinar on Thursday, October 28, 2021, from 2:00pm - 3:30pm ET. This webinar will focus on establishing the elements of human trafficking while protecting victim privacy and ensuring that reports and press releases accurately describe the dynamics of human trafficking. Participants will learn how to better articulate the realities of human trafficking when communicating with the media and the public, as well as how to ethically protect victim and witness safety in the public record. A second agent and a Tucson police officer were wounded.” The FBI “has taken over the investigation of the shooting, which sent passengers fleeing. It happened just after 8 a.m. on a train stopped at the station in the city’s downtown. Guss "says the martial arts classes are designed to give women confidence even if their attacker has a weapon like a knife or a gun and they do not. 'If you feel like you're in a hinkey situation, someone is following you they can take that fear and turn it into power by using their voice to scream out, and acknowledge what's actually taking place.'"

The IACP will host the "Writing it Right: Documenting Human Trafficking" webinar on Thursday, October 28, 2021, from 2:00pm - 3:30pm ET. This webinar will focus on establishing the elements of human trafficking while protecting victim privacy and ensuring that reports and press releases accurately describe the dynamics of human trafficking. Participants will learn how to better articulate the realities of human trafficking when communicating with the media and the public, as well as how to ethically protect victim and witness safety in the public record. Register here.

Florida School District Expects More Arrests In "Large-Scale Bomb Threat Investigation"

WUFT-FM Gainesville, FL (10/4, deMontmorency) reports three students have been arrested "for allegedly making recent bomb threats against Alachua County schools, and more arrests are expected soon, authorities said." The Alachua County Sheriff's Office "executed multiple search warrants last week in Newberry, and a total of seven bomb threats have been reported across county schools, said Art Forgey, a spokesperson for the sheriff's office." At least two of "the threats also involved gun violence, and threatening messages were shared on Snapchat to students after the threats occurred." The leaders of each "law enforcement agency in the county and the state attorney's office met last week to address the increase in gun violence and threats in school, he said."

Chilean Police Dismantle Crime Ring Smuggling Haitian Children

Reuters (10/4, Sherwood) reports Chilean police have dismantled "a crime ring that helped smuggle hundreds of children of Haitian migrants, sometimes without their parents, from Chile north to Mexico and the United States, Interpol said on Monday." The transnational group orchestrated "a complex, cross-border network that smuggled an estimated 1,000 Haitian migrants out of Chile, including 267 Chilean children under the age of six, all born to Haitian migrants, according to the global police co-ordination agency.”

DEA Agent Killed, Another Wounded In Shooting On Arizona Amtrak

The AP (10/4, Monroe) reports, “A Drug Enforcement Administration special agent was killed Monday when a passenger, who also died, opened fire as officers were doing a routine inspection for illegal contraband on an Amtrak train in Tucson, Arizona, authorities said. A second agent and a Tucson police officer were wounded.” The FBI “has taken over the investigation of the shooting, which sent passengers fleeing. It happened just after 8 a.m. on a train stopped at the station in the city’s downtown. A regional task force of DEA agents and Tucson police officers had boarded one of the cars to do a typical check for illegal money, weapons and drugs.”

Opioid-Related Deaths Rate Up In San Francisco Bay Area

The San Francisco Chronicle (10/4, Jung) reports, “In recent years, fentanyl, which is exponentially stronger and more lethal than heroin but cheaper to produce, has saturated” the illegal drug market in California’s San Francisco Bay Area and driven up the region’s “rate of opioid-related deaths.”

Vaccine Reportedly Being Developed To Counter Opioid Use Disorder

The AP (10/4, Bauder) reports the Newsy service “is expanding its programming to 17 hours a day with an eventual goal of operating around-the-clock.” Newsy recently ran a story about a vaccine that is “being developed to counter” opioid use disorder.

Authorities: Five Arrested In Connection With Largest Meth Bust In Oregon’s History

The AP (10/4) reports “the largest methamphetamine bust” in Oregon’s history was the result of a DEA-led operation, according to authorities who announced the bust. Martin Manzo-Negrete, one of five people arrested in connection with the operation, is the alleged “leader of a drug trafficking cell.” The KOIN-TV Portland, OR (10/4, Campbell) website publishes a similar article.

Technology

Arizona Opens “Cyber Command Center”

The Phoenix Patch (10/4) reports Arizona on Monday opened a “new ‘Cyber Command Center’ aimed at coordinating efforts between state, local and federal agencies to detect and respond to cyber threats.” The program, which was previously “called the Arizona Cyber Information Program, is now being renamed to the Arizona Information Sharing and Analysis Center or AZ-ISAC for short.” The program brings “both the public and private sector together and consists primarily of the Arizona Department of Administration, the Arizona Department of Homeland Security, the Arizona National Guard Cyber Response Team, the FBI’s Cyber Crimes Task Force, the Arizona Department of Public Safety and the multi-agency Arizona Counter Terrorism Information Center.”

KNXV-TV Phoenix (10/5, Phillips) also reports.

International Law Enforcement Coalition Arrests Two Prominent Ransomware Hackers

The Hill (10/4) reports an “international coalition” of American, French, Ukrainian, and European Union (EU) “law enforcement authorities coordinated on the arrest last week of two individuals and the seizure of millions of dollars in profit allegedly involved with a spree of damaging ransomware attacks.” Europol on Monday announced the “arrests on Tuesday in Ukraine of the unnamed individuals alleged to have been behind ransomware attacks that extorted between 5 million to 70 million euros.” Authorities say the two “began carrying out a series of ‘prolific’ ransomware attacks in April 2020 against industrial groups in both Europe and North America, encrypting files and threatening to release stolen data online if the victims did not pay the ransoms demanded.” In addition to the arrests, “authorities carried out seven property searches that resulted in the seizure of $375,000 in cash, two six-figure luxury vehicles and the freezing of $1.3 million in cryptocurrencies.”

Grant Managers,

Welcome to the FY22 STEP Grant year. All of you have worked these grants in the past, so starting out this year should be easy. However, if you have any questions, contact me.

I will be meeting with each of you in the coming weeks to sign off on the new year notifications, requirements, objectives, etc.

Attached are documents we will review at that meeting.

Please have a copy of your current seat belt use policy (the one requiring officers to wear on-duty) when we meet.

As always, stay safe.

Greetings Law Enforcement Partners,

On October 1st, President Biden formally proclaimed October 3 – 9 to be National Community Policing Week, recognizing the efforts of local law enforcement across the Nation: <https://www.whitehouse.gov/briefing-room/presidential-actions/2021/10/01/a-proclamation-on-national-community-policing-week-2021/>. As part of this National week, this upcoming weekend police departments across the Nation will be hosting Faith and Blue events. This campaign aims to build safer, stronger, more just and unified communities by directly enabling local partnerships through the connections of local faith-based organizations. I will personally be attending a few events on behalf of the USAO. There is still time for your department to register and host an event. For more information, visit: <https://faithandblue.org/>

Before we get into the upcoming trainings and resources, I would like to acknowledge the tragic loss of Trooper Gerald Mason. The entire U.S. Attorney's Office, including U.S. Attorney John R. Lausch Jr., sends our condolences to the Illinois State Police and Trooper Mason's family. As previous emails have communicated, the USAO has the utmost appreciation and respect for all of the District's law enforcement officers and support staff. Your selfless service, courage, and sacrifices do not go un-noticed. The District is committed to continuing to bring in trainings and other resources focused on officer health and wellness.

DC Authorities Launch Fall Initiative To Curb Crime In Five Neighborhoods

The Washington Post (10/1) reports that Washington, DC leaders “are extending a summer crime prevention initiative into the fall, hoping to keep heightened police attention focused on neighborhoods where residents feel besieged by crime. The areas of concern are Anacostia and Washington Highlands in Southeast Washington, Benning in Northeast and Columbia Heights and Brightwood Park in Northwest. ‘We know that we are experiencing an unacceptable level of gun violence,’ Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D) said at a news conference on Friday in Columbia Heights, flanked by police officials and confronting a 9 percent increase in homicides this year.” Bowser “said police and leaders of city programs trying to direct people away from crime are seeking to identify those ‘highly at risk’ for using or being victimized by someone using an illegal firearm.”

North Carolina Authorities Join Campaign To Steer Students Away From Porn, Predators

The AP (10/2) reports from Raleigh, North Carolina, “Law enforcement and education leaders in North Carolina are joining in a campaign” that aims to “keep students from being exposed to online pornography and adult sex predators.” According to the AP, “The N.C. State Bureau of Investigation, the state Department of Public Instruction and the nonprofit group The Third Talk have partnered on an internet safety video telling middle school and high school students about the dangers of online pornography. Students will see the video in school.” The AP adds, “State leaders say there’s a greater need for the video because online usage has increased, especially during the COVID-19 pandemic. Both the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and the SBI have reported a surge in the number of cyber tips about child exploitation since the start of the pandemic.”

Solo Police Officers In Scotland To Offer Identity Checks

The Guardian (UK) (10/2) reports, “Lone police officers in Scotland will offer a verification check to the public from Saturday to provide reassurance that they are genuine officers, following widespread concern after the murder of Sarah Everard.” The Guardian adds, “The new process will allow for the officer’s personal radio to be put on loudspeaker and for an officer or police staff member in a Police Scotland control room to confirm they are who they say they are, that they are on duty and the reason the officer is speaking to the member of the public. The control room will create an incident number that can be displayed on the officer’s mobile phone or radio to confirm the broadcast message details.” Police Scotland “said that police officers normally work in pairs but there are rare occasions when a lone police officer could approach a member of the public.”

Austin, Texas Police Stop Responding To Nonemergencies

Fox News (10/1, Aaro) reports, “Austin, Texas, police are urging the public to call 311 instead of 911 to report nonemergencies, authorities said.” Beginning on Friday, “individuals in the city are asked to use 311 when reporting crimes that are either no longer in process, when the suspect is no longer on the scene, or when there is no immediate threat to life or property, according to the Austin Police Department. ‘Please understand, if somebody is in danger, we’re still going to send a marked unit and a uniformed officer to go handle it,’ interim police chief Joseph Chacon explained Wednesday, according to KXAN-TV. ‘But for crimes that may have already happened and are now being reported, we are looking at alternative measures, and that’s what we’re working on now.’ Chacon said the changes come amid recent staffing challenges, reimagining public safety task force recommendations, and its review of its patrol COVID-19 mitigation protocols, which started May 2020.”

The New York Times (10/2, Goldman) reports Mohammed Khalifa, 38, a Canadian man “who traveled to Syria in 2013 and later joined the Islamic State,” was “secretly whisked to the United States” and “charged with material terrorism support that resulted in death, according to a criminal complaint made public on Saturday.” According to the Times, Khalifa “was captured in early 2019 by a Kurdish-led militia, the Syrian Democratic Forces, which is backed by the United States.” The Washington Post (10/2) reports Khalifa “ultimately led ISIS’s English-language media arm, prosecutors allege, whose output included videos, audio statements and an online magazine,” and prosecutors “say Khalifa narrated over a dozen ISIS recruitment videos, including two of the group’s most influential efforts at luring Westerners.”

Boko Haram Spreading Into North-Central Nigeria

Reuters (10/3) reports, “Boko Haram insurgents have taken over multiple communities in Nigeria’s north-central Niger state, offering villagers money and incorporating them in their ranks to fight the government, a local government official and the state’s information commission told Reuters.” The group’s “presence in Niger, a state that borders the federal capital territory, could indicate a concerning spread at a time the military says its counter-insurgency efforts are working.” Niger state information commissioner Muhammad Sani Idris “said that the state government and security agencies have been able to curtail the spread.”

More Than 230 Arrests In Nebraska Anti-Gang Operation

CNN (10/3, Elassar) reports, “A multi-agency law enforcement operation in Nebraska resulted in the arrest of 231 people, according to the US Marshals Service. DC Authorities Launch Fall Initiative To Curb Crime In Five Neighborhoods

The Washington Post (10/1) reports that Washington, DC leaders “are extending a summer crime prevention initiative into the fall, hoping to keep heightened police attention focused on neighborhoods where residents feel besieged by crime. The areas of concern are Anacostia and Washington Highlands in Southeast Washington, Benning in Northeast and Columbia Heights and Brightwood Park in Northwest. ‘We know that we are experiencing an unacceptable level of gun violence,’ Mayor Muriel E. Bowser (D) said at a news conference on Friday in Columbia Heights, flanked by police officials and confronting a 9 percent increase in homicides this year.” Bowser “said police and leaders of city programs trying to direct people away from crime are seeking to identify those ‘highly at risk’ for using or being victimized by someone using an illegal firearm.”

North Carolina Authorities Join Campaign To Steer Students Away From Porn, Predators

The AP (10/2) reports from Raleigh, North Carolina, “Law enforcement and education leaders in North Carolina are joining in a campaign” that aims to “keep students from being exposed to online pornography and adult sex predators.” According to the AP, “The N.C. State Bureau of Investigation, the state Department of Public Instruction and the nonprofit group The Third Talk have partnered on an internet safety video telling middle school and high school students about the dangers of online pornography. Students will see the video in school.” The AP adds, “State leaders say there’s a greater need for the video because online usage has increased, especially during the COVID-19 pandemic. Both the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and the SBI have reported a surge in the number of cyber tips about child exploitation since the start of the pandemic.”

Solo Police Officers In Scotland To Offer Identity Checks

The Guardian (UK) (10/2) reports, “Lone police officers in Scotland will offer a verification check to the public from Saturday to provide reassurance that they are genuine officers, following widespread concern after the murder of Sarah Everard.” The Guardian adds, “The new process will allow for the officer’s personal radio to be put on loudspeaker and for an officer or police staff member in a Police Scotland control room to confirm they are who they say they are, that they are on duty and the reason the officer is speaking to the member of the public. The control room will create an incident number that can be displayed on the officer’s mobile phone or radio to confirm the broadcast message details.” Police Scotland “said that police officers normally work in pairs but there are rare occasions when a lone police officer could approach a member of the public.”

Austin, Texas Police Stop Responding To Nonemergencies

Fox News (10/1, Aaro) reports, “Austin, Texas, police are urging the public to call 311 instead of 911 to report nonemergencies, authorities said.” Beginning on Friday, “individuals in the city are asked to use 311 when reporting crimes that are either no longer in process, when the suspect is no longer on the scene, or when there is no immediate threat to life or property, according to the Austin Police Department. ‘Please understand, if somebody is in danger, we’re still going to send a marked unit and a uniformed officer to go handle it,’ interim police chief Joseph Chacon explained Wednesday, according to KXAN-TV. ‘But for crimes that may have already happened and are now being reported, we are looking at alternative measures, and that’s what we’re working on now.’ Chacon said the changes come amid recent staffing challenges, reimagining public safety task force recommendations, and its review of its patrol COVID-19 mitigation protocols, which started May 2020.”

Man Who Hurling Molotov Cocktail Into Democrats’ County Office In Austin, Texas In Custody

The AP (10/2) reports jail records show that a man observed on surveillance footage sporting “an American flag bandana when he threw a Molotov cocktail into the headquarters of the Democratic Party’s county office in Austin remained in custody Saturday.” Ryan Faircloth “was arrested Friday and faces federal charges of arson and attempted arson, according to court documents.” The AP also says, “No one was in the Travis County Democratic Party headquarters when it was attacked at around 2 a.m. Wednesday and only a small stack of papers caught fire, officials said.”

Texas Man Receives 10-Year Prison Sentence For Threatening To Blow Up Amazon Facility

The Hill (10/2) reports, “A Texas man was sentenced to 10 years in federal prison on Friday for threatening to blow up an Amazon data center, federal prosecutors announced.” Seth Aaron Pendley “pleaded guilty in June to malicious attempt to destroy a building with an explosive for threatening to blow up an Amazon Web Services center in Virginia.” The Hill also says he “admitted to disclosing a plan to blow up an Amazon data center to a confidential source.”

Canadian Man To Face US Terrorism Charge For Role In Narrating IS Propaganda Videos

The New York Times (10/2, Goldman) reports Mohammed Khalifa, 38, a Canadian man “who traveled to Syria in 2013 and later joined the Islamic State,” was “secretly whisked to the United States” and “charged with material terrorism support that resulted in death, according to a criminal complaint made public on Saturday.” According to the Times, Khalifa “was captured in early 2019 by a Kurdish-led militia, the Syrian Democratic Forces, which is backed by the United States.” The Washington Post (10/2) reports Khalifa “ultimately led ISIS’s English-language media arm, prosecutors allege, whose output included videos, audio statements and an online magazine,” and prosecutors “say Khalifa narrated over a dozen ISIS recruitment videos, including two of the group’s most influential efforts at luring Westerners.”

Boko Haram Spreading Into North-Central Nigeria

Reuters (10/3) reports, “Boko Haram insurgents have taken over multiple communities in Nigeria’s north-central Niger state, offering villagers money and incorporating them in their ranks to fight the government, a local government official and the state’s information commission told Reuters.” The group’s “presence in Niger, a state that borders the federal capital territory, could indicate a concerning spread at a time the military says its counter-insurgency efforts are working.” Niger state information commissioner Muhammad Sani Idris “said that the state government and security agencies have been able to curtail the spread.”

More Than 230 Arrests In Nebraska Anti-Gang Operation

CNN (10/3, Elassar) reports, “A multi-agency law enforcement operation in Nebraska resulted in the arrest of 231 people, according to the US Marshals Service. Operation ‘K.O.’ focused on reducing and dismantling gang activity in the Omaha metro region, Marshals said Monday in a news release.” The operation, “led by the US Marshals Service Metro Fugitive Task Force (MFTF), the Omaha Police Department (OPD), and the Lincoln Police Department, resulted in the arrest of 144 gang members, according to the release. The four-month operation, which took place from May to August, focused on ‘arrest warrants involving gang members, gang suppression, and gang intervention/prevention,’ authorities stated. ‘During Operation K.O., of the subjects who were arrested, 36 were arrested for assault, 68 for weapon charges, two for sexual assault, five for failure to register, six for burglary, 53 for drug charges, 15 for robbery, three for vehicle theft, and 32 for other charges,’ the Marshals Service said.”

Hey DC Huff and Admin Officer Zielinski,

I have two upcoming assessments that I think would be great for you to get a look at.

West Chicago is going up for Re-accreditation and plans to have a mid-November assessment. I'd love for one or both of you to participate as a shadow role. This gives you a great opportunity to play the assessor role and get your feet wet assessing. You'll get to steal some great ideas and we will be working with Dean Myles. I've learned tons from him over the years.

Alsip PD is coming up as well. This one would probably go the first week of December. They are Tier 1 initial accreditation, using Power DMS.

Let me know if you can help out. I really appreciate the support.

Take care,

Jeff

Policing and Policy

California Enacts Policing Reform Measures

NBC News (10/1) reports that California Gov. Gavin Newsom “has signed into law a series of bills that give the state the power to strip the badge of officers who commit misconduct, raise the minimum age of officers and take other steps to change policing following nationwide calls for reform.” The bills Newsom signed on Thursday “also limit when police can use things like rubber bullets and beanbag rounds at protests. They bar restraints that can cause someone to asphyxiate and require officers to immediately report excessive force by others.”

CNN (9/30, Mossburg, Almasy) reports, “The legislation will prevent officers accused of wrongdoing from bouncing from one law enforcement agency to another and creates a process and advisory board for officer accountability within California’s Police Officer Standards and Training (POST). ‘Today we embark on a new chapter in which we infuse our criminal justice system with more trust with more transparency and with more accountability,’ state Attorney General Rob Bonta said. ‘We are showing that you can build trust with the public, and enhance safety of our community and our officers at the same time, that they are not mutually exclusive, that in fact they are the enforcing that by building trust. Today, we enhance safety for our officers and for our community.’”

Study Finds More Than Half Of Police Killings Are Mislabeled

The New York Times (9/30, A1, Arango, Dewan) reports, “Police killings in America have been undercounted by more than half over the past four decades, according to a new study that raises pointed questions about racial bias among medical examiners and highlights the lack of reliable national record keeping.” The study, “conducted by researchers at the University of Washington and published on Thursday in The Lancet...amounts to one of the most comprehensive looks at the scope of police violence in America.” According to the Times, “Researchers compared information from...the National Vital Statistics System, which collects death certificates, with recent data from three organizations that track police killings through news reports and public records requests,” and “when extrapolating and modeling that data back decades, they identified a startling discrepancy: About 55 percent of fatal encounters with the police between 1980 and 2018 were listed as another cause of death.”

Nashville, Tennessee Police Complete Body-Worn, In-Car Camera Outfitting Plan

The Tennessean (9/30, Friedman) reports, “The Metro Nashville Police Department announced Thursday the outfitting of every officer with body-worn and in-car cameras.” The Tennessean adds, “The department equipped a total of 1,367 officers, lieutenants and sergeants with cameras. Another 790 were installed in police vehicles. The rollout of body cameras started in 2020, with all precincts’ officers receiving cameras as of July.” According to the Tennessean, “Nashville police first committed to deploying body cameras in 2016. Implementation stalled as the mayor’s office changed hands three times in the following two years. Two body camera pilot programs came and went.”

North Carolina Police Reforms Go Into Effect

The AP (9/30, Robertson) reports from Raleigh, North Carolina, “New police accountability reporting requirements, rules for sheriff’s candidates, mandated clergy hospital visitation and Sunday bottled liquor sales begin as all or parts of more than 30 new laws take effect on Friday in North Carolina.” According to the AP, “Legislation approved earlier this year and taking effect Oct. 1 includes several provisions from broader criminal justice reform bills that are designed to identify wayward officers and deputies and push them out of law enforcement. One law directs police and deputy standards commissions to create a public database of law enforcement officers who have had their certifications revoked or suspended.” The AP adds, “A confidential database also will be created by the Department of Justice that contains ‘critical incident information’ about when an officer has been involved in a case resulting in death or serious injury.”

DEA Agents Arrest 800 In US Crackdown On Illegal Sales Of Fentanyl-Laced Drugs

The Wall Street Journal (9/30, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that DEA Agents seized 1.8 million counterfeit pills laced with the synthetic opioid fentanyl and arrested more than 800 people across the country in a two-month crackdown on online sales of the potentially lethal drugs. The Journal notes that law enforcement officials were critical of social media firms for failing to do more to stop the online sale of fake pills that look like prescription painkillers but contain sometimes lethal amounts of fentanyl. Deputy Attorney General Lisa Monaco called out Facebook and Snap Inc., which operates Snapchat, saying, “The pervasiveness of synthetic opioids, the low cost and the way criminal drug networks disguise them as legitimate prescription pills really can make them particularly dangerous to public safety.” And DEA Administrator Anne Milgram added, “If we know that there’s drug dealing happening on their sites every single day, they know that, too.”

California Man Sentenced To Life For Synagogue Murder, Mosque Arson

Reuters (10/1, Gorman) reports John T. Earnest, “who admitted to killing one worshiper and wounding three others in a shooting spree inside a California synagogue about a month after setting fire to a nearby mosque,” was sentenced on Thursday “to life in prison without the possibility of parole.” The sentencing of Earnest came after he pleaded guilty “to federal hate-crime charges stemming from the same two attacks in 2019.”

New Orleans Police Tout Results Of Summer-Long Crime-Fighting Venture

The New Orleans Times-Picayune (9/30, Simerman, Sledge) reports, “New Orleans Police Department Superintendent Shaun Ferguson on Thursday touted what he described as stellar results from the latest crime-fighting venture between the NOPD and the embattled Louisiana State Police over the summer.” Ferguson said police “tallied 90 arrests, scores of seized weapons and four federal indictments he said have resulted so far from ‘Operation Golden Eagle’ over its three months.” Ferguson, “flanked by State Police Superintendent Col. Lamar Davis at a news conference also attended by FBI and DEA representatives, offered few details on the nature of State Police’s work in the city or the number of troopers involved. Ferguson said the arrests and charges were for a variety of weapons and drug crimes.”

Police Urge Parents To Inspect Halloween Candy After Ecstasy Is Discovered

Fox News (9/30, Pelletiere) reports, “Police are once again asking parents and guardians to pay close attention to kids’ Halloween loot as incidents involving ‘suspicious candy-like substances’ emerge close to the trick-or-treating holiday.” Fox News adds, “Last week, the Auburn Georgia Police Department shared an image on Facebook after officers found a bag of ecstasy ‘along with numerous other drugs’ that were seized from a traffic-related incident. ‘As you can see the ecstasy looks like candy, little frog heads in all different colors,’ the post read. ‘Please make sure to speak with your children and educate them about suspicious candy-like substances. Thank you for being vigilant with your child’s safety.’ Although actual incidents of drugs being passed to children on Halloween may be rare, police said they still push for candy checks due to the drugs bearing close resemblance to a harmless treat.”

California Deputies Seize More Than 100,000 Marijuana Plants In One Of State’s Largest Illegal Grows

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/30, Hernandez) reports, “Alameda County sheriff’s detectives said they seized more than 100,000 marijuana plants and more than $10 million in cash on Wednesday,” during “what they called the ‘taking down’ of one of the largest illegal cannabis grow operations in California. Deputies conducted more than one dozen search warrants across the East Bay on Wednesday and said they expected to be at the undisclosed locations for several days to process ‘this enormous amount of evidence.’ They did not say which cities the grows were located in.”

German, Dutch Police Arrests Suspects In Explosive ATM Raids

The AP (9/30) reports from The Hague, Netherlands, "Police in the Netherlands and Germany have arrested nine suspected members of a gang responsible for a string of robberies targeting ATMs in Germany and for setting up a training center for blowing up cash machines, European Union police agency Europol said Thursday." According to the AP, "The makeshift training facility in the central Dutch city of Utrecht helped unmask the gang during an 18-month cross-border investigation, according to Europol. Police in the northern German city of Osnabrueck said they became suspicious when a 29-year-old Dutch man there ordered several ATMs, saying they were for an art project in the Netherlands. Instead, the machines were delivered to a warehouse in Utrecht, where the man and an accomplice tested ways of blowing them up to get at cash inside and made video recordings of their efforts, the police agency said."

House Unanimously Passes K-12 Cybersecurity Bill

The Hill (9/30) reports the House on Wednesday "unanimously passed legislation intended to help strengthen K-12 institutions against cyber threats, which have ticked up as classes have moved online during the COVID-19 pandemic." The K-12 Cybersecurity Act would "require the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) to create cybersecurity recommendations and tools for schools to use to defend themselves against hackers, after conducting a study on the cyber risks facing K-12 institutions."

Baby At Center Of Hospital Suit May Be First Confirmed First Ransomware Death. The Wall Street Journal (9/30, A1, Poulsen, Evans, McMillan, Subscription Publication) profiles a suit in the death of a baby at Springhill Medical Center that if proven would be the first confirmed death linked to a ransomware attack. During labor, the hospital's medical staff were not able to access patient records or data from monitoring equipment monitoring patient vital signs. The hospital has denied wrongdoing.

Gavin Newsom “has signed into law a series of bills that give the state the power to strip the badge of officers who commit misconduct, raise the minimum age of officers and take other steps to change policing following nationwide calls for reform.” The bills Newsom signed on Thursday “also limit when police can use things like rubber bullets and beanbag rounds at protests. They bar restraints that can cause someone to asphyxiate and require officers to immediately report excessive force by others.”

CNN (9/30, Mossburg, Almasy) reports, “The legislation will prevent officers accused of wrongdoing from bouncing from one law enforcement agency to another and creates a process and advisory board for officer accountability within California’s Police Officer Standards and Training (POST). ‘Today we embark on a new chapter in which we infuse our criminal justice system with more trust with more transparency and with more accountability,’ state Attorney General Rob Bonta said. ‘We are showing that you can build trust with the public, and enhance safety of our community and our officers at the same time, that they are not mutually exclusive, that in fact they are the enforcing that by building trust. Today, we enhance safety for our officers and for our community.’”

Study Finds More Than Half Of Police Killings Are Mislabeled

The New York Times (9/30, A1, Arango, Dewan) reports, “Police killings in America have been undercounted by more than half over the past four decades, according to a new study that raises pointed questions about racial bias among medical examiners and highlights the lack of reliable national record keeping.” The study, “conducted by researchers at the University of Washington and published on Thursday in The Lancet...amounts to one of the most comprehensive looks at the scope of police violence in America.” According to the Times, “Researchers compared information from...the National Vital Statistics System, which collects death certificates, with recent data from three organizations that track police killings through news reports and public records requests,” and “when extrapolating and modeling that data back decades, they identified a startling discrepancy: About 55 percent of fatal encounters with the police between 1980 and 2018 were listed as another cause of death.”

Nashville, Tennessee Police Complete Body-Worn, In-Car Camera Outfitting Plan

The Tennessean (9/30, Friedman) reports, “The Metro Nashville Police Department announced Thursday the outfitting of every officer with body-worn and in-car cameras.” The Tennessean adds, “The department equipped a total of 1,367 officers, lieutenants and sergeants with cameras. Another 790 were installed in police vehicles. The rollout of body cameras started in 2020, with all precincts’ officers receiving cameras as of July.” According to the Tennessean, “Nashville police first committed to deploying body cameras in 2016. Implementation stalled as the mayor’s office changed hands three times in the following two years. Two body camera pilot programs came and went.”

North Carolina Police Reforms Go Into Effect

The AP (9/30, Robertson) reports from Raleigh, North Carolina, “New police accountability reporting requirements, rules for sheriff’s candidates, mandated clergy hospital visitation and Sunday bottled liquor sales begin as all or parts of more than 30 new laws take effect on Friday in North Carolina.” According to the AP, “Legislation approved earlier this year and taking effect Oct. 1 includes several provisions from broader criminal justice reform bills that are designed to identify wayward officers and deputies and push them out of law enforcement. One law directs police and deputy standards commissions to create a public database of law enforcement officers who have had their certifications revoked or suspended.” The AP adds, “A confidential database also will be created by the Department of Justice that contains ‘critical incident information’ about when an officer has been involved in a case resulting in death or serious injury.”

DEA Agents Arrest 800 In US Crackdown On Illegal Sales Of Fentanyl-Laced Drugs

The Wall Street Journal (9/30, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that DEA Agents seized 1.8 million counterfeit pills laced with the synthetic opioid fentanyl and arrested more than 800 people across the country in a two-month crackdown on online sales of the potentially lethal drugs. The Journal notes that law enforcement officials were critical of social media firms for failing to do more to stop the online sale of fake pills that look like prescription painkillers but contain sometimes lethal amounts of fentanyl. Deputy Attorney General Lisa Monaco called out Facebook and Snap Inc., which operates Snapchat, saying, “The pervasiveness of synthetic opioids, the low cost and the way criminal drug networks disguise them as legitimate prescription pills really can make them particularly dangerous to public safety.” And DEA Administrator Anne Milgram added, “If we know that there’s drug dealing happening on their sites every single day, they know that, too.”

California Man Sentenced To Life For Synagogue Murder, Mosque Arson

Reuters (10/1, Gorman) reports John T. Earnest, “who admitted to killing one worshiper and wounding three others in a shooting spree inside a California synagogue about a month after setting fire to a nearby mosque,” was sentenced on Thursday “to life in prison without the possibility of parole.” The sentencing of Earnest came after he pleaded guilty “to federal hate-crime charges stemming from the same two attacks in 2019.”

New Orleans Police Tout Results Of Summer-Long Crime-Fighting Venture

The New Orleans Times-Picayune (9/30, Simerman, Sledge) reports, “New Orleans Police Department Superintendent Shaun Ferguson on Thursday touted what he described as stellar results from the latest crime-fighting venture between the NOPD and the embattled Louisiana State Police over the summer.” Ferguson said police “tallied 90 arrests, scores of seized weapons and four federal indictments he said have resulted so far from ‘Operation Golden Eagle’ over its three months.” Ferguson, “flanked by State Police Superintendent Col. Lamar Davis at a news conference also attended by FBI and DEA representatives, offered few details on the nature of State Police’s work in the city or the number of troopers involved. Ferguson said the arrests and charges were for a variety of weapons and drug crimes.”

Police Urge Parents To Inspect Halloween Candy After Ecstasy Is Discovered

Fox News (9/30, Pelletiere) reports, “Police are once again asking parents and guardians to pay close attention to kids’ Halloween loot as incidents involving ‘suspicious candy-like substances’ emerge close to the trick-or-treating holiday.” Fox News adds, “Last week, the Auburn Georgia Police Department shared an image on Facebook after officers found a bag of ecstasy ‘along with numerous other drugs’ that were seized from a traffic-related incident. ‘As you can see the ecstasy looks like candy, little frog heads in all different colors,’ the post read. ‘Please make sure to speak with your children and educate them about suspicious candy-like substances. Thank you for being vigilant with your child’s safety.’ Although actual incidents of drugs being passed to children on Halloween may be rare, police said they still push for candy checks due to the drugs bearing close resemblance to a harmless treat.”

California Deputies Seize More Than 100,000 Marijuana Plants In One Of State’s Largest Illegal Grows

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/30, Hernandez) reports, “Alameda County sheriff’s detectives said they seized more than 100,000 marijuana plants and more than $10 million in cash on Wednesday,” during “what they called the ‘taking down’ of one of the largest illegal cannabis grow operations in California. Deputies conducted more than one dozen search warrants across the East Bay on Wednesday and said they expected to be at the undisclosed locations for several days to process ‘this enormous amount of evidence.’ They did not say which cities the grows were located in.”

German, Dutch Police Arrests Suspects In Explosive ATM Raids

The AP (9/30) reports from The Hague, Netherlands, "Police in the Netherlands and Germany have arrested nine suspected members of a gang responsible for a string of robberies targeting ATMs in Germany and for setting up a training center for blowing up cash machines, European Union police agency Europol said Thursday." According to the AP, "The makeshift training facility in the central Dutch city of Utrecht helped unmask the gang during an 18-month cross-border investigation, according to Europol. Police in the northern German city of Osnabrueck said they became suspicious when a 29-year-old Dutch man there ordered several ATMs, saying they were for an art project in the Netherlands. Instead, the machines were delivered to a warehouse in Utrecht, where the man and an accomplice tested ways of blowing them up to get at cash inside and made video recordings of their efforts, the police agency said."

House Unanimously Passes K-12 Cybersecurity Bill

The Hill (9/30) reports the House on Wednesday "unanimously passed legislation intended to help strengthen K-12 institutions against cyber threats, which have ticked up as classes have moved online during the COVID-19 pandemic." The K-12 Cybersecurity Act would "require the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) to create cybersecurity recommendations and tools for schools to use to defend themselves against hackers, after conducting a study on the cyber risks facing K-12 institutions."

Baby At Center Of Hospital Suit May Be First Confirmed First Ransomware Death. The Wall Street Journal (9/30, A1, Poulsen, Evans, McMillan, Subscription Publication) profiles a suit in the death of a baby at Springhill Medical Center that if proven would be the first confirmed death linked to a ransomware attack. 1994. Local Government Big Thinkers - Project Updates

Subject: Local Government Big Thinkers - Project Updates
Attachment: CalltoAction090921_#2.docx
nationalconvening_091921.docx

Colleagues:

The following is an update on the eight projects identified in June to further the work of our grass roots “Big Thinkers” group on the response of local government folks to the National Academy of Public Administration’s Grand Challenges:

Call to Action

The larger group suggested in June drafting a “Call to Action” for local government folks on the various issues we have discussed. A sub-committee was formed to review the draft call. Additional drafts were prepared. Based on very limited feedback from the sub-committee, the attached draft is where we stand. Honestly, only one member of the sub-committee embraced the “Call to Action.” I share with the larger group today to see if there is any interest in further work on this.

Local Government 2030: A National Convening of Practitioners to Plan for the Future

A draft vision statement for the convening is attached. There is a sub-group formed to work on this project and they plan to meet in early November.

Foster Social Equity – DEI Playbook

Thanks to Joe Mitchell and Jillian McGuffey from NAPA for assigning two interns to help do a scan of work being done by other groups in the area of a DEI playbook. ICMA is working on a project now that seems to align with the purposes of our project. The sub-group for this project will be meeting in November to hear more from Rob Carty from ICMA staff on what we can do to help with the completion of the Playbook and work to get it in the hands of city and county managers who need it. This sub-group will also be working more broadly on how to talk more with managers on the importance of DEI work in their communities and the benefits communities are already receiving by doing this work.

Foster Social Equity – State Association Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Network

A request has been sent to the leadership of each of the state municipal associations asking that they appoint a representative from their association to serve on this group to share DEI best practices and how to work within their states to encourage communities, and local government managers, in their DEI work. Associations have been asked to designate a representative by the end of October.

Modernize and Reinvigorate Public Service – Attracting Women and Minorities into Local Government

GovHR USA President Heidi Voorhees and Jorge Garcia, Management Services Director, Pismo Beach, CA are co-chairing this project. They are being assisted by Marybeth Spoehr, an MPA student at UNC Chapel Hill. The co-chairs are developing an agenda for a first meeting to be scheduled later in October.

Modernize and Reinvigorate Public Service – Marketing Local Government to High School and College Student

Olathe, KS Assistant City Manager Susan Sherman and El Segundo, CA City Manager Scott Mitnick are co-chairing this project. Initial discussion on agenda focuses on identifying existing initiatives that can be better publicized throughout the profession as well as identifying new partners outside of local government for projects. Susan and Scott are working on an agenda for a first meeting for later in October.

Modernize and Reinvigorate the Public Service – Recruitment and Retention of Employees

Highland Park, IL City Manager Ghida Neukirch and Chuck Wemple, Executive Director of the Houston-Galveston Area Council are co-chairing this project. The group's first meeting on this project will be in two weeks.

Develop New Approaches to Public Governance and Engagement – Collaboration within Communities / Intergovernmental and Cross Sector Collaboration

These two projects are on hold pending a few volunteers stepping forward to chair or co-chair them. If you are interested in helping with these projects, please let me know.

“Big Thinkers” White Paper

The idea of the white paper to outline the importance to local government of each of these projects also came up at our June meeting. It is my hope that the individuals who expressed interest in working on white paper will get together in next several weeks to discuss next steps.

So that's where we stand. My thanks to all your interest in thinking big ideas for the future of local government. Please let me know if you have any questions. I hope to see many of you in Portland in the coming days at the ICMA Annual Conference. Best wishes.

RSG! for Law Enforcement Resources

Engage your local law enforcement by sharing these new wildland fire resources.

Law enforcement officers are responding to wildland fires across the nation as fires increase in size, frequency, and intensity. The International Association of Fire Chiefs' (IAFC) Ready, Set Go! Program has partnered with the National Sheriffs' Association (NSA) and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) to enhance law enforcement officers' safety and understanding of their critical role during wildland fire events.

The RSG! for Law Enforcement video and flyer provide general knowledge to help law enforcement officials, who are often first to arrive. These resources will help responders assess the scene and take appropriate action for each situation they may face, resulting in preservation of life and property. The information and guidance in these resources is intended to be shared during law enforcement shift changes and training – the flyer should be kept in patrol cars for reference. Collaboration between first response disciplines is vital to the successful outcome of every event. IAFC Wildland Fire Programs values its partnership with the IACP and NSA for the improvement of our responders' safety and outcomes for the communities we serve. Please contact RSG@iafc.org if you have any questions.

Policing and Policy

DHS Announces It Will Create Law Enforcement Coordination Council

Axios (9/29, Saric) reports the US Department of Homeland Security (DHS) “announced Wednesday that it will create a council to ‘promote best practices in its law enforcement activities.’” The department “said the new Law Enforcement Coordination Council will be the first unified law enforcement coordination body at DHS and will cover everything from training curricula to use of force policies. The LECC will be chaired by Mayorkas and act as a governing organization for the department’s law enforcement agencies and oversight bodies, Mayorkas told ABC News Wednesday. The LECC will be split into two sub-committees, one of which will examine use of force policies across the department and its components, while the other will review law enforcement training techniques and curricula, per the press release.”

The Hill (9/29, Beals) reports, “More specifically, the council’s responsibilities will include evaluating new challenges and potential policy changes while also coordinating the distribution of information and encouraging best practices, DHS said. ‘The Law Enforcement Coordination Council will better enable the Department to combat current and future threats to our country, while ensuring the safety of both our law enforcement personnel and the diverse communities we serve,’ Mayorkas said in the release.”

Senate Bill Targets Broken US Prison Security Cameras

The AP (9/29, Balsamo) reports, “Failing security cameras in federal prisons have allowed inmates to escape undetected and were at the center of the investigation when wealthy financier Jeffrey Epstein killed himself behind bars in 2019,” and “now, lawmakers want to force the Bureau of Prisons to repair and upgrade security systems. ‘Blind spots, lost footage, and technical failures are unacceptable in federal prisons, which must be cleaned up and held to the highest standards,’ said Sen. Jon Ossoff, D-Ga., who introduced bipartisan legislation Wednesday to require the bureau and Justice Department to ensure there is adequate security camera coverage across the agency’s 122 federal prisons.” The AP adds, “Ossoff, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Dick

Durbin and Sen. Chuck Grassley, the panel's top Republican, say issues with cameras – which sometimes are not working or recorded over too frequently – make it difficult for authorities to properly investigate allegations of misconduct.”

California Police Reform Bill Permits Officer Decertification, But Leaves Qualified Immunity Issue Unresolved

USA Today (9/29, Abdollah) reports that Senate Bill 2, which has been passed by the California legislature, “aims to address problem law enforcement officers who jump from department to department, but it fails to deal with an ambiguity in state law that makes it easier for cops to claim immunity from liability when they hurt or kill people.” The legislation “aims to hold the state's roughly 80,000 law enforcement officers accountable by decertifying those who engage in serious misconduct, effectively preventing them from policing in California.” Backers of the bill expect Gov. Gavin Newsom (D) to sign it.

Bipartisan House Lawmakers Unveil Addiction, Mental Health Legislative Plan

“A bipartisan group of 144 House lawmakers plans to unveil their agenda Wednesday for expanding access to mental health care and combating the growing drug epidemic after overdose deaths hit new highs, CQ Roll Call has learned first exclusively,” Roll Call (9/29, Raman) reports. The “blueprint outlining the group's legislative goals includes 12 policy subcategories including prevention, treatment, rural and underserved communities, workforce development, first responders, interdiction, children and families, veterans, prescribing, education, health care access and health parity.”

New Zealand Criminalizes Terrorist Plotting After Knife Attack

The AP (9/29) reports, “New Zealand politicians on Thursday passed a law that makes plotting a terrorist attack a crime, fixing a legal loophole that was exposed earlier this month by a violent knife attack.” The AP adds, “The new law had been months in the planning but was hurried through Parliament after an extremist inspired by the Islamic State group grabbed a knife at an Auckland supermarket on Sept. 3 and began stabbing shoppers. He wounded five while two others were injured in the chaos. All have been recovering. After the attack this month, Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern vowed to pass the new legislation by the end of September. But Ardern also said that even had the new law been in place, it may not necessarily have stopped” the attack

Internal Report Gives Baltimore Police High Marks For Response To Protests In 2020

The Baltimore Sun (9/29, Anderson) reports, “Baltimore Police officers largely upheld protesters rights during nightly demonstrations in 2020 following the death of George Floyd, a review by the agency has found.” According to the Sun, “The police department issued its ‘Assessment of 2020 First Amendment Protected Activities’ report as required as part of a federal consent decree, assessing how officers treated individuals demonstrating in response to Floyd's death in May and June 2020. The report also looked at the department's response to protests at Vice President Mike Pence's visit to Baltimore during the Republican National Convention in August last year. ‘BPD's response to protest environments in 2020 was compliant with policy requirements and did not infringe on protesters' First Amendment rights,' according to the report, which analyzed internal and external complaints, use of force incidents and other measures.”

Law enforcement officers are responding to wildland fires across the nation as fires increase in size, frequency, and intensity. The International Association of Fire Chiefs' (IAFC) Ready, Set, Go! Program has partnered with the National Sheriffs' Association (NSA) and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) to enhance law enforcement officers' safety and understanding of their critical role during wildland fire events.

The RSG for Law Enforcement Video and RSG for Law Enforcement Flyer provides general knowledge to help law enforcement officials, who are often first to arrive, assess the scene and take appropriate action for each situation they may face, resulting in preservation of life and property. The information and guidance in these resources are intended to be shared during law enforcement shift changes and training – the flyer should be kept in patrol cars for reference.

Collaboration between first response disciplines is vital to the successful outcome of every event. IAFC Wildland Fire Programs values its partnership with the IACP and NSA for the improvement of our responders' safety and outcomes for the communities we serve.

Capitol Police Chief: Threats Against Congress Are Historically High

The AP (9/29, Balsamo, Long) reports the new chief of the US Capitol Police “says the force, still struggling six months after an insurrection that left its officers battled,” bloodied, and bruised, “cannot afford to be complacent.” In an interview with The AP, J. Thomas Manger “said his force is seeing a historically high number of threats against lawmakers, thousands more than just a few years ago.” He also “predicts authorities will respond to close to 9,000 threats against members of Congress in 2021 – more than 4,100 had been reported from January to March.” Manger said, “We have never had the level of threats against members of Congress that we’re seeing today. Clearly, we’ve got a bigger job in terms of the protection aspect of our responsibilities, we’ve got a bigger job than we used to.”

Parents Are Warned When Child Kidnappings Are Most Likely Attempted

The New York Post (9/29, Schmidt) reports, “With school back in session, experts are warning parents to educate their children about personal safety, especially while they’re traveling to and from school. That’s when attempted abductions of children are most likely to happen by a non-relative or stranger, according to the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children (NCMEC).” The center “says on its website that school-age children are at the greatest risk of an attempted abduction on school days compared to weekend days. According to the center, attempted abductions of school-age children were most likely to happen before school (7 a.m. – 9 a.m.), right after school (3 p.m. – 4 p.m.) and after dinner (6 p.m. – 7 p.m.).”

FBI: US Faces Twice As Many Domestic Terror Threats As Foreign

Newsweek (9/29, Hutzler) reports the US is facing “far more domestic terror threats than those from international parties, according to the FBI.” Timothy Langan, assistant director of the bureau’s Counterterrorism Division, “told lawmakers Wednesday that the US is approaching more than 2,700 domestic terrorism threats.” The number of international “terror threats is under 1,000, Langan said when asked by Representative Nancy Mace to provide data on the FBI’s caseload.” Langan also “noted that the ‘greatest terrorism threat’ is posed by lone actors or small cells radicalized online looking to attack ‘soft targets with easily accessible weapons.’”

Coroner Highlights Suspected Illicit Drug Toxicity Deaths In British Columbia

The Canadian Press (9/29) reports, “suspected illicit drug toxicity deaths in July were the second highest...ever recorded in a single month” in British Columbia, according to that province’s coroner. The coroner release a report that shows those “deaths reached 184 in July, which tied with those in January and fell just behind June 2020,” when “186 people died.” CTV News (CAN) (9/29) also covers this story.

House Passes Federal Cybersecurity Legislation

The Hill (9/29, Miller) reports the House on Wednesday “passed bipartisan legislation aimed at strengthening the federal cybersecurity workforce, an issue that has garnered support following a year of massive information security incidents.” The Federal Rotational Cyber Workforce Program Act, “sponsored by Reps. Ro Khanna (D-Calif.) and Nancy Mace (R-S.C.), would establish a program to allow cybersecurity professionals to rotate through multiple federal agencies and enhance their expertise.” The bill would also “encourage federal agency leaders to identify cybersecurity positions that can be rotated through government, and give the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) jurisdiction over the Federal Rotational Cyber Workforce Program.”

German Cybersecurity Watchdog Probing Xiaomi Mobile Phone

Reuters (9/29, Rinke, Schimroszik) reports Germany’s federal cybersecurity watchdog, “the BSI, is conducting a technical examination of a mobile phone manufactured by China’s Xiaomi Corp, a spokesperson for the interior ministry told Reuters on Wednesday.” The spokesperson did not “provide further details on what kind of examination the agency was carrying out,” but Lithuania’s state cybersecurity body “said last week that Xiaomi phones had a built-in ability to detect and censor terms such as ‘Free Tibet,’ ‘Long live Taiwan independence’ or ‘democracy movement.’” Xiaomi “said on Monday it was engaging a third-party expert to assess the allegations by Lithuania that its smartphones carry built-in censorship capabilities.”

Policing and Policy

DHS Announces It Will Create Law Enforcement Coordination Council

Axios (9/29, Saric) reports the US Department of Homeland Security (DHS) “announced Wednesday that it will create a council to ‘promote best practices in its law enforcement activities.’” The department “said the new Law Enforcement Coordination Council will be the first unified law enforcement coordination body at DHS and will cover everything from training curricula to use of force policies. The LECC will be chaired by Mayorkas and act as a governing organization for the department’s law enforcement agencies and oversight bodies, Mayorkas told ABC News Wednesday. The LECC will be split into two sub-committees, one of which will examine use of force policies across the department and its components, while the other will review law enforcement training techniques and curricula, per the press release.”

The Hill (9/29, Beals) reports, “More specifically, the council’s responsibilities will include evaluating new challenges and potential policy changes while also coordinating the distribution of information and encouraging best practices, DHS said. ‘The Law Enforcement Coordination Council will better enable the Department to combat current and future threats to our country, while ensuring the safety of both our law enforcement personnel and the diverse communities we serve,’ Mayorkas said in the release.”

Senate Bill Targets Broken US Prison Security Cameras

The AP (9/29, Balsamo) reports, “Failing security cameras in federal prisons have allowed inmates to escape undetected and were at the center of the investigation when wealthy financier Jeffrey Epstein killed himself behind bars in 2019,” and “now, lawmakers want to force the Bureau of Prisons to repair and upgrade security systems. ‘Blind spots, lost footage, and technical failures are unacceptable in federal prisons, which must be cleaned up and held to the highest standards,’ said Sen. Jon Ossoff, D-Ga., who introduced bipartisan legislation Wednesday to require the bureau and Justice Department to ensure there is adequate security camera coverage across the agency’s 122 federal prisons.” The AP adds, “Ossoff, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Dick

Durbin and Sen. Chuck Grassley, the panel's top Republican, say issues with cameras – which sometimes are not working or recorded over too frequently – make it difficult for authorities to properly investigate allegations of misconduct.”

California Police Reform Bill Permits Officer Decertification, But Leaves Qualified Immunity Issue Unresolved

USA Today (9/29, Abdollah) reports that Senate Bill 2, which has been passed by the California legislature, “aims to address problem law enforcement officers who jump from department to department, but it fails to deal with an ambiguity in state law that makes it easier for cops to claim immunity from liability when they hurt or kill people.” The legislation “aims to hold the state's roughly 80,000 law enforcement officers accountable by decertifying those who engage in serious misconduct, effectively preventing them from policing in California.” Backers of the bill expect Gov. Gavin Newsom (D) to sign it.

Bipartisan House Lawmakers Unveil Addiction, Mental Health Legislative Plan

“A bipartisan group of 144 House lawmakers plans to unveil their agenda Wednesday for expanding access to mental health care and combating the growing drug epidemic after overdose deaths hit new highs, CQ Roll Call has learned first exclusively,” Roll Call (9/29, Raman) reports. The “blueprint outlining the group's legislative goals includes 12 policy subcategories including prevention, treatment, rural and underserved communities, workforce development, first responders, interdiction, children and families, veterans, prescribing, education, health care access and health parity.”

New Zealand Criminalizes Terrorist Plotting After Knife Attack

The AP (9/29) reports, “New Zealand politicians on Thursday passed a law that makes plotting a terrorist attack a crime, fixing a legal loophole that was exposed earlier this month by a violent knife attack.” The AP adds, “The new law had been months in the planning but was hurried through Parliament after an extremist inspired by the Islamic State group grabbed a knife at an Auckland supermarket on Sept. 3 and began stabbing shoppers. He wounded five while two others were injured in the chaos. All have been recovering. After the attack this month, Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern vowed to pass the new legislation by the end of September. But Ardern also said that even had the new law been in place, it may not necessarily have stopped” the attack

Internal Report Gives Baltimore Police High Marks For Response To Protests In 2020

The Baltimore Sun (9/29, Anderson) reports, “Baltimore Police officers largely upheld protesters rights during nightly demonstrations in 2020 following the death of George Floyd, a review by the agency has found.” According to the Sun, “The police department issued its ‘Assessment of 2020 First Amendment Protected Activities’ report as required as part of a federal consent decree, assessing how officers treated individuals demonstrating in response to Floyd's death in May and June 2020. The report also looked at the department's response to protests at Vice President Mike Pence's visit to Baltimore during the Republican National Convention in August last year. ‘BPD's response to protest environments in 2020 was compliant with policy requirements and did not infringe on protesters' First Amendment rights,' according to the report, which analyzed internal and external complaints, use of force incidents and other measures.”

Law enforcement officers are responding to wildland fires across the nation as fires increase in size, frequency, and intensity. The International Association of Fire Chiefs' (IAFC) Ready, Set, Go! Program has partnered with the National Sheriffs' Association (NSA) and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) to enhance law enforcement officers' safety and understanding of their critical role during wildland fire events.

The RSG for Law Enforcement Video and RSG for Law Enforcement Flyer provides general knowledge to help law enforcement officials, who are often first to arrive, assess the scene and take appropriate action for each situation they may face, resulting in preservation of life and property. The information and guidance in these resources are intended to be shared during law enforcement shift changes and training – the flyer should be kept in patrol cars for reference.

Collaboration between first response disciplines is vital to the successful outcome of every event. IAFC Wildland Fire Programs values its partnership with the IACP and NSA for the improvement of our responders' safety and outcomes for the communities we serve.

Capitol Police Chief: Threats Against Congress Are Historically High

The AP (9/29, Balsamo, Long) reports the new chief of the US Capitol Police “says the force, still struggling six months after an insurrection that left its officers battled,” bloodied, and bruised, “cannot afford to be complacent.” In an interview with The AP, J. Thomas Manger “said his force is seeing a historically high number of threats against lawmakers, thousands more than just a few years ago.” He also “predicts authorities will respond to close to 9,000 threats against members of Congress in 2021 – more than 4,100 had been reported from January to March.” Manger said, “We have never had the level of threats against members of Congress that we’re seeing today. Clearly, we’ve got a bigger job in terms of the protection aspect of our responsibilities, we’ve got a bigger job than we used to.”

Parents Are Warned When Child Kidnappings Are Most Likely Attempted

The New York Post (9/29, Schmidt) reports, “With school back in session, experts are warning parents to educate their children about personal safety, especially while they’re traveling to and from school. That’s when attempted abductions of children are most likely to happen by a non-relative or stranger, according to the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children (NCMEC).” The center “says on its website that school-age children are at the greatest risk of an attempted abduction on school days compared to weekend days. According to the center, attempted abductions of school-age children were most likely to happen before school (7 a.m. – 9 a.m.), right after school (3 p.m. – 4 p.m.) and after dinner (6 p.m. – 7 p.m.).”

FBI: US Faces Twice As Many Domestic Terror Threats As Foreign

Newsweek (9/29, Hutzler) reports the US is facing “far more domestic terror threats than those from international parties, according to the FBI.” Timothy Langan, assistant director of the bureau’s Counterterrorism Division, “told lawmakers Wednesday that the US is approaching more than 2,700 domestic terrorism threats.” The number of international “terror threats is under 1,000, Langan said when asked by Representative Nancy Mace to provide data on the FBI’s caseload.” Langan also “noted that the ‘greatest terrorism threat’ is posed by lone actors or small cells radicalized online looking to attack ‘soft targets with easily accessible weapons.’”

Coroner Highlights Suspected Illicit Drug Toxicity Deaths In British Columbia

The Canadian Press (9/29) reports, “suspected illicit drug toxicity deaths in July were the second highest...ever recorded in a single month” in British Columbia, according to that province’s coroner. The coroner release a report that shows those “deaths reached 184 in July, which tied with those in January and fell just behind June 2020,” when “186 people died.” CTV News (CAN) (9/29) also covers this story.

Technology

House Passes Federal Cybersecurity Legislation

The Hill (9/29, Miller) reports the House on Wednesday “passed bipartisan legislation aimed at strengthening the federal cybersecurity workforce, an issue that has garnered support following a year of massive information security incidents.” The Federal Rotational Cyber Workforce Program Act, “sponsored by Reps. Ro Khanna (D-Calif.) and Nancy Mace (R-S.C.), would establish a program to allow cybersecurity professionals to rotate through multiple federal agencies and enhance their expertise.” The bill would also “encourage federal agency leaders to identify cybersecurity positions that can be rotated through government, and give the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) jurisdiction over the Federal Rotational Cyber Workforce Program.”

German Cybersecurity Watchdog Probing Xiaomi Mobile Phone

Reuters (9/29, Rinke, Schimroszik) reports Germany’s federal cybersecurity watchdog, “the BSI, is conducting a technical examination of a mobile phone manufactured by China’s Xiaomi Corp, a spokesperson for the interior ministry told Reuters on Wednesday.” The spokesperson did not “provide further details on what kind of examination the agency was carrying out,” but Lithuania’s state cybersecurity body “said last week that Xiaomi phones had a built-in ability to detect and censor terms such as ‘Free Tibet,’ ‘Long live Taiwan independence’ or ‘democracy movement.’” Xiaomi “said on Monday it was engaging a third-party expert to assess the allegations by Lithuania that its smartphones carry built-in censorship capabilities.”

Policing and Policy

Police Groups Challenge GOP Senator's Narrative On Failed Police Reform Negotiations

The Washington Post (9/28, Sonmez, DeBonis) reports that on Tuesday, the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the Fraternal Order of Police – two of the “country’s largest groups representing” law enforcement officers – “said...that ‘defunding the police’ was not proposed in the policing reform negotiations that fell apart in Congress last week, in an apparent pushback against the lead Republican negotiator’s claim.” The Post says the two groups “said in a joint statement Tuesday that they were ‘disappointed that Senate negotiators could not reach agreement on police reform legislation’ and remain ‘committed to enacting carefully balanced and thoughtful legislation’ on the topic.” The Post adds, “After the talks fell apart without a deal, Sen. Tim Scott (S.C.), the lead Republican negotiator, blamed Democrats, claiming that their push to ‘defund’ law enforcement made it impossible to agree on legislation. President Biden, Democratic congressional leaders, and Bass and Booker have rejected the idea of slashing police departments’ budgets.”

CNN (9/28, Nickeas, LeBlanc) reports that Scott “had spent some six months with Democratic Sen. Cory Booker and Rep. Karen Bass trying to hash out a deal that could win 60 votes in the Senate, but talks were stymied by a number of complicated issues like qualified immunity, a legal doctrine that protects police officers from being sued in civil court. The joint statement from the FOP and the IACP said the bill would have ‘strengthened the law enforcement profession and helped improve the state of community police engagement without compromising management and officers’ rights, authorities, and legal protections.’ ‘Our organizations remain steadfast in working with all interested parties who are willing to take a fact-based approach to enact effective and lasting change, to avoid a patchwork of state laws that do not provide uniform standards and guidance to the policing profession,’ the two groups said.”

House Approves Bill To End Sentencing Disparity For Crack, Powder Cocaine

The Hill (9/28, Marcos) reports that on Tuesday, the House “passed legislation...that would eliminate the federal disparity in prison sentences for crack and powder cocaine offenses, in an effort to enact criminal justice reform on a bipartisan basis.” The legislation “is meant to address a gap that its proponents say has largely fallen on Black people and other people of color.” The Hill says while lawmakers passed the bill in a 361-66 vote, the measure “divided Republicans. A majority of House Republicans voted for the bill with all Democrats, but the 66 votes in opposition all came from the GOP.”

Federal Courts Asks Congress To Add More Judges To Overworked Districts

Roll Call (9/28, Ruger) reports, “Federal court officials for decades have asked Congress to add judges to overworked district courts that are most used by the public – and now they say a Supreme Court decision from 2020 has created a need for even more.” Roll Call explains that on Tuesday, the US Judicial Conference “announced it has now recommended that Congress add another five judges” to district courts in Oklahoma, “where the number of criminal cases skyrocketed in the year after the Supreme Court’s ruling in McGirt v. Oklahoma.” The case held that criminal prosecutions of Native Americans in the eastern part of the state can only take place in federal courts. Roll Call adds that while “Congress hasn’t approved reinforcements to the nation’s lower courts in a comprehensive way since 1990,” there was some movement on the issue this year, “with bipartisan legislation introduced in the House and Senate that would create 77 new district court judgeships.”

Fairfax County, Virginia Ends Arrest Blotter Over Concerns Data Could Be Used To Deport Immigrants

The Washington Post (9/28, Jouvenal) reports that police in Fairfax County, Virginia “have stopped publishing a weekly arrest blotter after county officials found it violated a policy that restricts the dissemination of personal information that could aid immigration enforcement.” The Post adds, “Immigrant rights and civil liberties groups had been pushing for the change, arguing the weekly compilations that include arrestees’ addresses and other details could allow U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to target immigrants for deportation and raise privacy concerns,” but “open-government advocates and some politicians have criticized the move, saying it decreases police transparency and keeps critical safety information from the public, including details about some violent, sex and property crimes.”

San Francisco Lawmakers Consider Allowing Sheriff’s Deputies To Work As Security Guards In Effort To Curb Shoplifting

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/28, Whiting) reports, “San Francisco sheriff’s deputies could soon be eligible to work part time as security guards for private businesses under new legislation written in an effort to combat retail theft.” On Tuesday, San Francisco Supervisor Ahsha Safaí “introduced legislation to allow deputies to provide security services at retail stores and commercial districts. They would be off-duty and paid overtime by the retailers or business districts – not by the city. San Francisco police officers have long been able to earn extra income as private security guards while not on duty. Safaí’s legislation would extend the program to sheriff’s deputies.”

New Jersey Governor Signs Bill Aimed At Increasing Diversity Among Police

The AP (9/28) reports, “New Jersey will aim to increase racial diversity among law enforcement officers under new legislation Gov. Phil Murphy signed Tuesday.” The bill passed with legislature without opposition in June, and it “requires the state’s Civil Service Commission to implement programs to make law enforcement more representative and equitable. Among the measures listed in the bill is a mandate to analyze the racial composition of police agencies in the state, with the goal of identifying those that could benefit from eliminating hiring preferences based on applicants’ residency. The bill’s sponsors have said they want to be sure that the racial makeup of police forces reflect the demographics of the towns they work in.”

The National Use-of-Force Data Collection will help foster more informed conversations around use-of-force incidents and demonstrate law enforcement's commitment to transparency, fair and impartial policing, and community trust. This can only happen if agencies continue to opt in and participate. Learn more about the IACP’s support of this initiative and how you can get involved.

Gunman In Mass Shooting At Maryland Newspaper Gets Over 5 Life Sentences

The AP (9/28, Witte) reports that on Tuesday, a state court in Maryland sentenced Jarrod Ramos – the gunman who killed five in a mass shooting at the Capital Gazette newspaper in 2018 – “to more than five life terms without the possibility of parole.” According to prosecutors, “Ramos...acted out of revenge against the newspaper after it published a story about his guilty plea to a misdemeanor charge of harassing a former high school classmate in 2011.” He attempted to plead insanity, but a jury rejected that defense after his trial in July. Ramos says the sentencing judge also gave Ramos “an additional 345 years to underscore the fact that he would never be released from prison. And he ordered another life sentence for the attempted murder of” a photographer who testified that Ramos shot at him.

Multi-Agency Operation Targeting Violent Crime In Kansas Nets 1,000 Arrests

The Wichita (KS) Eagle (9/28, Leiker) reports, “Wichita police say a targeted, summertime effort to reduce violent crime in the city netted more than 1,000 offender arrests, more than $200,000 in seized cash and took more than 200 guns and $3 million in illegal narcotics off the streets.” The program – codenamed “Operation Triple Beam” – “ran for 60 days between July and September and targeted violent, weapons and felony drug crimes.” The Eagle continues, “The federal crackdown program is just one of several crime-reduction initiatives that have been undertaken by the Wichita Police Department in recent years as the city’s violent crime rate continues to linger above the national average.” The Eagle adds that the Drug Enforcement Administration was among several law enforcement agencies to participate in the operation.

Operating Targeting Gang Activity In Nebraska Nets 231 Arrests

The Omaha (NE) World-Herald (9/28, Glissmann) reports, "A four-month operation targeting gang activity in the Omaha metro area has resulted in 231 arrests, including those of 144 purported gang members, as well as the seizure of numerous firearms and illicit narcotics." The effort was led by the U.S. Marshals Service Metro Fugitive Task Force and the Omaha and Lincoln Police Departments." According to the World-Herald, "In addition to the arrests, task force officers seized 86 firearms, about 19 kilos (approximately 42 pounds) of narcotics worth an estimated $822,000, 838 fentanyl pills and almost $49,000 in cash. Officers also found three missing children and recovered two stolen vehicles, according to a press release on the effort."

Social Media Platforms Under Pressure To Stop Illegal Drug Sales

The Washington Post (9/28, Lerman, De Vyrick) reports from San Francisco that on Monday, the DEA "issued a warning about the increase of fake pills bought online that include fentanyl, a synthetic opioid that can be fatal in small doses," and "in an interview, DEA Administrator Anne Milgram specifically called out Snapchat and TikTok, two apps that are popular with teenagers and young adults, for not doing more to combat sales, and said that the agency was going to go to social media companies with specific demands," but "it's not yet clear what those demands will be or how they might help." The Post adds, "Companies have repeatedly said they're working to rid their sites of drug deals by hiring extra moderators, using artificial-intelligence algorithms to root out illegal material and limiting searches for keywords related to drugs," but "prescription and other drugs can still easily be found for sale."

Senate Bill Would Give Organizations 24 Hours To Report Ransomware Attack Payments

The Hill (9/28) reports, "The leaders of the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee on Tuesday introduced legislation that would give set timelines for cyber incident reporting, including giving certain organizations 24 hours to report if they paid the sum demanded in a ransomware attack." Policing and Policy

Police Groups Challenge GOP Senator's Narrative On Failed Police Reform Negotiations

The Washington Post (9/28, Sonmez, DeBonis) reports that on Tuesday, the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the Fraternal Order of Police – two of the “country’s largest groups representing” law enforcement officers – “said...that ‘defunding the police’ was not proposed in the policing reform negotiations that fell apart in Congress last week, in an apparent pushback against the lead Republican negotiator’s claim.” The Post says the two groups “said in a joint statement Tuesday that they were ‘disappointed that Senate negotiators could not reach agreement on police reform legislation’ and remain ‘committed to enacting carefully balanced and thoughtful legislation’ on the topic.” The Post adds, “After the talks fell apart without a deal, Sen. Tim Scott (S.C.), the lead Republican negotiator, blamed Democrats, claiming that their push to ‘defund’ law enforcement made it impossible to agree on legislation. President Biden, Democratic congressional leaders, and Bass and Booker have rejected the idea of slashing police departments’ budgets.”

CNN (9/28, Nickeas, LeBlanc) reports that Scott “had spent some six months with Democratic Sen. Cory Booker and Rep. Karen Bass trying to hash out a deal that could win 60 votes in the Senate, but talks were stymied by a number of complicated issues like qualified immunity, a legal doctrine that protects police officers from being sued in civil court. The joint statement from the FOP and the IACP said the bill would have ‘strengthened the law enforcement profession and helped improve the state of community police engagement without compromising management and officers’ rights, authorities, and legal protections.’ ‘Our organizations remain steadfast in working with all interested parties who are willing to take a fact-based approach to enact effective and lasting change, to avoid a patchwork of state laws that do not provide uniform standards and guidance to the policing profession,’ the two groups said.”

House Approves Bill To End Sentencing Disparity For Crack, Powder Cocaine

The Hill (9/28, Marcos) reports that on Tuesday, the House “passed legislation...that would eliminate the federal disparity in prison sentences for crack and powder cocaine offenses, in an effort to enact criminal justice reform on a bipartisan basis.” The legislation “is meant to address a gap that its proponents say has largely fallen on Black people and other people of color.” The Hill says while lawmakers passed the bill in a 361-66 vote, the measure “divided Republicans. A majority of House Republicans voted for the bill with all Democrats, but the 66 votes in opposition all came from the GOP.”

Federal Courts Asks Congress To Add More Judges To Overworked Districts

Roll Call (9/28, Ruger) reports, “Federal court officials for decades have asked Congress to add judges to overworked district courts that are most used by the public – and now they say a Supreme Court decision from 2020 has created a need for even more.” Roll Call explains that on Tuesday, the US Judicial Conference “announced it has now recommended that Congress add another five judges” to district courts in Oklahoma, “where the number of criminal cases skyrocketed in the year after the Supreme Court’s ruling in McGirt v. Oklahoma.” The case held that criminal prosecutions of Native Americans in the eastern part of the state can only take place in federal courts. Roll Call adds that while “Congress hasn’t approved reinforcements to the nation’s lower courts in a comprehensive way since 1990,” there was some movement on the issue this year, “with bipartisan legislation introduced in the House and Senate that would create 77 new district court judgeships.”

Fairfax County, Virginia Ends Arrest Blotter Over Concerns Data Could Be Used To Deport Immigrants

The Washington Post (9/28, Jouvenal) reports that police in Fairfax County, Virginia “have stopped publishing a weekly arrest blotter after county officials found it violated a policy that restricts the dissemination of personal information that could aid immigration enforcement.” The Post adds, “Immigrant rights and civil liberties groups had been pushing for the change, arguing the weekly compilations that include arrestees’ addresses and other details could allow U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to target immigrants for deportation and raise privacy concerns,” but “open-government advocates and some politicians have criticized the move, saying it decreases police transparency and keeps critical safety information from the public, including details about some violent, sex and property crimes.”

San Francisco Lawmakers Consider Allowing Sheriff’s Deputies To Work As Security Guards In Effort To Curb Shoplifting

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/28, Whiting) reports, “San Francisco sheriff’s deputies could soon be eligible to work part time as security guards for private businesses under new legislation written in an effort to combat retail theft.” On Tuesday, San Francisco Supervisor Ahsha Safaí “introduced legislation to allow deputies to provide security services at retail stores and commercial districts. They would be off-duty and paid overtime by the retailers or business districts – not by the city. San Francisco police officers have long been able to earn extra income as private security guards while not on duty. Safaí’s legislation would extend the program to sheriff’s deputies.”

New Jersey Governor Signs Bill Aimed At Increasing Diversity Among Police

The AP (9/28) reports, “New Jersey will aim to increase racial diversity among law enforcement officers under new legislation Gov. Phil Murphy signed Tuesday.” The bill passed with legislature without opposition in June, and it “requires the state’s Civil Service Commission to implement programs to make law enforcement more representative and equitable. Among the measures listed in the bill is a mandate to analyze the racial composition of police agencies in the state, with the goal of identifying those that could benefit from eliminating hiring preferences based on applicants’ residency. The bill’s sponsors have said they want to be sure that the racial makeup of police forces reflect the demographics of the towns they work in.”

The National Use-of-Force Data Collection will help foster more informed conversations around use-of-force incidents and demonstrate law enforcement's commitment to transparency, fair and impartial policing, and community trust. This can only happen if agencies continue to opt in and participate. Learn more about the IACP’s support of this initiative and how you can get involved.

Gunman In Mass Shooting At Maryland Newspaper Gets Over 5 Life Sentences

The AP (9/28, Witte) reports that on Tuesday, a state court in Maryland sentenced Jarrod Ramos – the gunman who killed five in a mass shooting at the Capital Gazette newspaper in 2018 – “to more than five life terms without the possibility of parole.” According to prosecutors, “Ramos...acted out of revenge against the newspaper after it published a story about his guilty plea to a misdemeanor charge of harassing a former high school classmate in 2011.” He attempted to plead insanity, but a jury rejected that defense after his trial in July. Ramos says the sentencing judge also gave Ramos “an additional 345 years to underscore the fact that he would never be released from prison. And he ordered another life sentence for the attempted murder of” a photographer who testified that Ramos shot at him.

2041. Ignoring Science and the Constitution, Police Chiefs Push for Mass Incarceration of Black Men

Dear Officer,

Domestic violence calls can be some of the most difficult and potentially dangerous cases to handle. In many cases, the female is the perpetrator and the male is the victim.

Unfortunately, the IACP predominant aggressor criteria lack scientific validation. Worse, they bias the officer against the male party, contributing to the broader societal problem of over-incarceration of Black men – see press release, below.

The Coalition to End Domestic Violence urges you to contact the IACP Executive Director Vincent Talucci to express your concerns with the IACP approach. Here's his email address: talucci@theiacp.org

Sincerely,

Edward E. Bartlett, PhD

Ignoring Science and the Constitution, Police Chiefs Push for Mass Incarceration of Black Men

WASHINGTON / September 28, 2021 – African-Americans experience the highest incarceration rates of any group in the United States (1). And the over-incarceration of Black men is recognized as a threat to fundamental notions of justice (2). A new report reveals that policies currently being promoted by the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) are a major cause of the mass incarceration of men. Titled “Predominant Aggressor Policies and the Mass Incarceration of Men,” the report probes the predominant aggressor policies currently being advanced by the IACP.

The IACP predominant aggressor publications reveal pervasive sex bias. For example, the IACP’s “Intimate Partner Violence Response: Policy and Training Content Guidelines” (3) advises front-line police officers to evaluate whether there is a “physical size difference between the parties” in order to decide whether to arrest the male or female. This is likely to sway the officer’s decision to arrest the male, even if the female, who is physically smaller, initiated violence.

The IACP also has developed a training program on “Predominant Aggressor Determination” (4) that is even more biased:

1. Instructs officers to assess the “Comparative height and weight” of the parties (Slide 38).
2. Describes “Presence of calm” as an indication of “power and control” (Slide 10)
3. Uses an implausible case example that reinforces the flawed “male-as-perpetrator, female-as-victim” stereotype (Slides 13-24)

According to the Department of Justice, 77% of persons arrested for domestic violence are male (5), even though scientific surveys reveal that each year, Black men are more likely than Black women to be the victims of partner abuse (6):

- Black men: 1.47 million victims
- Black women: 1.38 million victims

The IACP recommendations openly violate Constitutional guarantees of equal treatment under the law:

1. The Ms. Foundation for Women decries how the “Criminalization of social problems has led to mass incarceration of men, especially young men of color, decimating marginalized communities.” (7)
2. One public policy group has sharply criticized the gender-profiling of men (8) and concludes that “Domestic violence policies have contributed significantly to increasing the number of persons living in violent places: prisons and jails.” (9)

The “Predominant Aggressor Policies and the Mass Incarceration of Men” report, written by the Coalition to End Domestic Violence, is available online: <http://endtodv.org/wp-content/uploads/2021/09/Predominant-Aggressor-Mass-Incarceration.pdf>

Membership renewals to be sent out soon

In the past year, we have been as active as ever in the legislature, working on critical issues such as COVID-19, the many police reform discussions in Illinois and nationally, and dozens more.

We don't take it for granted that you value your membership in the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police. Plus, we are very engaged on social media, telling the positive story about law enforcement. We also strive to provide you with ongoing professional development and training. Your membership renewal for 2022 will be sent to you via email within the next week or so, and we hope you eagerly renew. Just follow the instructions in the email to renew, and write to Carmen Elliott (carmen@ilchiefs.org) if you have any questions about that process.

And don't hesitate to contact Executive Director Ed Wojcicki (ed@ilchiefs.org) or any member of the Board of Officers if you have any questions or concerns about what's happening in your association.

DEA Warns Many Pills On Black Market Have Deadly Amounts Of Fentanyl

The Washington Post (9/27, Barrett, Dwoskin) reports that on Monday, the Drug Enforcement Administration “issued a public warning...that a growing number of pain medications bought on the black market are laced with the synthetic opioid fentanyl or the stimulant methamphetamine, driving overdose deaths to record levels.” DEA Administrator Anne Milgram told The Washington Post, “We are in the midst, in my view, of an overdose crisis, and the counterfeit pills are driving so much of it.” The Post adds that there were 93,000 overdose deaths last year, up nearly 30% over 2019.

The New York Times (9/27, Vigdor) reports the DEA “warned...that a record number of the 9.5 million fake prescription pills it had seized in the United States this year contained lethal amounts of fentanyl” as “two of every five fake pills that have been seized this year have contained lethal amounts of fentanyl.” The Times adds that the “vast majority of the counterfeit pills...were brought into the United States from Mexico” and “the chemicals used to make them come from China, the agency said.”

New York Judge Blocks Police From Scouring Sealed Arrest Records

The AP (9/27, Sisak) reports, “A judge on Monday barred New York City police officers from accessing sealed arrest records without a court order, halting a long-standing practice of plying confidential information in department files to aid investigations, target suspects and shape policing decisions.” The AP adds, “State Judge Lyle Frank in Manhattan issued a preliminary injunction saying that the police department’s unfettered use of sealed records violated a 1976 state law shielding arrest and court files of criminal defendants whose cases end without a conviction. In most cases, Frank said, the law requires court approval for police to see those records, which include arrest reports, photographs and fingerprints. He said police can still use aggregate arrest data without violating the sealing law, which was enacted to protect people from suffering reputational harm merely for being accused of a crime.”

Minnesota Prison Pilot Program Aims To Reduce Drug-Laced Mail

The AP (9/27, Hamer) reports from Madison, Wisconsin, “A new mail policy at Fox Lake Correctional Institution aimed at curbing the infiltration of dangerous drug-laced paper could expand to all prisons, but inmates say their concerns about missing and cut-off documents aren’t being addressed.” According to the AP, “Under the pilot policy, started in April, inmates receive only photocopies of their mail, not the originals, which staff later shred. The policy doesn’t apply to legal documents.” The AP adds, “Prisoners say they have seen months-long delays in receiving mail, educational materials denied, missing pages and the margins of letters cut off with no way to get the missing material back,” but “despite complaints, the Department of Corrections said it could expand the policy given the success it has shown so far in reducing overdoses and violent behavior associated with K2 or ‘spice.’”

Chicago Mayor Announces Citywide Strategic Plan To Curb Gender-Based Violent, Human Trafficking

The Chicago Tribune (9/27, Fry) reports that Chicago Mayor Lori Lightfoot “announced Monday that she is launching the first “citywide strategic plan” that will address gender-based violence and human trafficking and is dedicating $25 million to the initiative. Work to create the plan started in February when Lightfoot formed the Gender-Based Violence Advisory Council and dedicated $2.5 million toward domestic violence services. The new plan seeks to use all corners of the city’s government to address and prevent these problems in a trauma-informed and culturally specific ways, Lightfoot said.” According to the Tribune, “The $25 million will go toward emergency financial assistance, legal services, housing, services for young people who experience or witness violence at home and prevention education efforts, according to the mayor’s office.”

Europol "said the cartel set up a 'cocaine pipeline' from South America to Spain and other European countries. It was 'flooding Europe with cocaine,' Europol said in a statement. The coordinated international operation involved crime-fighting agencies from Spain, Germany, Croatia, Slovenia, Serbia and Colombia, according to Spanish police. The investigation also took police to Brazil, the Dominican Republic and Dubai, United Arab Emirates. Politico: Covert USPS Unit Probed Social Media After Jan. 6

Politico (9/27, Swan) reports, "In the days after the Jan. 6 attack on the Capitol, an obscure arm of the U.S. Postal Service did some serious internet sleuthing." According to Politico, "On Jan. 11, the United States Postal Inspection Service's Internet Covert Operations Program – better known as iCOP – sent bulletins to law enforcement agencies around the country on how to view social media posts that had been deleted. It also described its scrutiny of posts on the fringe social media network Wimkin." Politico adds, "Few Americans are aware that the same organization that delivers their mail also runs a robust surveillance operation rooted in an agency that dates back to the 18th century," and "iCOP's involvement raises questions about how broad the mandate of the Postal Service's policing arm has grown from its stated mission of keeping mail deliverers safe."

Police In Eight European Countries Bust Balkan Cartel's "Cocaine Pipeline"

The AP (9/27) reports from Madrid, Spain, "Law enforcement agencies from eight European countries pounced on a Balkan crime organization allegedly running the continent's largest cocaine distribution network, making 61 arrests and seizing more than four metric tons (4.4 tons) of the drug, authorities said Monday." Europol "said the cartel set up a 'cocaine pipeline' from South America to Spain and other European countries. It was 'flooding Europe with cocaine,' Europol said in a statement. The coordinated international operation involved crime-fighting agencies from Spain, Germany, Croatia, Slovenia, Serbia and Colombia, according to Spanish police. The investigation also took police to Brazil, the Dominican Republic and Dubai, United Arab Emirates. The smuggling gang was made up mostly of eastern Europeans, including what Europol said were two 'high-value targets.'"

FBI: Hate Crimes Increased In Indiana In 2020

The Indianapolis Star (9/27, Nelson) reports, "Hate crimes in Indiana spiked in 2020, the highest in at least two decades, according to recently released FBI data." The Star adds that 186 hate crimes "were reported to the bureau last year, 106 more hate crimes reported than in 2019 – a 133% increase year over year and the most reported in the last two decades of data collected. The 2020 data, released by the bureau in the FBI's Uniform Crime Report, shows the majority of crimes were race-related, making up 121 of the reported crimes. Most of those, over 34%, were anti-Black crimes, followed by anti-white cases at nearly 21% of the total crimes. Religious hate crimes were the second-highest category, with 32 cases, followed by sexual orientation with 22 reports."

Politico: Covert USPS Unit Probed Social Media After Jan. 6

Politico (9/27, Swan) reports, "In the days after the Jan. 6 attack on the Capitol, an obscure arm of the U.S. Postal Service did some serious internet sleuthing." According to Politico, "On Jan. 11, the United States Postal Inspection Service's Internet Covert Operations Program – better known as iCOP – sent bulletins to law enforcement agencies around the country on how to view social media posts that had been deleted. It also described its scrutiny of posts on the fringe social media network Wimkin." Politico adds, "Few Americans are aware that the same organization that delivers their mail also runs a robust surveillance operation rooted in an agency that dates back to the 18th century," and "iCOP's involvement raises questions about how broad the mandate of the Postal Service's policing arm has grown from its stated mission of keeping mail deliverers safe."

Subject: RE: Tier II accreditation

The differences are more in depth on topics including:

- Training
- Operations
- Administration
- Personnel

The two tiers are not necessarily based on size but a more comprehensive review of the listed topics.

The two assessors conduct a 2-day on-site assessment that includes policy and file review, staff interviews, officer ride-a-longs and facility tour and inspection and vehicle inspection.

The two assessors will compile an assessment report and provide a recommendation to the ILEAP Committee Chairperson. This will be reviewed and distributed to the ILACP council for review and action. If granted, accreditation is valid for four years.

This shows that the agency is compliant with policies and standards developed by the ILACP state standards. There are Board members that are from LE agencies as well as insurance, academia, etc.

$800 annual Tier 2 accreditation cost.

Bob Zielinski is the NPD Accreditation Manager.

The assessors stated that there was one call for public comment. They were alone in the room to take any calls during this time.

The assessors will submit their report to the council, it will be reviewed and voted on and notification will be made to the agency after that time. Specific timeline unknown.

I'd like to talk to someone about the Tier II accreditation process. I'm not sure if that's possible, but I'd like to know what some of the differences are in what is being evaluated with these 180 standards, vs. the fewer standards in the Tier I evaluation, how those evaluations are being conducted, what the timeline is for completion, what benefits the Tier I certification brought to the department, any costs involved, who is the accreditation manager, how many people called in for the public comment yesterday (we were able to get something very short into last Wednesday's paper), how long the process takes and when the process is expected to be wrapped up.

Policing and Policy

Portland, Oregon Grappling With Surge In Violence

On its website, CNN (9/25, Morris) discusses how Portland, Oregon “is currently engulfed in fighting a second pandemic on top of Covid-19.” Portland City Commissioner Mingus Mapps informed CNN, “In the last year we have seen a stunning amount of gun violence.” Mapps also said, “Gang violence has caught fire like a wildfire. And now we are in a dysfunctional cycle of potentially revenge shootings.” Meanwhile, Portland Police Chief Chuck Lovell “agrees that some of the reform from 2020’s sustained protests had a positive impact on their policing. But he says many of those positives are now overshadowed by the fallout.”

Data: Hundreds Of COVID Outbreaks Have Occurred At Los Angeles Police, Fire Agencies

The Los Angeles Times (9/26) reports data the Times acquired via a public records request show that “Los Angeles County health officials have identified hundreds of coronavirus outbreaks at police and fire agencies since the start of the pandemic.” The outbreaks, which have been responsible for in excess of 2,500 coronavirus infections, have happened “in public safety agencies large and small across the county. More than half, however, were in just two agencies: the Los Angeles Police Department and the Los Angeles Fire Department – where members are actively fighting public health measures to control such spread.” The Times adds, “Of 211 identified outbreaks of three or more coronavirus cases at police or fire agencies in L.A. County between March 2020 and last month, 112 were linked to the LAPD and LAFD, according to the data.”

LAPD Scales Back Spending For Training, Equipment For Protests, Unrest

The Los Angeles Times (9/24, Rector) reports, “Los Angeles police officials have scaled back significantly the cost of a plan to train officers and purchase equipment they say will improve the department’s response to large protests and civil unrest, according to documents released Friday.”

According to the Times, “The $18.5-million cost of the proposed plan, which the Los Angeles City Council would have to approve on top of the LAPD’s existing budget, is about a quarter of the nearly $67 million the department previously estimated it would need to address a raft of reforms called for in various reports on its handling of demonstrations and unrest. The new plan, which was outlined in a report released Friday by the Police Commission, calls for nearly $12.6 million to be spent on training thousands of officers on, among other tactics, the use of rifles that fire hard-foam projectiles to control large crowds.”

Law Enforcement Agencies Share Benefits Of Co-Response Mental Health Programs

The Boulder (CO) Daily Camera (9/26) reports, “On the days when Spencer Siverling’s feelings of self-doubt swell and become too much, she sits at home with a workbook and jots down her feelings. Other times, when she needs to relax and calm her anxiety, she meditates using an app that guides her through ways to slow her breathing and clear her mind.” The Daily Camera adds, “These are both methods Siverling, 23, has learned from Longmont mental health professionals who have taught her how to cope with her depression. But that’s not the only positive skill they’ve helped her learn. Through their support, they’ve shown her she’s not alone. Longmont Public Safety’s CORE team is one of many co-response teams that is made up of mental health professionals who work with local law enforcement agencies to address behavioral health-related calls.” In 2018, “the Longmont Public Safety Department began its CORE program to help address the area’s growing need for mental health resources.”

Security, Crime, and Drugs

Law Enforcement Officials Identify Perpetrator Of Deadly Kroger Shooting

The Washington Post (9/24) reports on the shooting that occurred Thursday at a Kroger grocery store in Collierville, Tennessee, which was “at least the third” shooting “to take place at a grocery store in recent months.” According to the Post, “Police identified the shooter as Uk Thang, 29, a third-party vendor who worked selling sushi in the store.” In total, 15 individuals were shot, 10 of whom were store workers and 5 of whom were customers, including a 70-year-old woman who died. Collierville Police Chief Dale Lane “confirmed that police removed electronic devices from the gunman’s apartment that was searched Thursday.”

WPost Analysis Finds Uptick In Supermarket Shootings. A Washington Post (9/25) analysis says that a gunman last week began firing within “a Kroger supermarket outside Memphis, turning the routine task of grocery shopping into a terrifying encounter with gun violence.” Such incidents have ceased being exceptional, as no less than “three other deadly shootings have taken place at supermarkets this year, continuing a recent trend.” Federal Bureau of Investigation data shows that “shootings at grocery stores have risen in recent years. Between 2000 and 2020, 78 people were killed in 28 such incidents, FBI data shows.”

Overdoses Involving Fentanyl Have Killed More Than 1,200 Colorado Residents Since 2018

The Denver Post (9/26, Schmelzer) reports 1,275 Colorado residents have “died of overdoses involving fentanyl since 2018.” Two milligrams of fentanyl “can be lethal, according to the US Drug Enforcement Administration.”

Authorities Say Synthetic Opioid Strong Enough To Kill More Than 50M People Was Seized In California

USA Today (9/26, Mendoza) reports, “Two Southern California residents were charged in a massive drug bust that resulted in authorities seizing more than 46 pounds of an extremely lethal synthetic opioid.” Andres Jesus Morales, 30, and Christine Ponce, 27, “were charged with four felony counts each of possession of a controlled substance for sale, the Riverside District Attorney’s Office announced on Thursday. The two arrests come after the Riverside Police Department raided a home in the city of Perris, California, about 70 miles southeast of Los Angeles, on Aug. 17. At the home, officers seized 46.2 pounds of carfentanil, 8.8 pounds of cocaine and 2.2 pounds of heroin.”

“Operation Clean Sweep” Nets More Than 190 Fugitives In New Jersey

CNN (9/25, Elassar) reports, “A multi-agency law enforcement operation in New Jersey resulted in the arrest of more than 190 fugitives, according to the US Marshals Service.” According to CNN, “Operation ‘Clean Sweep’ focused on capturing some of the state’s “most violent offenders,” including gang members, sex offenders, and violent criminals, US Marshals said in a news release on Wednesday. The operation took place over a one-month period in July and targeted specific ‘priority’ counties including Essex, Mercer, Camden, Atlantic, and Gloucester, according to the US Marshals.” The US Marshals Service “worked with the District of New Jersey and the New York/New Jersey Regional Fugitive Task Force to conduct the sweep, which they describe in the release as a ‘high-impact fugitive apprehension initiative.’”

Technology

Law Enforcement Orders Seeking Data From Tech Firms Frequently Accompanied By Secrecy Orders

The Washington Post (9/25) says, “Every year, Facebook, Google and other technology companies receive hundreds of thousands of orders from law enforcement agencies seeking data people stash online.” Frequently accompanying these requests are secrecy orders under which the tech firms must “keep their customers in the dark, potentially for years.” During 2020’s final six months, Facebook was given “61,262 government requests for user data in the United States, said spokesman Andy Stone.” Of these requests, 69% were accompanied by secrecy orders. The Post also says that Microsoft “has received between 2,400 and 3,500 secrecy orders from federal law enforcement each year since 2016 – or seven to 10 per day – according to congressional testimony by vice president of customer security and trust Tom Burt.”

Despite Platform Vows To Crack Down On Extremism, Far-Right Groups Still Using Social Media To Make Money

The AP (9/25, Kinetz) reports that “dozens of far-right groups...continue to leverage mainstream social media for profit, despite Facebook’s and other platforms’ repeated pledges to purge themselves of extremism.” There are no less than “54 Facebook profiles belonging to 39 entities that the German government and civil society groups have flagged as extremist, according to research shared with The Associated Press by the Counter Extremism Project, a non-profit policy and advocacy group formed to combat extremism. The groups have nearly 268,000 subscribers and friends on Facebook alone.” CEP “also found 39 related Instagram profiles, 16 Twitter profiles and 34 YouTube channels, which have gotten over 9.5 million views.”

WPost Analysis Finds Uptick In Supermarket Shootings. A Washington Post (9/25) analysis says that a gunman last week began firing within “a Kroger supermarket outside Memphis, turning the routine task of grocery shopping into a terrifying encounter with gun violence.” Such incidents have ceased being exceptional, as no less than “three other deadly shootings have taken place at supermarkets this year, continuing a recent trend.” Federal Bureau of Investigation data shows that “shootings at grocery stores have risen in recent years. Between 2000 and 2020, 78 people were killed in 28 such incidents, FBI data shows.”

Overdoses Involving Fentanyl Have Killed More Than 1,200 Colorado Residents Since 2018

The Denver Post (9/26, Schmelzer) reports 1,275 Colorado residents have “died of overdoses involving fentanyl since 2018.” Two milligrams of fentanyl “can be lethal, according to the US Drug Enforcement Administration.”

Authorities Say Synthetic Opioid Strong Enough To Kill More Than 50M People Was Seized In California

USA Today (9/26, Mendoza) reports, “Two Southern California residents were charged in a massive drug bust that resulted in authorities seizing more than 46 pounds of an extremely lethal synthetic opioid.” Andres Jesus Morales, 30, and Christine Ponce, 27, “were charged with four felony counts each of possession of a controlled substance for sale, the Riverside District Attorney’s Office announced on Thursday. The two arrests come after the Riverside Police Department raided a home in the city of Perris, California, about 70 miles southeast of Los Angeles, on Aug. 17. At the home, officers seized 46.2 pounds of carfentanil, 8.8 pounds of cocaine and 2.2 pounds of heroin.”

“Operation Clean Sweep” Nets More Than 190 Fugitives In New Jersey

CNN (9/25, Elassar) reports, “A multi-agency law enforcement operation in New Jersey resulted in the arrest of more than 190 fugitives, according to the US Marshals Service.” According to CNN, “Operation ‘Clean Sweep’ focused on capturing some of the state’s “most violent offenders,” including gang members, sex offenders, and violent criminals, US Marshals said in a news release on Wednesday. The operation took place over a one-month period in July and targeted specific ‘priority’ counties including Essex, Mercer, Camden, Atlantic, and Gloucester, according to the US Marshals.” The US Marshals Service “worked with the District of New Jersey and the New York/New Jersey Regional Fugitive Task Force to conduct the sweep, which they describe in the release as a ‘high-impact fugitive apprehension initiative.’”

Technology

Law Enforcement Orders Seeking Data From Tech Firms Frequently Accompanied By Secrecy Orders

The Washington Post (9/25) says, “Every year, Facebook, Google and other technology companies receive hundreds of thousands of orders from law enforcement agencies seeking data people stash online.” Frequently accompanying these requests are secrecy orders under which the tech firms must “keep their customers in the dark, potentially for years.” During 2020’s final six months, Facebook was given “61,262 government requests for user data in the United States, said spokesman Andy Stone.” Of these requests, 69% were accompanied by secrecy orders. The Post also says that Microsoft “has received between 2,400 and 3,500 secrecy orders from federal law enforcement each year since 2016 – or seven to 10 per day – according to congressional testimony by vice president of customer security and trust Tom Burt.”

Despite Platform Vows To Crack Down On Extremism, Far-Right Groups Still Using Social Media To Make Money

The AP (9/25, Kinetz) reports that “dozens of far-right groups...continue to leverage mainstream social media for profit, despite Facebook’s and other platforms’ repeated pledges to purge themselves of extremism.” There are no less than “54 Facebook profiles belonging to 39 entities that the German government and civil society groups have flagged as extremist, according to research shared with The Associated Press by the Counter Extremism Project, a non-profit policy and advocacy group formed to combat extremism. The groups have nearly 268,000 subscribers and friends on Facebook alone.” CEP “also found 39 related Instagram profiles, 16 Twitter profiles and 34 YouTube channels, which have gotten over 9.5 million views.”

The differences are more in depth on topics including:

- Training
- Operations
- Administration
- Personnel

The two tiers are not necessarily based on size but a more comprehensive review of the listed topics.

The two assessors conduct a 2-day on-site assessment that includes policy and file review, staff interviews, officer ride-a-longs and facility tour and inspection and vehicle inspection.

The two assessors will compile an assessment report and provide a recommendation to the ILEAP Committee Chairperson. This will be reviewed and distributed to the ILACP council for review and action. If granted, accreditation is valid for four years.

This shows that the agency is compliant with policies and standards developed by the ILACP state standards. There are Board members that are from LE agencies as well as insurance, academia, etc.

$800 annual Tier 2 accreditation cost.

Bob Zielinski is the NPD Accreditation Manager.

The assessors stated that there was one call for public comment. They were alone in the room to take any calls during this time.

The assessors will submit their report to the council, it will be reviewed and voted on and notification will be made to the agency after that time. Specific timeline unknown.

I'd like to talk to someone about the Tier II accreditation process. I'm not sure if that's possible, but I'd like to know what some of the differences are in what is being evaluated with these 180 standards, vs. the fewer standards in the Tier I evaluation, how those evaluations are being conducted, what the timeline is for completion, what benefits the Tier I certification brought to the department, any costs involved, who is the accreditation manager, how many people called in for the public comment yesterday (we were able to get something very short into last Wednesday's paper), how long the process takes and when the process is expected to be wrapped up.

Oregon State Police Working With FBI To Expand Threat Assessment Teams

The Oregonian (9/23, Bernstein) reports, "The FBI and Oregon State Police are working to create new threat assessment teams in the state to bolster the ability of local communities to help identify and prevent mass violence. 'While we haven't had an active shooter here or an act of mass violence here in Oregon in a few years, we know that the potential is ever present and it's something that keeps us up at night,' said Kieran L. Ramsey, Oregon's FBI special agent in charge." FBI agent Damara Gonzalez "said people involved in mass shootings usually plan ahead and aren't acting spontaneously," and "that's why it's important to train bystanders and others to be alert to potential behavior that might warrant attention, she said. Research has shown that those responsible for such violence often have personal grievances and have been suffering from personality disorders or some type of mental break in the preceding year or two, she said."

CNBC: Police Departments Taking Reform Into Their Own Hands

CNBC (9/23) posts a video report about police in Washington, DC and "how the city is reforming training to intervene if an officer is using excessive force."

Experts Say Chicago Attempt To Sue Gang Members For Assets Would Be Ineffective

On its website, NBC News (9/23, Ali) reports, "As Chicago enters the tail end of another explosive year for gun violence, Mayor Lori Lightfoot is trying to help quell the bloodshed by pushing" the her recently introduced Victims Justice Ordinance, which would allow "the city to sue gang members to seize their assets." However, some "criminal experts said the tactic is ineffective as gangs, which are now mostly fragmented, are no longer the root of most of the gun violence in the city." Those experts also "said...that the ordinance could actually cause more harm to communities of color by adding another layer of legal entanglement and financial drain.”

Windsor, Canada Considers Mandatory Vaccination Policy For Police Officers

The Windsor (CAN) Star (9/23, Chen) reports, “Windsor police officers could soon be joining the ranks of public servants required to be vaccinated against COVID-19.” According to the Star, “At a meeting of the Windsor Police Services Board on Thursday, Mayor Drew Dilkens said the board has asked Chief Pam Mizuno to prepare a report on a mandatory COVID-19 vaccination policy for all WPS members. ‘We intend on having the meeting (on the policy) sometime in the early part of October,’ Dilkens said. Mizuno is in the process of gathering data for the report, with a goal of submitting a policy to the board for approval.” Last month, “Toronto Police Service announced a mandatory vaccination policy for all its members – whether sworn officers or civilian employees – with proof of vaccination status required as of Sept. 13.”

Bennington, Vermont Civilian Police Oversight Task Force To Present Report In January

The AP (9/23) reports from Bennington, Vermont, “A citizen task force designing a future panel that will provide oversight of the Bennington Police Department is moving forward and hoping to present a report to town officials by January.” The role of the task force “is to propose a permanent community safety and equity board that will have oversight of the police department.” According to the AP, “after the report is submitted there will be a public comment period. The Bennington Select Board will then adopt a plan for the board to seat the panel next May. They were doing what they had been trained to do – run, hide, fight,’ Lane told reporters, calling the gun violence ‘the most horrific event that has occurred in Collierville history.’” Lane “withheld information about the shooter while investigators attempted to determine if anyone else may have assisted him in the attack, although he did say there was no evidence of terrorism.”

Oregon State Police Working With FBI To Expand Threat Assessment Teams

The Oregonian (9/23, Bernstein) reports, "The FBI and Oregon State Police are working to create new threat assessment teams in the state to bolster the ability of local communities to help identify and prevent mass violence. 'While we haven't had an active shooter here or an act of mass violence here in Oregon in a few years, we know that the potential is ever present and it's something that keeps us up at night,' said Kieran L. Ramsey, Oregon's FBI special agent in charge." FBI agent Damara Gonzalez "said people involved in mass shootings usually plan ahead and aren't acting spontaneously," and "that's why it's important to train bystanders and others to be alert to potential behavior that might warrant attention, she said. Research has shown that those responsible for such violence often have personal grievances and have been suffering from personality disorders or some type of mental break in the preceding year or two, she said."

However, some "criminal experts said the tactic is ineffective as gangs, which are now mostly fragmented, are no longer the root of most of the gun violence in the city." Those experts also "said...that the ordinance could actually cause more harm to communities of

Mizuno is in the process of gathering data for the report, with a goal of submitting a policy to the board for approval.” Last month, “Toronto Police Service announced a mandatory vaccination policy for all its members – whether sworn officers or civilian employees – with proof of vaccination status required as of Sept. 13.”

Illinois' Voice of Professional Law Enforcement

Faith & Blue Weekend is Oct. 8-11, register your event today!

On August 31st, leaders from all the major national law enforcement groups held a joint press conference at the National Law Enforcement Museum in Washington, DC to announce one of the largest police-community outreach effort in history – National Faith & Blue Weekend 2021 (Faith & Blue). As you know, our association is partnering in this effort.

We are just weeks away from Faith & Blue Weekend (Friday, October 8 - Monday, October 11, 2021) and hope planning in each of our member agencies is going well. Please don't forget to register your events on the Faith & Blue website at faithandblue.org/submit-event because we'd like our state to be well-represented.

There is still plenty of time to plan and execute events using the attached Planning Toolkit. Some of the sample activities only take a couple of hours to plan such as hosting an item drive or sending representatives to visit with local houses of worship. We look forward to seeing good participation across Illinois throughout the weekend. If you have questions or need support, please contact the National Faith & Blue Weekend office at 404.605.7000 or info@faithandblue.org.

2099. ILEAP Mtg

Mike the two things I was told at the ILEAP exit were the following:

1. You, as the supervisor of the Detective Bureau need to do a daily inspection of the Detective Interview Rooms making sure nothing of danger was left behind by a prior interviewer, interviewee, P/W, cleaning crew, etc.
2. As it relates to the OAF Fund, they like what we have in place but want me to Review & Reconcile quarterly that the OAF Fund is in balance, even though you check it montly.

Documents need to be created for both requests, thanks.

Supervisors,

Per ILEAP Tier 2 standards our flammable cabinet within the sally port must be secured at all times. A key has been placed within the Sgt Closet and the Support Services Manager will retain one also. Please ensure this is locked at all times as it contains evidence. I will be updating our Evidence Room Policy 802.4 to reflect this also.

Policing and Policy

US DOJ Launches Program To Help Police Respond To Mass Violence

Fox News (9/22) reports, "The Department of Justice announced Wednesday that it will start offering help to law enforcement leaders whose communities experience incidents of mass violence." Fox News adds, "The assistance, called the Mass Violence Advisory Initiative, will involve peer-to-peer consultations and be funded by the Office of Justice Programs' Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), according to a press release. The International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) will help manage the initiative, which begins Wednesday. The BJA/IACP Mass Violence Peer-to-Peer Advisory Team consists of law enforcement officials who have experience with mass violence. Community and faith-based representatives will also help."

Congressional Police Reform Negotiations End Without Deal

The AP (9/22) reports, "Bipartisan congressional talks on overhauling policing practices have ended without an agreement, top bargainers from both parties said Wednesday. 'It was clear that we were not making the progress that we needed to make,' Sen. Cory Booker, D-N.J., told reporters. He cited continued disagreements over Democrats' efforts to make officers personally liable for abuses, raising professional standards and collecting national data on police agencies' use of force." The AP adds, "Talks had moved slowly for months, and it had become clear over the summer that the chances for a breakthrough were all but hopeless. Booker said he'd told South Carolina Sen. Tim Scott, the lead Republican negotiator, of his decision earlier Wednesday. Repeated visits to Washington by victims' relatives helped keep pressure on the issue."

CNN (9/22, Hoffman) reports that President Biden "criticized Senate Republicans after the bipartisan talks around overhauling policing laws broke down without a deal, critiquing the GOP for rejecting even modest reforms. In a statement, Biden thanked Democratic Sen. Cory Booker of New Jersey and Rep. Karen Bass of California for their work on the bill, and heaped blame on the GOP for the legislation dying after months of negotiations. 'Regrettably, Senate Republicans rejected enacting modest reforms, which even the previous president had supported, while refusing to take action on key issues that many in law enforcement were willing to address,' Biden said." Booker "had earlier made clear in a private conversation with Sen. Tim Scott of South Carolina, the chief Republican negotiator on the issue, that bipartisan policing talks are over."

The New York Times (9/22, Edmondson) reports that Booker's announcement "acknowledged what had been apparent for months, as talks had fizzled with no sign of a breakthrough," and it "all but closed off the possibility that Congress would act on an issue that President Biden had promised to tackle, amid a groundswell of public support for addressing systemic racism in law enforcement."

FBI Figures Show US Murders Rose By Nearly 30% In 2020

The New York Times (9/22, Asher) reports, "The United States in 2020 experienced the biggest rise in murder since the start of national record-keeping in 1960, according to data gathered by the F.B.I. for its annual report on crime." According to the Times, the Uniform Crime Report "will stand as the official word on an unusually grim year, detailing a rise in murder of around 29 percent. The previous largest one-year change was a 12.7 percent increase in 1968. The national rate – murders per 100,000 – still remains about one-third below the rate in the early 1990s." The Times adds, "Separately, an independent analysis of big cities finds at least one promising sign that the murder rate may be starting to flatten this year: The increase in murders this summer does not appear to be as large as the record spike last summer."

Appellate Court Vacates Decision Blocking Restrictions On Gun Sales To People Under 21

Reuters (9/22, Stempel) reports that on Wednesday, the US Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit "threw out its recent decision that a federal prohibition on firearms dealers selling guns to young adults under 21 was unconstitutional, deciding the case was now moot because both plaintiffs have reached that age." Reuters explains that a three-judge panel of the Richmond-based appellate court "had issued the 2-1 ruling...authored by Circuit Judge Julius Richardson" in July. "But Richardson said it now serves the public interest to vacate the decision, clearing the way for further litigation on the matter."

The Washington Post (9/22) explains that the legal challenge "to the age restrictions was brought by prospective handgun buyer Natalia Marshall, who was unable to purchase a handgun from a federally licensed firearms dealer in Virginia because of her age. Once Marshall turned 21, she was no longer prohibited from buying a handgun, and there was no longer a legal controversy, the court said." The Post says "Marshall's attorney had tried to add a new, younger plaintiff to the appeal — two days after Marshall turned 21, according to the court. By then, the court said, the case was moot." However, "Elliott Harding, who represents Marshall, said Wednesday that he is not giving up. 'One way or another, these laws are going to continue to be challenged,' he said. 'It's unfortunate that the Government will evade the repercussions of the court's thorough ruling simply because the nature of the laws at issue allow them to escape final review through our lengthy litigation process.'"

San Francisco Launches Push To Combat Retail Theft

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/22, Cassidy) reports, "San Francisco officials are launching a multipronged push to combat retail theft in the city, an effort that includes more police investigators and community ambassadors and an upgraded system for retailers to report crimes online." The Chronicle adds, "The initiative, announced by Mayor London Breed and Police Chief Bill Scott on Wednesday, comes after a summer when videos showing brazen retail theft went viral, casting an unflattering light on San Francisco and adding fuel to critics' perception that the city is overrun by lawlessness. Breed said in a statement Wednesday that retail theft and commercial burglaries are 'not victimless crimes' and have resulted in reduced work hours for employees, shuttered stores and a loss of ready access to prescription medications for customers."

Albuquerque, New Mexico Officials Launch Plan They Hope Will "Turn The Tide On Crime"

Albuquerque (NM) Journal (9/22, Kaplan) reports, "After five sessions convening law enforcement, court officials, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and representatives from higher education and rehab facilities, the city has unveiled 40 items it says will 'turn the tide on crime in the region.'" City officials "launched the Metro Crime Initiative in mid-July in a bid to identify ways to fix what it called a broken criminal justice system," and "the resulting to-do list includes: 'invest in mobile speed enforcement to free up officers while combating the scourge of dangerous driving'; 'create a task force to examine officer retention and lateral recruitment programs for all police agencies in New Mexico'; 'create restorative justice programs in schools'; 'fund indigent copays for drug testing for pre-prosecution diversion programs'; and many more items."

Acts of mass violence pose unique challenges for law enforcement leaders. Responding to these incidents while operating under extreme pressure and public scrutiny may be one of the most difficult experiences of your career.

IACP's Mass Violence Advisory Initiative is here to provide assistance if an incident occurs in your jurisdiction. Nearly One In Five Americans Report Drinking Heavily Due To Stress Of Pandemic, World Events, Study Suggests

USA Today (9/22, Hauck) reports, "More than 18 months into the COVID-19 outbreak in the U.S., nearly 1 in 5 Americans is consuming an unhealthy amount of alcohol, a new survey suggests." Approximately 17% of the respondents "reported 'heavy drinking' in the past 30 days, according to the survey commissioned by Alkermes, an Ireland-based biopharmaceutical company." Experts say "stress of world events and anxiety about the future can increase drinking and exacerbate symptoms of alcohol use disorder, as seen in the wake of previous disasters such as 9/11 and

Hurricane Katrina.”

The Hill (9/22, Lonas) reports, “The survey defined ‘heavy drinking’ as having two days a week where a woman drank more than four drinks or a man drank more than five drinks.” Respondents “who said they drank heavily in the past year also reported a decline in mental, psychosocial and physical health.”

Police In Northern Ireland Arrest Two More In Probe Of Journalist’s Killing

Reuters (9/22) reports, “Northern Irish police on Wednesday arrested two more men in relation to the 2019 killing of journalist Lyra McKee in Londonderry, whose death caused outrage in the British-run province. The men, aged 24 and 29, were arrested under the Terrorism Act by officers investigating McKee’s murder, police said.” According to Reuters, “The New IRA, one of a small number of groups opposed to the 1998 peace accord that ended three decades of conflict between opponents and supporters of British rule, said one of its members shot the 29-year-old reporter dead when opening fire in the direction of police during a riot McKee was watching.”

New York Police Using App To Improve Community Policing

The AP (9/22, Sisak) reports, “A new smartphone app being rolled out this week allows officers in New York City’s community policing program to log neighborhood concerns like graffiti, loud music and public intoxication and keep track of whether they’ve been addressed.” The AP adds, “The internal app, the NYPD’s latest push toward digitizing communications within the department, improves on the more scattershot ways officers have been keeping tabs on community problems from shift to shift – namely, calling, texting or emailing one another. Information is now centralized and available around the clock to more officers and supervisors, meaning problems are less likely to fall through the cracks and off-duty officers won’t be getting woken up at home if they forget to pass along details about a particular matter.”

US DOJ Launches Program To Help Police Respond To Mass Violence

Fox News (9/22) reports, "The Department of Justice announced Wednesday that it will start offering help to law enforcement leaders whose communities experience incidents of mass violence." Fox News adds, "The assistance, called the Mass Violence Advisory Initiative, will involve peer-to-peer consultations and be funded by the Office of Justice Programs' Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), according to a press release. The International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) will help manage the initiative, which begins Wednesday. The BJA/IACP Mass Violence Peer-to-Peer Advisory Team consists of law enforcement officials who have experience with mass violence. Community and faith-based representatives will also help."

Congressional Police Reform Negotiations End Without Deal

The AP (9/22) reports, "Bipartisan congressional talks on overhauling policing practices have ended without an agreement, top bargainers from both parties said Wednesday. 'It was clear that we were not making the progress that we needed to make,' Sen. Cory Booker, D-N.J., told reporters. He cited continued disagreements over Democrats' efforts to make officers personally liable for abuses, raising professional standards and collecting national data on police agencies' use of force." The AP adds, "Talks had moved slowly for months, and it had become clear over the summer that the chances for a breakthrough were all but hopeless. Booker said he'd told South Carolina Sen. Tim Scott, the lead Republican negotiator, of his decision earlier Wednesday. Repeated visits to Washington by victims' relatives helped keep pressure on the issue."

CNN (9/22, Hoffman) reports that President Biden "criticized Senate Republicans after the bipartisan talks around overhauling policing laws broke down without a deal, critiquing the GOP for rejecting even modest reforms. In a statement, Biden thanked Democratic Sen. Cory Booker of New Jersey and Rep. Karen Bass of California for their work on the bill, and heaped blame on the GOP for the legislation dying after months of negotiations. 'Regrettably, Senate Republicans rejected enacting modest reforms, which even the previous president had supported, while refusing to take action on key issues that many in law enforcement were willing to address,' Biden said." Booker "had earlier made clear in a private conversation with Sen. Tim Scott of South Carolina, the chief Republican negotiator on the issue, that bipartisan policing talks are over."

The New York Times (9/22, Edmondson) reports that Booker's announcement "acknowledged what had been apparent for months, as talks had fizzled with no sign of a breakthrough," and it "all but closed off the possibility that Congress would act on an issue that President Biden had promised to tackle, amid a groundswell of public support for addressing systemic racism in law enforcement."

FBI Figures Show US Murders Rose By Nearly 30% In 2020

The New York Times (9/22, Asher) reports, "The United States in 2020 experienced the biggest rise in murder since the start of national record-keeping in 1960, according to data gathered by the F.B.I. for its annual report on crime." According to the Times, the Uniform Crime Report "will stand as the official word on an unusually grim year, detailing a rise in murder of around 29 percent. The previous largest one-year change was a 12.7 percent increase in 1968. The national rate – murders per 100,000 – still remains about one-third below the rate in the early 1990s." The Times adds, "Separately, an independent analysis of big cities finds at least one promising sign that the murder rate may be starting to flatten this year: The increase in murders this summer does not appear to be as large as the record spike last summer."

Appellate Court Vacates Decision Blocking Restrictions On Gun Sales To People Under 21

Reuters (9/22, Stempel) reports that on Wednesday, the US Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit "threw out its recent decision that a federal prohibition on firearms dealers selling guns to young adults under 21 was unconstitutional, deciding the case was now moot because both plaintiffs have reached that age." Reuters explains that a three-judge panel of the Richmond-based appellate court "had issued the 2-1 ruling...authored by Circuit Judge Julius Richardson" in July. "But Richardson said it now serves the public interest to vacate the decision, clearing the way for further litigation on the matter."

The Washington Post (9/22) explains that the legal challenge "to the age restrictions was brought by prospective handgun buyer Natalia Marshall, who was unable to purchase a handgun from a federally licensed firearms dealer in Virginia because of her age. Once Marshall turned 21, she was no longer prohibited from buying a handgun, and there was no longer a legal controversy, the court said." The Post says "Marshall's attorney had tried to add a new, younger plaintiff to the appeal — two days after Marshall turned 21, according to the court. By then, the court said, the case was moot." However, "Elliott Harding, who represents Marshall, said Wednesday that he is not giving up. 'One way or another, these laws are going to continue to be challenged,' he said. 'It's unfortunate that the Government will evade the repercussions of the court's thorough ruling simply because the nature of the laws at issue allow them to escape final review through our lengthy litigation process.'"

San Francisco Launches Push To Combat Retail Theft

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/22, Cassidy) reports, “San Francisco officials are launching a multipronged push to combat retail theft in the city, an effort that includes more police investigators and community ambassadors and an upgraded system for retailers to report crimes online.” The Chronicle adds, “The initiative, announced by Mayor London Breed and Police Chief Bill Scott on Wednesday, comes after a summer when videos showing brazen retail theft went viral, casting an unflattering light on San Francisco and adding fuel to critics’ perception that the city is overrun by lawlessness. Breed said in a statement Wednesday that retail theft and commercial burglaries are ‘not victimless crimes’ and have resulted in reduced work hours for employees, shuttered stores and a loss of ready access to prescription medications for customers.”

Albuquerque, New Mexico Officials Launch Plan They Hope Will “Turn The Tide On Crime”

Albuquerque (NM) Journal (9/22, Kaplan) reports, “After five sessions convening law enforcement, court officials, prosecutors, defense attorneys, and representatives from higher education and rehab facilities, the city has unveiled 40 items it says will ‘turn the tide on crime in the region.’” City officials “launched the Metro Crime Initiative in mid-July in a bid to identify ways to fix what it called a broken criminal justice system,” and “the resulting to-do list includes: ‘invest in mobile speed enforcement to free up officers while combating the scourge of dangerous driving’; ‘create a task force to examine officer retention and lateral recruitment programs for all police agencies in New Mexico’; ‘create restorative justice programs in schools’; ‘fund indigent copays for drug testing for pre-prosecution diversion programs’; and many more items.”

News From BJA

BUREAU OF JUSTICE ASSISTANCE • OFFICE OF JUSTICE PROGRAMS

September 22, 2021

Kristen Mahoney, Acting Director

Dear Partners, Associations, and Stakeholders:

Today, the Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) announced the launch of the new Mass Violence Advisory Initiative (MVAI). A collaboration between BJA and the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP), the MVAI equips law enforcement leaders and their communities with expert assistance, guidance, and rapid response resources in the event of targeted acts of mass violence.

Incidents of mass violence deeply affect the communities in which they occur; they also place unique pressures on the law enforcement leaders tasked with keeping those communities safe amidst intense scrutiny. The MVAI connects local law enforcement leaders with Mass Violence Peer to Peer Advisory Teams, comprised of law enforcement professionals with personal experience navigating acts of mass violence and their aftershocks. The IACP plans to expand the initiative to include community, faith-based, and psychological services, which will take a trauma-informed approach to officer and community healing, safety, and wellness.

For further information, please visit the MVAI webpage.

Sincerely,

Kristen Mahoney
Acting Director, Bureau of Justice Assistance

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE LAUNCHES PROGRAM TO HELP POLICE RESPOND TO MASS VIOLENCE

WASHINGTON — The Department of Justice’s Office of Justice Programs today announced that it will begin offering peer-to-peer consultation and assistance to law enforcement leaders whose communities experience incidents of mass violence. The program, called the Mass Violence Advisory Initiative, is funded by OJP’s Bureau of Justice Assistance and is managed in partnership with the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

“No community should have to endure the wide-spread suffering caused by an incident of mass violence. But if such a tragedy does occur, we must be prepared to lend our full support,” said Amy L. Solomon, Acting Assistant Attorney General of the Justice Department’s Office of Justice Programs. “I am very pleased that our partners at the International Association of Chiefs of Police, and seasoned and respected professionals across the spectrum, are willing to work with us to come to the aid of communities in times of crisis.”

Beginning today, law enforcement leaders will have access to experienced professionals if an attack happens and tragedy strikes their community. Upon request, BJA and the IACP will make subject matter experts available to provide assistance to law enforcement agencies when a mass violence incident occurs.

The BJA/IACP Mass Violence Peer to Peer Advisory Team comprises law enforcement personnel who have experience navigating acts of mass violence in their own communities. It will also include community and faith-based representatives and providers of psychological services. Together, these experts will institute a trauma-informed approach to community healing and will work to ensure officer and community safety and wellness. The Mass Violence Peer to Peer Advisory Team will provide ongoing assistance, information and resources to help law enforcement and communities.

“No community wants a tragedy like this, but with the Mass Violence Advisory Initiative, communities will not have to face this alone and will have the resources they need to begin the healing process,” said IACP President Dwight Henninger. “Mass Violence Peer-to-Peer Advisory Team personnel bring a wealth of experience and knowledge that will provide timely and valuable assistance to law enforcement leaders and their communities in the wake of these horrific events.”

The new initiative builds on other OJP efforts to address community crises and mass casualty events, including BJA’s Emergency Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Program, the Antiterrorism and Emergency Assistance Program supported by OJP’s Office for Victims of Crime and OVC’s Helping Victims of Mass Violence and Terrorism Toolkit, which assists communities in developing a comprehensive victim assistance plan for responding to incidents of mass violence and terrorism.

For more information, please visit <https://bjaojp.gov/program/mass-violence-advisory-initiative/overview>.

FBI Director: Domestic Terrorism Caseload Has "Exploded" In Past Year

The Hill (9/21) reports FBI Director Christopher Wray told a Senate Committee on Tuesday that the FBI's domestic terrorism caseload had "exploded" since early 2020. Wray testified, "Since the spring of 2020, so for the past 16, 18 months or so, we have more than doubled our domestic terrorism caseload from about 1,000 to around 2,700 investigations, and we have surged personnel to match, more than doubling the amount of people working that threat than the year before." Wray "noted that the 'biggest chunk' of racially and ethnically motivated violent extremism the FBI tracks is now 'favoring white supremacy. We collect information about that threat. We have, as you say, prioritized that threat at a national threat priority level."

Biden Administration Backs New York Handgun Restriction In Supreme Court Filing

The Hill (9/21, Kruzell) reports that on Tuesday, the Biden Administration "urged the Supreme Court to uphold a New York handgun restriction in an upcoming and potentially landmark Second Amendment court clash." The Hill explains, "At issue is whether New York's gun licensing policy violates the constitutional right to bear arms by requiring applicants to demonstrate "proper cause" in order to obtain a license to carry a handgun outside the home. The lawsuit arose after a New York licensing official denied a bid by two residents for unrestricted carry licenses, saying the applicants had established proper cause for things like target shooting and hunting, but not to carry handguns at all times." In a brief filed on behalf of the Administration, DOJ "argued that the justices should defer to the longstanding legislative practice of placing limits on firearms to protect public safety."

UK Nightclub Working With Police To Curb Drink-Spiking

BBC News (9/21) reports, "Drug detection dogs are being used at a nightclub where drink spiking has been reported. NB's, in Bridge Street, Northampton, said it was working with police and taking the matter 'seriously'." BBC News adds, "Northamptonshire Police said three drink spiking incidents in the town in early September are being investigated," and "devices to cover drinks and bottles have also been handed out. 'We will also have drug dogs searching customers upon entry over the coming weekends to ensure that no drugs of any kind enter the venue,' a club spokesperson said. Northamptonshire Police said it would continue sending plain-clothed officers as part of its efforts to target 'predatory behaviour'."

Albuquerque, New Mexico Officials Unveil Plan To Combat Violent Crime

The AP (9/21, Bryan) reports from Albuquerque, New Mexico, "The mayor of New Mexico's largest city and other officials say they have a plan to address Albuquerque's record homicides and other violent crime." Albuquerque Mayor Tim Keller "presented details of the plan Tuesday. It includes 40 items that range from closing what many have referred to as a revolving door in the justice system to bolstering prevention and mental health programs. The plan came together following a series of meetings over the summer with city administrators, law enforcement, court officials and others."

California Set To Become First State To Track Violent Deaths Of LGBTQ Individuals

The San Francisco Chronicle (9/21, Gardiner) says, "California, long a pioneer in LGBTQ rights, is on track to become the first state" to track "how many LGBTQ people die as a result of violent acts, including homicide, suicide and police use of deadly force." California Gov. Gavin Newsom (D) recently signed a measure "that will create a pilot program for medical examiners and coroners in six counties to report the gender identity and sexual orientation of people who die violent deaths."

Police agencies have been tasked with responding to quality-of-life issues that add to the workload of their officers and the impact that recent budget shortfalls and calls to shift police funding to other government services have had. Quantifying the community needs and differentiating between police and social service workloads is critical for police leaders to lead and make informed budget decisions while ensuring community services needs are met.

Gavin Newsom (D) recently signed a measure "that will create a pilot program for medical examiners and coroners in six counties to report the gender identity and sexual orientation of people who die violent deaths."

Police agencies have been tasked with responding to quality-of-life issues that add to the workload of their officers and the impact that recent budget shortfalls and calls to shift police funding to other government services have had. Quantifying the community needs and differentiating between police and social service workloads is critical for police leaders to lead and make informed budget decisions while ensuring community services needs are met.

Body Recovered In National Park Identified As Missing Woman Gabby Petito; Death Ruled Homicide

Reuters (9/21) reports that on Tuesday, the FBI confirmed that a "body found in a U.S. national park in Wyoming was identified as Gabby Petito, the 22-year-old 'van life' traveler who went missing during a road trip with her fiance." The FBI said, a local coroner's "initial determination for the manner of death is homicide. The cause of death remains pending final autopsy results." The woman's body "was discovered on Sunday in a remote area of Bridger-Teton National Forest, in western Wyoming." Reuters says the "confirmation is the latest turn in a story that has gripped Americans since Petito's family reported her missing on Sept. 11 – 10 days after the fiance, Brian Laundrie, returned home from the cross-country trip without her."

CNN (9/21, Holcombe, Santiago) reports on its website that authorities “in Florida are searching for Laundrie, who has not been seen in a week.” The police search for him “continued Tuesday at a Florida nature reserve where his parents reportedly said he indicated he was going last week. Laundrie’s parents told investigators he left their home in North Port with a backpack September 14 to go to the T. Mabry Carlton Jr. Memorial Reserve near Venice.”

NIH Expecting To Fund Opioid Use Disorder-Related West Virginia Clinics Project

WVNews (9/21) reports the National Institutes of Health (NIH) “expects to award over $6.6 million” worth of grant money to a project that aims “to integrate services for opioid use disorder, the hepatitis C virus and HIV in 20 primary care clinics across West Virginia.” West Virginia University and Yale University are involved with the project.

Police Chief Sounds Fentanyl-Laced Cocaine Warning For DC Metro Area

The Washington Post (9/21, Jackman) reports Fairfax County Police Chief Kevin Davis warned the public that he suspects a dangerous batch of fentanyl-laced cocaine is circulating in the DC metropolitan area. The Tuesday warning was issued on the same day that Fairfax County workers responded to a scene involving several unconscious individuals who are suspected of overdosing on fentanyl-laced cocaine. Davis, who mentioned that incident in his warning, stated, “There is likely a fatal batch of cocaine laced with fentanyl right now,” so “the gravity of the threat is too big not to share with the community.”

Authorities Say Honduran Narco Mayor Spurred Migration By Corruption, Drug-Dealing

Reuters (9/21, Gottesdiener) reports from El Paraíso, Honduras that “drug trafficking and violence have overtaken the streets of El Paraíso and nearby towns and converted surrounding farms into passageways for cocaine headed north,” while “officials meant to safeguard stability and development” are “increasingly involved in the very crimes now pushing many locals to flee to the United States.” Reuters adds, “In El Paraíso, a town of about 20,000 people, these factors were personified by Alexander Ardón, a cattle rustler turned narco-trafficker turned mayor who ruled this corner of Honduras like a fiefdom until he fled and surrendered to U.S. authorities two years ago.” In a plea deal, “Ardón confessed to participation in 56 murders, torture and trafficking as much as 250 tons of cocaine into the United States,” and “with the help of senior officials from the ruling National Party,” Ardón “consolidated land and power, turning El Paraíso into a cocaine corridor.”

New Jersey Raid Nets 11 Arrests, Drugs, Guns, And Cash

My Central Jersey (9/21, Russell) reports from New Brunswick, New Jersey, “Eleven people from New Brunswick and Franklin were arrested last week on drug and weapons charges after police executed search warrants at five locations in the city.” MCJ adds, “The search warrants were executed Sept. 16 on Wright Place, Guilden and Handy streets and Joyce Kilmer and Reservoir avenues, following a months-long narcotics investigation by New Brunswick Police Department detectives and investigators from the Middlesex County Prosecutor’s Office, Office of Homeland Security and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Police seized a significant amount of suspected heroin, cocaine and drug-related paraphernalia along with two firearms, ammunition and money believed to be associated with illegal drug sales.”

Sgt. Eckardt,

When Holly Nearing and Jeff Hamen arrived (from ILEAP), OSO Wiegel and I followed protocol and asked them to complete Ride Along Waivers. Holly mentioned that they never had to do that before, but OSO Wiegel and I just wanted to make sure... forms have been placed in your mail box. We took photo copies of their driver's license and logged them in our visitors book.

Heads up front desk crew...Holly (ILEAP representative) stated they would be returning for more ride a-longs within the next couple of days. She did not specify on dates or times.

Dear Law Enforcement Officer,

If you have attended a domestic violence training program, you probably heard the claim that the vast majority of domestic violence victims are female. But according to the Centers for Disease Control, men are more likely to be abuse victims than women – see press release, below.

Half-Truths, Falsehoods, and Lies:

New Report Documents Long-Running Domestic Violence Misinformation Campaign

WASHINGTON / September 21, 2021 – A new report reveals the workings of a multi-million dollar campaign designed to mislead lawmakers and the American public about domestic violence. Published by the Coalition to End Domestic Violence, the report calls on the Department of Justice (DOJ) to end its long-standing effort to deny help to female abusers and to stereotype men as domestic violence perpetrators.

Since the 1980s, scientists have known that men are more likely than women to be victims of domestic violence. The Centers for Disease Control reports these recent numbers (1):

- o Males: 4.2 million victims
- o Females: 3.5 million victims

In addition, men annually are more likely than women to be targets of psychological coercive control tactics (2):

- o Males: 17.3 million victims
- o Females: 12.7 million victims

But for years, the Department of Justice has promoted a series of abuse half-truths and falsehoods. For example, the DOJ claims on its website that “Approximately one in three adolescent girls in the United States is a victim of physical, emotional, or verbal abuse from a dating partner” (3), a statement that ignores the problem of abuse of adolescent boys. The DOJ statement is refuted by the Centers for Disease Control that states, “Nearly 1 in 11 female and approximately 1 in 14 male high school students report having experienced physical dating violence in the last year.” (4)

The DOJ has awarded millions of dollars to organizations that promote misleading and false claims about domestic violence. For example, the International Association of Chiefs of Police, relying on DOJ funding, makes the one-sided and misleading claim that “Experts estimate that a woman has between a one-in-three and a one-in-four chance of being physically assaulted by a partner or ex-partner during her lifetime.” (5)

Such falsehoods have real-world consequences, as 77% of all domestic violence arrestees are male, even though most abusers are female (6). Forty-six state domestic violence coalitions have expressed remorse about their long-standing focus on “increased policing, prosecution, and imprisonment as the primary solution” to domestic violence (7).

These abuse stereotypes are particularly harmful to African-American men and contribute to the problem of mass incarceration (8). According to a recent report to Congress, domestic violence mandatory arrest policies may “produce disproportionate arrest rates among marginalized populations, including people of color, and particularly African American men.” (9)

The Coalition to End Domestic Violence calls on lawmakers and other groups to end the continuing epidemic of abuse misinformation, over-criminalization, and mass incarceration of men. The report, “Thirty Years of Domestic Violence Half-Truths, Falsehoods, and Lies,” is available online: <http://endtodv.org/wp-content/uploads/2021/09/Thirty-Years-of-DV-Half-Truths-Falsehoods-and-Lies.pdf>

Gov. JB Pritzker Proclaims September 20-26 Rail Safety Week in Illinois

Chicago, IL – Governor JB Pritzker has proclaimed September 20-26 as Rail Safety Week in Illinois. In recognition, the Illinois Commerce Commission in conjunction with Operation Lifesaver will be sharing rail safety facts, tips, and resources to raise awareness about motorists and pedestrian safety around railroad tracks and trains. Operation Lifesaver is a national non-profit rail safety organization.

During 2020, 98 vehicle crashes were reported at public highway-rail grade crossings, resulting in 15 fatalities and 32 personal injuries in Illinois. In addition, 55 pedestrians trespassing on railroad property rights-of-way were struck by passing trains, resulting in 28 fatalities and 27 personal injuries. Illinois ranks fourth in the nation in trespass and grade crossing fatalities in 2020. More than 81 percent of crashes at public grade crossings in Illinois occur where active warning devices, such as flashing lights, ringing bells and/or gates exist.

“Too often lives are lost and families devastated to crashes involving trains. Most of these accidents were preventable. Rail Safety Week serves as an important reminder about the dangers associated with highway-rail grade crossings and to educate the public about ways to stay safe,” said ICC Brian Vercruysse, Rail Safety Program Administrator.

Illinois’ efforts are supported by the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police (ILACP) partnered with Metra Railroad and supported by the American Automobile Association, Illinois Commerce Commission, Illinois Department of Transportation, Illinois Operation Lifesaver, Illinois State Police, Illinois Tollway Authority, Illinois Sheriff’s Association, Illinois Secretary of State, Illinois Truck Enforcement Association, Illinois High School and College Driver’s Education Association, Illinois Pupil Transportation Advisory Committee, DuPage Rail Safety Council, local and railroad law enforcement, first responders and area railroad companies. All are committed to partnering together to educate residents on all aspects of railroad safety and to enforce applicable state laws. This week, the Illinois Commerce Commission is holding a transportation policy session to reflect on 150 years of rail safety policies in Illinois and look ahead to future challenges and opportunities. 2021 is the Sesquicentennial anniversary of the ICC's earliest origin as the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission. Following these panel discussions, Class 1 Railroads doing business in Illinois will provide presentations to the Commission about the progress they made in 2020 to expand their supplier diversity spending efforts and goals for 2021.

Gov. JB Pritzker Proclaims September 20-26 Rail Safety Week in Illinois

Chicago, IL – Governor JB Pritzker has proclaimed September 20-26 as Rail Safety Week in Illinois. In recognition, the Illinois Commerce Commission in conjunction with Operation Lifesaver will be sharing rail safety facts, tips, and resources to raise awareness about motorists and pedestrian safety around railroad tracks and trains. Operation Lifesaver is a national non-profit rail safety organization.

During 2020, 98 vehicle crashes were reported at public highway-rail grade crossings, resulting in 15 fatalities and 32 personal injuries in Illinois. In addition, 55 pedestrians trespassing on railroad property rights-of-way were struck by passing trains, resulting in 28 fatalities and 27 personal injuries. Illinois ranks fourth in the nation in trespass and grade crossing fatalities in 2020. More than 81 percent of crashes at public grade crossings in Illinois occur where active warning devices, such as flashing lights, ringing bells and/or gates exist.

“Too often lives are lost and families devastated to crashes involving trains. Most of these accidents were preventable. Rail Safety Week serves as an important reminder about the dangers associated with highway-rail grade crossings and to educate the public about ways to stay safe,” said ICC Brian Vercruysse, Rail Safety Program Administrator.

Illinois’ efforts are supported by the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police (ILACP) partnered with Metra Railroad and supported by the American Automobile Association, Illinois Commerce Commission, Illinois Department of Transportation, Illinois Operation Lifesaver, Illinois State Police, Illinois Tollway Authority, Illinois Sheriff’s Association, Illinois Secretary of State, Illinois Truck Enforcement Association, Illinois High School and College Driver’s Education Association, Illinois Pupil Transportation Advisory Committee, DuPage Rail Safety Council, local and railroad

law enforcement, first responders and area railroad companies. All are committed to partnering together to educate residents on all aspects of railroad safety and to enforce applicable state laws. Fall Quarter Department News & Updates

NUCPS Staff Returns to Evanston Campus, Different Office

On Sept. 7, NUCPS staff joined the official University-wide return to campus. In addition to the joy of once again seeing colleagues in person, we are also settling into new office space at 405 Church St., Evanston, where NUCPS is one of several School of Professional Studies (SPS) departments to be housed in what is nicknamed "the Mansion." For long-time staff members Roslyn Austin and Sandra Mayfield, what was old is new again. They worked at 405 Church when NUCPS called it home in years prior to the 1801 Maple office. For the rest, it's a new adventure. Now a block south of main campus and close to the lake, we share wall, halls, and a pleasant veranda on which to eat lunch with our new SPS neighbors.

NUCPS has a new home & address:

405 Church St.

Evanston, IL 60201

Congratulations to NUCPS' Own Joy Lucario!

Join the NUCPS family in congratulating Joy Lucario, who was sworn in as a U.S. citizen on Tuesday, Sept. 14. A native of Belize, Joy has worked for NUCPS for 30 years. Previously with the Traffic Safety School, she is the primary coordinator for the Crash program. Below, Joy shows off her new citizenship following the outdoor swearing-in ceremony in Chicago. To celebrate, staff decorated her work space in the NUCPS office for the occasion, toasting her with a pizza party on the porch.

SPSC Grad, Instructor Chief Doug Shoemaker Elected as IACP 5th VP

Hearty congratulations also go out to our own Chief Doug Shoemaker, a SPSC instructor and graduate. Doug was recently elected 5th Vice President of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. He serves as the chief of the Grand Junction (CO) Police Department.

New Heavy Truck Crash Course Announced

NUCPS begins the 2021-22 academic year rolling out an exciting new Crash Investigation & Reconstruction course. Heavy Truck Forensic Mechanical Inspection for Collision Investigators teaches crash professionals the skills required to properly document and analyze the unique aspects of commercial motor vehicle collisions. In addition to a lecture component, the course features significant hands-on work. By the end of the five-day class, students will be able to explain how components of specific vehicle systems may have been factors in a collision. They will also be able to restore a damaged air-brake system on a heavy-duty commercial vehicle to its pre-collision condition in order to collect data for calculations used to evaluate braking efficiency.

In addition to the joy of once again seeing colleagues in person, we are also settling into new office space at 405 Church St., Evanston, where NUCPS is one of several School of Professional Studies (SPS) departments to be housed in what is nicknamed "the Mansion." For long-time staff members Roslyn Austin and Sandra Mayfield, what was old is new again. They worked at 405 Church when NUCPS called it home in years prior to the 1801 Maple office. For the rest, it's a new adventure. Now a block south of main campus and close to the lake, we share wall, halls, and a pleasant veranda on which to eat lunch with our new SPS neighbors.

Congratulations to NUCPS' Own Joy Lucario!

Join the NUCPS family in congratulating Joy Lucario, who was sworn in as a U.S. citizen on Tuesday, Sept. 14. A native of Belize, Joy has worked for NUCPS for 30 years. Previously with the Traffic Safety School, she is the primary coordinator for the Crash program. Below, Joy shows off her new citizenship following the outdoor swearing-in ceremony in Chicago. SPSC Grad, Instructor Chief Doug Shoemaker Elected as IACP 5th VP

Hearty congratulations also go out to our own Chief Doug Shoemaker, a SPSC instructor and graduate. Doug was recently elected 5th Vice President of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. He serves as the chief of the Grand Junction (CO) Police Department.

New Heavy Truck Crash Course Announced

NUCPS begins the 2021-22 academic year rolling out an exciting new Crash Investigation & Reconstruction course. Heavy Truck Forensic Mechanical Inspection for Collision Investigators teaches crash professionals the skills required to properly document and analyze the unique aspects of commercial motor vehicle collisions. In addition to a lecture component, the course features significant hands-on work. By the end of the five-day class, students will be able to explain how components of specific vehicle systems may have been factors in a collision. They will also be able to restore a damaged air-brake system on a heavy-duty commercial vehicle to its pre-collision condition in order to collect data for calculations used to evaluate braking efficiency.

September 2021

Annual Meeting Highlights

The 2021 annual TAP meeting was held on September 11, 2021, in a virtual format. This newsletter includes highlights from the meeting.

Over the past several years, there have been increasing reports of HGN clues being observed during cannabis-related evaluations. The Scientific Workgroup continues to review multiple sources of information in consideration of revisions to the DECP curriculum. At the current time, the Scientific Workgroup has made recommendations to consider revising portions of the curriculum to indicate that a lack of smooth pursuit may be observed in cannabis-impaired individuals, but current literature does not support a high prevalence in the population and is NOT a prerequisite to a finding of cannabis impairment. Additional research and review are needed before consideration is given to any changes to the matrix or footnotes.

Other highlights from the Annual TAP meeting include:

- Recommendations were offered revising curriculum language to reiterate that the HGN test is a battery of examinations, and clarifying when a subject is said to "have" HGN. It is recommended practitioners reserve such statements to a finding of four or more clues, indicating a gaze nystagmus was observed.
- Clarification and guidance were provided regarding the minimum distance the focal point should be from the subject while checking pupil sizes. The current manual verbiage indicating "several feet away" is sufficient to avoid the potential of accommodation reflex. A distance greater than six feet is ONLY necessary when demonstrating accommodation reflex.
- The new/updated DRE Roll Call training video, "Utilizing Drug Recognition Experts" is available for viewing and downloading at WWW.DECP.ORG under "What's New". This video helps road officers understand a DRE's role and when to request one during a DWI investigation.
- Standard 2.9 was modified to require a course manager for each DRE Pre-school and DRE School.

TAP Positions Expiring

The following TAP positions will expire at the end of 2021: Medical (Optometrist), Police Training Institution, Western Region DRE-at-Large, and Eastern Region DRE-at-Large. Applications for these positions will be accepted up to November 12, 2021. For more information, click here.

Instead of sending police to mental health or substance use emergencies, the programs are intended to send trained behavioral health workers. The funding is not long-term but is intended to help build out the infrastructure and training needed to launch these teams.”

White House Working With Local Governments To Combat Homelessness

Bloomberg (9/20, Capps) reports that the White House is “launching a new national initiative to combat the rising tide of homelessness, a pact with local governments to commit resources and energy to the people suffering most due to the national housing crisis.” Bloomberg adds, “With ‘House America,’ the administration...is asking leaders of city, county, state and tribal governments across the U.S. to make a public pledge to reduce homelessness. In turn, the federal government will provide guidance and support to achieve two goals: providing permanent housing for people experiencing homelessness and building new affordable units for those on the brink.”

The Laurel (MS) Leader Call (9/20) reports, "The Jones County Sheriff's Department stopped 19 impaired drivers and found five fugitives over an 18-day period, according to enforcement results for the Drive Sober Or Get Pulled Over enforcement campaign. Those were two of the totals from the Aug. 20-Sept. 6 campaign. The funding is not long-term but is intended to help build out the infrastructure and training needed to launch these teams.”

Vermont State Police Names Mental Health Programs Director

The AP (9/20) reports, “The Vermont State Police has its first director of mental health programs to help coordinate and oversee the delivery of mental health services to people who come into contact with state police, officials said.” Mourning Fox, “who was deputy commissioner of the Vermont Department of Mental Health for the last four years and has more than 25 years of experience in the field, was named to the position, the Department of Public Safety and state police announced last week. ‘This is a crucial position within the Department of Public Safety and for the Vermont public safety community as we pursue short-, medium- and long-term goals with respect to mental health response and reimagining policing and safety services,’ DPS Commissioner Michael Schirling said in a statement.”

White House Working With Local Governments To Combat Homelessness

Bloomberg (9/20, Capps) reports that the White House is “launching a new national initiative to combat the rising tide of homelessness, a pact with local governments to commit resources and energy to the people suffering most due to the national housing crisis.” Bloomberg adds, “With ‘House America,’ the administration...is asking leaders of city, county, state and tribal governments across the U.S. to make a public pledge to reduce homelessness. In turn, the federal government will provide guidance and support to achieve two goals: providing permanent housing for people experiencing homelessness and building new affordable units for those on the brink.”

Security, Crime, and Drugs

Mafia Sting By Spanish, Italian Police Arrests 106

Reuters (9/20, Allen) reports Spanish and Italian police announced “on Monday they had arrested 106 people for belonging to a gang that allegedly laundered money for mafia groups and made millions of euros through online scams.” Most of the suspected members “were Italian nationals and the majority of the arrests took place on the Spanish Canary Island of Tenerife, Europol said in a statement.” The group made “around 10 million euros ($12 million) in profit last year, Europol said.” Newsweek (9/20, Colarossi) reports the group also “participated in drug trafficking, and laundered money.” The highly organized criminal network “largely targeted other Italians and contained computer experts, recruiters and organizers, and experts in both money laundering and cryptocurrencies.”

Police: Suspect In Custody After Two Students Shot At Virginia High School

The AP (9/20) reports two 17-year-old students were wounded in a shooting at Heritage High School in Newport News, Virginia “and a suspect is in custody, police said Monday.” The AP adds that according to Newport News Police Chief Steve Drew, “Both were taken to the hospital and neither injury was thought to be life-threatening.”

FBI Searches The Home Of Petito’s Fiance

The Washington Post (9/20, Bellware, Beachum) reports FBI investigators on Monday “swarmed the North Port, Fla., home of Brian Laundrie to execute a search warrant one day after human remains believed to be those of his missing fiancée, Gabby Petito, were found in Wyoming.”

Minnesota Man With History Of Imitating Police Is Arrested Again

The AP (9/20) reports from Minneapolis, Minnesota, “A man with a history of pretending to be a law enforcement officer was arrested in Minnesota after a TikTok user alerted a woman he was dating that he was faking it again.” The AP adds, “Authorities said in a complaint filed Friday that Reye Devon Simmons, 52, of Dodge Center, Minnesota, used the name ‘Rey Reeves’ and regularly held himself out as a federal agent on social media. He is charged in federal court in Minneapolis with impersonating a federal officer. Simmons’ profile photo on TikTok showed him wearing law enforcement gear. He made several posts displaying police equipment, badges, and firearms and referred ‘explicitly and implicitly’ to himself as a federal agent, authorities said.”

Grant-Funded Initiative Leads To Capture Of Five Fugitives, 19 Dangerous Drivers In Mississippi

The Laurel (MS) Leader Call (9/20) reports, “The Jones County Sheriff’s Department stopped 19 impaired drivers and found five fugitives over an 18-day period, according to enforcement results for the Drive Sober Or Get Pulled Over enforcement campaign. Those were two of the totals from the Aug. 20-Sept. 6 campaign. JCSD deputies manning safety checkpoints and conducting saturation patrols made arrests and/or issued citations as follows: Of the 18 DUI arrests, 14 of the drivers were believed to be drunk on alcohol and five were believed to be impaired by other substances and charged with DUI-other. ‘Our enforcement efforts using overtime grant funds provided by the Mississippi Office of Highway Safety successfully removed 19 drivers from our Jones County roadways who were driving impaired by alcohol or drugs,’ Jones County Sheriff Joe Berlin said. ‘We also apprehended five wanted fugitives.’”

Canadian Authorities Seize Fentanyl, Cocaine, Guns In Durham Region Bust

Canadian Press (9/20) reports, “Police east of Toronto say they have made a significant fentanyl seizure in a five-month drug probe.” Durham Regional Police “said they began the investigation after a serious increase in opioid-related deaths in the community. Police said they focused on finding fentanyl dealers in areas affected by the opioid crisis. The investigation – dubbed Project Econoline – led to the arrests of 44 people who face nearly 300 charges collectively.”

CTV (9/20) reports that authorities said the investigation “was spearheaded by the service’s drug enforcement unit and saw the execution of 28 search warrants within the Greater Toronto Area. Over the course of the investigation, police said they recovered 5.8 kilograms of fentanyl, 4.2 kilograms of cocaine, 205 grams of methamphetamine, 3,000 oxycodone pills, and 30 kilograms of illicit cannabis. As well, a quantity of hydromorphone, GHB, and MDMA was recovered. Investigators believe the street value of the drugs recovered amount to roughly $2.5 million.”

In case you missed this link earlier...

Please note that we have had success in using DRE Reconstruction in Illinois. This could be very useful in your DUI drug cases where you weren't fortunate to have a DRE respond at the time of the arrest.

Thanks,
Jen

Good Afternoon All -

Just a quick reminder of this week's webinars; the first is this month's National TSRP Program "Traffic Tuesday" Webinar and the second is the Florida TSRP "Webinar Wednesday" session for the week. Both of these sessions related to Drug DUIs; the National session discussing the fine-art of "DRE Reconstruction" and how a DRE can be used to review a Drug DUI case after-the-fact, and the Florida Session is about the DRE Program and DRE Matrix in general. Both sessions are general and not state specific, so all are welcome!

Information on these session is included below:

Title: DRE Reconstruction: Building a DUI Case After Leaving the Scene

Date: Tuesday, September 21, 2021

Time: 2p-330p Eastern

Presenter: Sgt Don Egdorf - Houston Police Department

DWI Task Force supervisor &Department Traffic Safety Officer

Registration Link: <https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/5576386935460570380>

Description: Many times when a fatal traffic crash occurs, it is either not possible to collect all of the evidence necessary while at the scene or that evidence was not initially collected by the original officers on scene. This presentation will discuss the work it takes on the back end of the fatal traffic crash, after the initial officers have left the scene, and what a DRE can do for you in the days following a fatal traffic crash to fully and thoroughly investigate that case.

Title: Drugged Driving and the DRE Matrix

Date: Wednesday, September 22, 2021

Time: 1p-3p Eastern

Presenter: Tim Cornelius, IPTM – Interim Florida State DRE Coordinator

Registration Link: <https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/4003752161932139276>

Description: Drug DUI Cases are extremely complex, and require both law enforcement officers and prosecutors to utilize advanced skills to properly evaluate and prosecute individuals suspected to be impaired by Drugs. This session will provide an overview of the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) Drug Evaluation and Classification Program (DECP) process that is used by law enforcement officers to evaluate suspected Drug-Impaired drivers so that prosecutors can better understand and explain this complex process in Court. It will discuss each of the specific, systematic and standardized twelve (12) steps that law enforcement officers must follow while conducting a Drug Influence Evaluation (DIE) in a Drug DUI case. Additionally, it will discuss the common signs and symptoms observed by law enforcement officers conducting a DIE using the DECP Drug Symptomology Chart or “DRE Matrix” so that both prosecutors and law enforcement officers can better evaluate and understand the Drug DUI case.

Good Afternoon All -

Just a quick reminder of this week's webinars; the first is this month's National TSRP Program "Traffic Tuesday" Webinar and the second is the Florida TSRP "Webinar Wednesday" session for the week. Both of these sessions related to Drug DUIs; the National session discussing the fine-art of "DRE Reconstruction" and how a DRE can be used to review a Drug DUI case after-the-fact, and the Florida Session is about the DRE Program and DRE Matrix in general. Both sessions are general and not state specific, so all are welcome!

Information on these session is included below:

Title: DRE Reconstruction: Building a DUI Case After Leaving the Scene

Date: Tuesday, September 21, 2021

Time: 2p-330p Eastern

Presenter: Sgt Don Egdorf - Houston Police Department

DWI Task Force supervisor & Department Traffic Safety Officer

Registration Link: <https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/5576386935460570380>

Description: Many times when a fatal traffic crash occurs, it is either not possible to collect all of the evidence necessary while at the scene or that evidence was not initially collected by the original officers on scene. This presentation will discuss the work it takes on the back end of the fatal traffic crash, after the initial officers have left the scene, and what a DRE can do for you in the days following a fatal traffic crash to fully and thoroughly investigate that case.

Title: Drugged Driving and the DRE Matrix

Date: Wednesday, September 22, 2021

Time: 1p-3p Eastern

Presenter: Tim Cornelius, IPTM – Interim Florida State DRE Coordinator

Registration Link: <https://attendee.gotowebinar.com/register/4003752161932139276>

Description: Drug DUI Cases are extremely complex, and require both law enforcement officers and prosecutors to utilize advanced skills to properly evaluate and prosecute individuals suspected to be impaired by Drugs. This session will provide an overview of the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) Drug Evaluation and Classification Program (DECP) process that is used by law enforcement officers to evaluate suspected Drug-Impaired drivers so that prosecutors can better understand and explain this complex process in Court. It will discuss each of the specific, systematic and standardized twelve (12) steps that law enforcement officers must follow while conducting a Drug Influence Evaluation (DIE) in a Drug DUI case. Additionally, it will discuss the common signs and symptoms observed by law enforcement officers conducting a DIE using the DECP Drug Symptomology Chart or “DRE Matrix” so that both prosecutors and law enforcement officers can better evaluate and understand the Drug DUI case.

There is NO CHARGE to attend these webinars, however you must register in advance using the links listed above. After registering you will receive a confirmation email containing instructions on how to join each webinar. Please make sure you retain the confirmation email sent to you and be careful to enter your email address correctly; you will not be able to join the webinar if you do not receive a confirmation email. If you will be unable to attend either of these webinars at the scheduled time but would still like to watch, please go ahead and register as everyone who is registered will receive a link to the recording of the webinar regardless of whether they attended.

If you have any questions or need any assistance registering for the webinar, please feel free to contact Vin Petty at VinPetty@FloridaTSRP.com.

I was able to write something very short on this to give the public ample notice to weigh in on your accreditation in time for the call-in. Whether there is space to run it in print this week is up to my editor.

For next week, I'd like to drill down on the whole Tier II accreditation process with a more in-depth story, as we did in 2019.

Also, why not do the National Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA) certification as some other area police departments such as Illinois State Police, Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Chicago, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, and Wheeling have?

I was able to write something very short on this to give the public ample notice to weigh in on your accreditation in time for the call-in. Whether there is space to run it in print this week is up to my editor.

For next week, I'd like to drill down on the whole Tier II accreditation process with a more in-depth story, as we did in 2019.

Also, why not do the National Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA) certification as some other area police departments such as Illinois State Police, Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Chicago, Elk Grove Village, Schaumburg, and Wheeling have?

Subject: RE: NPD ILEAP Tier II On-Site Assessment September 22 &23, 2021 Agenda

All,

Our ILEAP Tier 2 on-site assessment week is here! First off thank you for making this department great and the assistance you have provided me to show this on paper. Now we get to show this in person. I've attached our agenda with your interview times. If you have any questions please email or contact my desk (847)588-6506 / cell (847)980-3573.

Our two assessors are the best in ILEAP! Below are their bios.

ILEAP Assessment Team:

Holly Nearing

Holly Nearing retired after a 30-year career the Champaign Police Department with her final assignment being Deputy Chief of Professional Standards. As deputy chief, she was the accreditation manager for ILEAP, and was responsible for internal affairs, citizen complaints, Training, Evidence, and Records. As a Lieutenant, Nearing supervised a patrol district and FTO Unit, Investigations, and Training and Grants. She has been a certified assessor for ILEAP since 2009.

Ms. Nearing is a graduate of the Northwestern University School of Police Staff and Command (105th) and holds a master's degree in Public Administration from Governors State University, and a BS in Psychology from the University of Illinois. She is an adjunct instructor at the Police Training Institute.

Jeff Hamer

Jeff Hamer is in his 20th year at Macomb Police Department. Hamer has functioned in many roles within the department. Hamer was an FTO and Verbal Judo Instructor. When Hamer was a Sergeant, he supervised first shift patrol activities and took on several technology projects ranging from in car computers and video to social media and a web presence. As a Lieutenant, Hamer's duties involve supervising the first shift patrol officers, ILEAP Accreditation Manager, and functioned as the Tactical Commander for the multi-agency Strategic Response Team (SRT).

Hamer has a BS in Law Enforcement and Justice Administration from Western Illinois University as well as a Master's Degree in Organizational Leadership from Lewis University. Hamer is a graduate of the Northwestern University School of Police Staff and Command (323rd).

Hamer is also the ILEAP Coordinator for the Illinois Association of Chiefs of Police. In this role, Hamer coordinates the accreditation process for accredited agencies as well as departments preparing to become accredited.

Policing and Policy

Democrats Press Biden To Commute Sentences Of 4K Individuals Put On Home Confinement

The Hill (9/17, Johnson) reports that in excess of 25 House Democrats are urging the President “to commute the sentences of thousands who were placed on home confinement as part of the government’s effort to decrease crowding in prisons during the COVID-19 pandemic.” The Hill also says, “In a letter spearheaded by progressive Reps. Cori Bush (Mo.), Bonnie Watson Coleman (N.J.) and Pramila Jayapal (Wash.), as well as Rep. David Trone (Md.), lawmakers said that in addition to commuting those sentences, the administration should establish a review board for pending clemency petitions.” In Friday’s correspondence, the legislators said, “We urge you to use your authority as President to immediately commute the sentences of the 4,000 people who, under the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (‘CARES’) Act, are currently on home confinement and at risk of being sent back to federal prison.”

Justice Department Reviews Policies For Transgender Inmates

The AP (9/17, Balsamo, Ibrahim) reports the Justice Department “is reviewing its policies on housing transgender inmates in the federal prison system after protections for transgender prisoners were rolled back in the Trump administration.” The Bureau of Prison’s policies concerning transgender prisoners were pushed “into the spotlight this week after a leader of an Illinois anti-government militia group – who identifies as transgender-- was sentenced to 53 years in prison for masterminding the 2017 bombing of a Minnesota mosque.” Emily Claire Hari, “who was charged, tried and convicted as Michael Hari, was sentenced Monday for the bombing of Dar Al-Farooq Islamic Center in Bloomington, Minnesota. It will now be up to the Bureau of Prisons’ Transgender Executive Council – a group of psychology and correctional officials – to determine where to house Hari.”

Hochul Orders Release Of Almost 200 Rikers Detainees

The New York Times (9/17, O'Brien, Marcius) reports New York Gov. Kathy Hochul (D) on Friday “ordered the release of nearly 200 detainees from New York City’s Rikers Island jail complex, underscoring the growing alarm about violence and unbridled disorder at the notorious facility.” Hochul’s decision occurred in the midst of “increasing calls for federal or state intervention at the city-run jail, which officials and detainees say has plunged into chaos – Ms. Hochul described it as a ‘pressure cooker’ – and is rife with health and safety risks for inmates and employees alike.”

Conditions At Rikers Island For Inmates And Officers Spark Concerns. The Wall Street Journal (9/19, Paul, Subscription Publication) reports that New York officials are working to address problematic conditions at the Rikers Island jail complex, including unguarded inmates and prisoner suicide attempts. According to the Journal, attorneys and lawmakers say the safety of inmates and correctional officers at the complex has never been in more jeopardy in its 90-year history. New York Gov. Kathy Hochul on Friday ordered the release of 191 inmates from Rikers and signed a bill aiming to end reincarceration for technical parole violations, which city and state officials hope will help lower the inmate population at Rikers and improve conditions.

Some States Turn To Medicaid To Fund Community Violence Intervention Programs

USA Today (9/17, Subramanian) reports that there are “dozens of community violence intervention programs across the country that aims to intervene at the hospital after someone has been shot, stabbed or assaulted,” and as “the politically divisive gun violence debate stalls on Capitol Hill, where a pair of bills focused on universal background checks and red-flag laws have languished, some states are moving to secure long-term funding for these programs by tapping an unlikely federal tool: Medicaid.” Connecticut and Illinois this year “became the first states” to do so, and “advocates say other states are not far behind, paving the way for a national model as local officials look for ways to circumvent the longstanding gun debate in Washington.” USA Today adds this “idea has been in the works for years, advocates say, but not until the Biden administration signaled that states could – and should – use Medicaid dollars to support these violence prevention programs have state lawmakers stepped up.”

Administration, Mayors Using COVID Relief To Combat Crime

USA Today (9/19, Garrison) reports the Administration “has turned to the direct aid from the American Rescue Plan, approved by Congress in March, as one of its top strategies not only to combat rising crime in cities but to push back at attacks from Republicans seeking to tie Biden to the calls of progressive activists to ‘defund the police.’” USA Today adds that as “gun violence has soared amid the pandemic,” President Biden “and Democrats have touted the American Rescue Plan’s funding for cities and states, noting that no Republican members of Congress voted for the $1.9 trillion package.” However, USA Today says that “not all mayors are expanding their police forces,” and “several cities are embracing violence intervention programs, also supported by the Biden administration, that take on different forms: Some seek to disrupt crime before it occurs, while hospital-based interventions help individuals recovering from gun wounds with housing, employment and other assistance.”

Police To Receive Access To Security Camera Video Feed In Dearborn Schools

The Detroit Free Press (9/18) reported Dearborn police “will get access to a video feed of security cameras installed inside Dearborn public schools, drawing privacy and surveillance concerns by some civil rights advocates.” The Dearborn City Council “voted unanimously this week to approve the police department obtaining access to the footage taken at school buildings.” Council members “said the move was needed to help protect students and others at a time when many schools across the U.S. are concerned about violence and shooting incidents.” School district officials “stressed that they currently do not use cameras inside classrooms.”

Court Rules Minneapolis Residents May Vote On Police Department Measure

In online coverage Fox News (9/17, Colton) reported, “The Minnesota Supreme Court ruled that voters in Minneapolis may decide on whether or not to abolish” the city’s “police department in the upcoming municipal elections.” The ruling affects a ballot measure that “would do away with the Minneapolis charter requirement to have a police department with a minimum level of staffing.” The measure would “replace the police department with a public safety department.”

Federal Judge Lifts Race, Gender Hiring Quotas For Cincinnati Police

The AP (9/17, Welsh-Huggins) reported from Columbus, Ohio, “A federal judge has lifted race- and sex-based hiring quotas imposed on the Cincinnati Police Department 40 years ago to fix its lack of diversity, agreeing with the US Justice Department’s argument that the changes are no longer constitutional.” The AP adds, “At issue before US District Judge Susan Dlott was a consent decree put in place in 1981 when only 9.9% of the department’s officers were Black and only 3.4% were women. Today, more than 28% of the department’s officers are Black and 23% are women,” but “since that 1981 agreement, the U.S. Supreme Court has added strict scrutiny to the use of such race- and sex-based affirmative action, Dlott said. Though such hiring goals can be used to fix problems of diversity, they can no longer help maintain a diverse work force, the judge said.”

Security, Crime, and Drugs

Nearly Two Million Dollars Worth Of Illegal Drugs Seized In California

Newsweek (9/17, Ferris) reported that Homeland Security Investigations was involved with an investigation that led to the seizure of nearly two million dollars worth of illegal drugs in Monterey County, California. The investigation focused on a trucking company that is allegedly connected to the Sinaloa Cartel in Mexico. Eight unnamed individuals who have been arrested in connection with the investigation “face charges that include conspiracy to transport and distribute narcotics, firearms possession, gang enhancement and conspiracy to commit murder.” The Monterey County (CA) Herald (9/17, Herrera) also covered this story.

Horse Tranquilizer Drug Increasingly Involved In Overdose Deaths In Some US States

Fox News (9/17) published online coverage that said xylazine, a “horse tranquilizer drug often found mixed with opioids,” is “increasingly involved in overdose deaths in some US states.”

Windsor-Essex County Health Unit In Canada Issues Opioid Overdoses Warning

CBC (CAN) (9/17) reported that the Windsor-Essex County Health Unit in Canada is “warning of a recent uptick in hospitalizations and ambulance calls due to opioid overdoses.” According to the unit’s warning, the “increase was observed between Sept. 8 and Sept. 14.” CTV News (CAN) (9/17, Borrelli) published a similar article.

Official: British Gangs And Former International Rivals Joining Cocaine Forces

The Guardian (UK) (9/19) reports, “British organised crime groups are collaborating closely with former international rivals like the Italian mafia to import increasingly bigger cocaine shipments into Europe,” according to Lawrence Gibbons, “drug threat lead at the National Crime Agency.” Gibbons “said there was evidence that British gangs were forging an increasingly collegiate relationship with other powerful European crime groups, a notable development in the traditionally hyper-competitive world of cocaine trafficking.”

Technology

Treasury Working On Plans To Prevent Ransomware Attacks From Using Digital Currency

The Wall Street Journal (9/17, Talley, Volz, Subscription Publication) reports the Administration is working on responses to ransomware attacks to make it more difficult for their perpetrators to use digital currencies. The Treasury Department is planning to adopt some sanctions as early as next week. The Washington Post (9/17) reports the Treasury Department is “preparing to sanction financial exchanges that facilitate delivery of illicit digital payments to hackers, according to U.S. officials.”

USA Today (9/19, Garrison) reports the Administration “has turned to the direct aid from the American Rescue Plan, approved by Congress in March, as one of its top strategies not only to combat rising crime in cities but to push back at attacks from Republicans seeking to tie Biden to the calls of progressive activists to ‘defund the police.’” USA Today adds that as “gun violence has soared amid the pandemic,” President Biden “and Democrats have touted the American Rescue Plan’s funding for cities and states, noting that no Republican members of Congress voted for the $1.9 trillion package.” However, USA Today says that “not all mayors are expanding their police forces,” and “several cities are embracing violence intervention programs, also supported by the Biden administration, that take on different forms: Some seek to disrupt crime before it occurs, while hospital-based interventions help individuals recovering from gun wounds with housing, employment and other assistance.”

Police To Receive Access To Security Camera Video Feed In Dearborn Schools

The Detroit Free Press (9/18) reported Dearborn police “will get access to a video feed of security cameras installed inside Dearborn public schools, drawing privacy and surveillance concerns by some civil rights advocates.” The Dearborn City Council “voted unanimously this week to approve the police department obtaining access to the footage taken at school buildings.” Council members “said the move was needed to help protect students and others at a time when many schools across the U.S. are concerned about violence and shooting incidents.” School district officials “stressed that they currently do not use cameras inside classrooms.”

Court Rules Minneapolis Residents May Vote On Police Department Measure

In online coverage Fox News (9/17, Colton) reported, “The Minnesota Supreme Court ruled that voters in Minneapolis may decide on whether or not to abolish” the city’s “police department in the upcoming municipal elections.” The ruling affects a ballot measure that “would do away with the Minneapolis charter requirement to have a police department with a minimum level of staffing.” The measure would “replace the police department with a public safety department.”

Federal Judge Lifts Race, Gender Hiring Quotas For Cincinnati Police

The AP (9/17, Welsh-Huggins) reported from Columbus, Ohio, “A federal judge has lifted race- and sex-based hiring quotas imposed on the Cincinnati Police Department 40 years ago to fix its lack of diversity, agreeing with the US Justice Department’s argument that the changes are no longer constitutional.” The AP adds, “At issue before US District Judge Susan Dlott was a consent decree put in place in 1981 when only 9.9% of the department’s officers were Black and only 3.4% were women. Today, more than 28% of the department’s officers are Black and 23% are women,” but “since that 1981 agreement, the U.S. Supreme Court has added strict scrutiny to the use of such race- and sex-based affirmative action, Dlott said. Though such hiring goals can be used to fix problems of diversity, they can no longer help maintain a diverse work force, the judge said.”

The investigation focused on a trucking company that is allegedly connected to the Sinaloa Cartel in Mexico. Eight unnamed individuals who have been arrested in connection with the investigation “face charges that include conspiracy to transport and distribute narcotics, firearms possession, gang enhancement and conspiracy to commit murder.” The Monterey County (CA) Herald (9/17, Herrera) also covered this story.

Horse Tranquilizer Drug Increasingly Involved In Overdose Deaths In Some US States

Fox News (9/17) published online coverage that said xylazine, a “horse tranquilizer drug often found mixed with opioids,” is “increasingly involved in overdose deaths in some US states.”

Windsor-Essex County Health Unit In Canada Issues Opioid Overdoses Warning

Official: British Gangs And Former International Rivals Joining Cocaine Forces

The Guardian (UK) (9/19) reports, “British organised crime groups are collaborating closely with former international rivals like the Italian mafia to import increasingly bigger cocaine shipments into Europe,” according to Lawrence Gibbons, “drug threat lead at the National Crime Agency.” Gibbons “said there was evidence that British gangs were forging an increasingly collegiate relationship with other powerful European crime groups, a notable development in the traditionally hyper-competitive world of cocaine trafficking.”

Democrats Press Biden To Commute Sentences Of 4K Individuals Put On Home Confinement

The Hill (9/17, Johnson) reports that in excess of 25 House Democrats are urging the President “to commute the sentences of thousands who were placed on home confinement as part of the government’s effort to decrease crowding in prisons during the COVID-19 pandemic.” The Hill also says, “In a letter spearheaded by progressive Reps. Cori Bush (Mo.), Bonnie Watson Coleman (N.J.) and Pramila Jayapal (Wash.), as well as Rep. David Trone (Md.), lawmakers said that in addition to commuting those sentences, the administration should establish a review board for pending clemency petitions.” In Friday’s correspondence, the legislators said, “We urge you to use your authority as President to immediately commute the sentences of the 4,000 people who, under the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (‘CARES’) Act, are currently on home confinement and at risk of being sent back to federal prison.”

Justice Department Reviews Policies For Transgender Inmates

The AP (9/17, Balsamo, Ibrahim) reports the Justice Department “is reviewing its policies on housing transgender inmates in the federal prison system after protections for transgender prisoners were rolled back in the Trump administration.” The Bureau of Prison’s policies concerning transgender prisoners were pushed “into the spotlight this week after a leader of an Illinois anti-government militia group – who identifies as transgender-- was sentenced to 53 years in prison for masterminding the 2017 bombing of a Minnesota mosque.” Emily Claire Hari, “who was charged, tried and convicted as Michael Hari, was sentenced Monday for the bombing of Dar Al-Farooq Islamic Center in Bloomington, Minnesota. It will now be up to the Bureau of Prisons’ Transgender Executive Council – a group of psychology and correctional officials – to determine where to house Hari.”

Hochul Orders Release Of Almost 200 Rikers Detainees

The New York Times (9/17, O'Brien, Marcius) reports New York Gov. Kathy Hochul (D) on Friday “ordered the release of nearly 200 detainees from New York City’s Rikers Island jail complex, underscoring the growing alarm about violence and unbridled disorder at the notorious facility.” Hochul’s decision occurred in the midst of “increasing calls for federal or state intervention at the city-run jail, which officials and detainees say has plunged into chaos – Ms. Hochul described it as a ‘pressure cooker’ – and is rife with health and safety risks for inmates and employees alike.”

Conditions At Rikers Island For Inmates And Officers Spark Concerns. The Wall Street Journal (9/19, Paul, Subscription Publication) reports that New York officials are working to address problematic conditions at the Rikers Island jail complex, including unguarded inmates and prisoner suicide attempts. According to the Journal, attorneys and lawmakers say the safety of inmates and correctional officers at the complex has never been in more jeopardy in its 90-year history. New York Gov. Kathy Hochul on Friday ordered the release of 191 inmates from Rikers and signed a bill aiming to end reincarceration for technical parole violations, which city and state officials hope will help lower the inmate population at Rikers and improve conditions.

Some States Turn To Medicaid To Fund Community Violence Intervention Programs

USA Today (9/17, Subramanian) reports that there are “dozens of community violence intervention programs across the country that aims to intervene at the hospital after someone has been shot, stabbed or assaulted,” and as “the politically divisive gun violence debate stalls on Capitol Hill, where a pair of bills focused on universal background checks and red-flag laws have languished, some states are moving to secure long-term funding for these programs by tapping an unlikely federal tool: Medicaid.” Connecticut and Illinois this year “became the first states” to do so, and “advocates say other states are not far behind, paving the way for a national model as local officials look for ways to circumvent the longstanding gun debate in Washington.” USA Today adds this “idea has been in the works for years, advocates say, but not until the Biden administration signaled that states could – and should – use Medicaid dollars to support these violence prevention programs have state lawmakers stepped up.”

Administration, Mayors Using COVID Relief To Combat Crime

USA Today (9/19, Garrison) reports the Administration “has turned to the direct aid from the American Rescue Plan, approved by Congress in March, as one of its top strategies not only to combat rising crime in cities but to push back at attacks from Republicans seeking to tie Biden to the calls of progressive activists to ‘defund the police.’” USA Today adds that as “gun violence has soared amid the pandemic,” President Biden “and Democrats have touted the American Rescue Plan’s funding for cities and states, noting that no Republican members of Congress voted for the $1.9 trillion package.” However, USA Today says that “not all mayors are expanding their police forces,” and “several cities are embracing violence intervention programs, also supported by the Biden administration, that take on different forms: Some seek to disrupt crime before it occurs, while hospital-based interventions help individuals recovering from gun wounds with housing, employment and other assistance.”

IACP Cancels All In-Person Events...For 2nd Year in a Row

Due to Hurricane Ida and the devastating impact on the city of New Orleans, the IACP Conference cancelled all in-person events and transitioned the show online. The conference ran Sept 11-14.

"We recognize that this news is disappointing," organizers wrote in part. "Like all of you, we were looking forward to convening in person, networking, and learning together."

Last year, IACP had to make a similar move and transition the entire conference online due to the COVID pandemic. IACP 2022 is scheduled to take place Oct 15-18, in Dallas Texas. While IACP moved from in-person to online due to weather, a few shows are still feeling the effects of COVID. The New York Auto Show cancelled their 2021 event, due to the rise in COVID-19 Delta variant cases and stricter public-health measures put in place in New York City...and the NRA cancelled its annual meeting in Houston, TX due to COVID-19, citing a sharp rise in the Delta variant that was overwhelming hospitals and ICU's throughout Texas. Read more news...

GM Warns of Challenging Q3 Bigger Production Impact From Chip Shortage

General Motors predicts a challenging third quarter and said that its vehicle sales and production volumes would take a bigger-than-expected hit in the second half. GM's CFO, Paul Jacobson, recently told analysts at an RBC Capital Markets conference that because of the ongoing global shortage of semiconductor chips, the automaker's second-half vehicle sales and production would be down 200,000 units (largely in the third quarter). Stellantis announced that the global shortage of semiconductors will keep production of the Jeep Cherokee and Chrysler minivans down for 2 weeks in September, effecting its plants in Belvidere, Illinois and Windsor, Ontario. Ford also announced production cuts tied to the semiconductor shortage. For one week in September,

Ford's Dearborn Truck Plant, which makes the F-150 pickup truck, will operate on only one shift and Ford's Kansas City Assembly Plant, in Missouri, will experience delays. The industry has been experiencing a global shortage of the chips, used in a variety of car parts, since early this year. The chips are also used in small electronics and as more workers and children stayed home from work and school last year during the pandemic, demand for personal electronics, such as laptops, rose and created a shortage of chips. Automakers have had to either temporarily idle production or build vehicles just shy of all the parts to await chip parts to finish production and ship the vehicles to showrooms. Read more news...

Ford Adds Jobs To Increase Production of Electric F-150 Pickup

Ford is increasing production capacity for its upcoming F-150 Lightning pickup as it begins building prototypes of the electric pickup. The Detroit automaker said it is investing an additional $250 million and adding 450 jobs across three Michigan facilities, including the Rouge Electric Vehicle Center that's building the truck to increase annual production capacity for the vehicle to 80,000 units. Ford has now invested about $950 million in production of a hybrid version of the truck and the electric F-150, which is scheduled to go on sale next spring starting at about $40,000. Production and reservations for the F-150 Lightning are being closely watched by investors and industry analysts as a barometer for consumer acceptance of electric vehicles, specifically pickups. Read more news...
