

“PINEY WOODS ALCATRAZ”

A thing of grim beauty is Georgia's new State Prison. Beneath its gleaming marble frieze marches an early batch of prisoners, some in stripes as punishment. Prisoners have named the new penitentiary "Alcatraz of Piney Woods." They hate and dread it, partly because it is as nearly escape-proof as human ingenuity can make it and partly because it puts them inside four walls. Though guards may be cruel, the chain gang at least keeps Georgia prisoners outdoors where they are accustomed to living.
