Mr. Jared Kushner
Founder and Chief Executive Officer
A Fin Management LLC
16690 Sunny Isles Boulevard
Sunny Isles Beach, FL 33170

Dear Mr. Kushner:

We are writing to you over concerns that you improperly traded on your government position carrying out the Trump Administration's foreign policy in the Middle East to benefit your personal financial interests after leaving government office.

For four years, you led the Trump Administration's foreign policy in the Middle East, despite lacking any meaningful diplomatic experience, and despite significant conflicts of interest stemming from your family's lucrative business dealings in the region. Your support for Saudi interests was unwavering, even as Congress and the rest of the world closely scrutinized the country's human rights abuses in Yemen, the murder of journalist Jamal Khashoggi by Saudi assassins tied to Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, and Saudi Arabia's crackdown on political dissidents at home. After leaving your senior White House position, you formed an investment firm, A Fin Management, LLC (Affinity) and raised $2 billion from the Saudi Public Investment Fund (PIF), the sovereign wealth fund of Saudi Arabia, which is controlled by the Crown Prince. PIF made this substantial investment despite other senior Saudi officials' concerns over your lack of investment experience.¹

The Committee on Oversight and Reform is investigating whether you have improperly traded on your government position to obtain billions of dollars from the Saudi government and whether your personal financial interests improperly influenced U.S. foreign policy during the administration of your father-in-law, former President Trump. This investigation will inform the Committee about whether federal ethics laws should be strengthened to prevent senior public officials from taking advantage of their position within the federal government to reap a financial windfall—before, during, or after government employment.

Your Relationship with Saudi Arabia During the Trump Administration

While running for president, former President Trump bragged about his business ties to Saudi Arabia, stating at a rally in 2015: “I like the Saudis; they are very nice. I make a lot of money with them. They buy all sorts of my stuff—all kinds of toys from Trump. They pay me millions and hundreds of millions.” At another rally, he added, “Saudi Arabia, I get along with all of them. They buy apartments from me. They spend $40 million, $50 million.”²

Over the course of the Trump Administration, you and President Trump reshaped U.S. foreign policy toward Saudi Arabia to give the Kingdom what one scholar has termed “complete immunity” from consequences for its repressive and undemocratic actions.³ Former President Trump began his term by choosing Saudi Arabia as his first foreign trip, an unprecedented move for a newly elected president, and ended with his Administration refusing to suspend arms sales to the Saudi military despite its egregious human rights record.⁴ In light of Saudi Arabia’s recent $2 billion investment in Affinity, the Committee is concerned that these policy choices, and your prominent support for them, may have been motivated by personal financial interests.

Shortly after assuming your position as a Senior Advisor to the President, and despite your lack of meaningful foreign policy experience, President Trump placed you in charge of negotiating a peace deal to end the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.⁵ Although you did not represent the U.S. in an official diplomatic capacity, you used your role at the White House to exert an outsized influence on U.S. foreign policy with respect to Saudi Arabia, bypassing senior diplomatic officials at the State Department and steering U.S. foreign policy toward the benefit of Saudi Arabia and Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman.⁶

Early in 2017, you set aside protocol to organize a formal lunch at the White House for President Trump and then-Deputy Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman, allowing the Prince to “receive the kind of treatment usually reserved for heads of state” in the midst of his succession struggle for the Saudi crown.⁷ This decision, which created the appearance of U.S. interference in Saudi domestic politics, marked the beginning of a four-year relationship between you and the soon-to-be Crown Prince.

Shortly after this meeting, you personally intervened to secure a $110 billion arms deal to Saudi Arabia, reportedly calling a U.S. defense contractor to lower the price of a radar missile defense system.⁸ According to news reports, you also pushed State and Defense Department officials to increase the size of the arms deal. For example, at a National Security Council meeting, you reportedly stated: “We need to sell them as much as possible.”⁹ When senior officials and Congress became concerned by mounting evidence that Saudi Arabia was using U.S. weapons in Yemen in a manner that inflicted civilian casualties, President Trump vetoed a bipartisan congressional resolution that would have stopped the sale of arms to the country.¹⁰

In October 2018, Saudi agents brutally killed and dismembered journalist and regime-critic Jamal Khashoggi, a murder which U.S. intelligence assessments determined was likely carried out on the orders of Crown Prince bin Salman. In the aftermath of Mr. Khashoggi’s murder, you “became the prince’s most important defender inside the White House” and reportedly “offered the crown prince advice about how to weather the storm, urging him to resolve his conflicts around the region and avoid further embarrassments.”¹¹

In another instance, you met privately—without U.S. diplomats present—with officials from Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates (U.A.E.) and reportedly discussed those nations’ planned blockade of Qatar, a U.S. ally that hosts the largest U.S. military base in the Middle East. When Saudi Arabia and the U.A.E. carried out this blockade shortly thereafter, President Trump publicly supported their actions over the objections of senior U.S. officials, including Secretary of State Rex Tillerson.¹²

¹² Letter from Ranking Member Ron Wyden, Senate Committee on Finance, and Chairman Joaquin Castro, Subcommittee on Oversight & Investigations, House Foreign Affairs Committee, to Senior Counsel to the President

Throughout this time, you reportedly exchanged personal messages on WhatsApp with Crown Prince bin Salman, worrying senior officials who believed such informal contacts, outside normal diplomatic channels, could leave you “susceptible to Saudi manipulation.”¹³ These concerns were heightened by reports that the Crown Prince told confidants that you were “in his pocket.”¹⁴

In 2019, the Committee released two reports detailing how you pushed a project to share nuclear power technology with Saudi Arabia over the concerns of senior national security leaders. The Saudi nuclear project, if successful, would have benefitted an asset management firm, Brookfield Asset Management, which subsequently bailed out a troubled property owned by your family’s real estate business, Kushner Companies.¹⁵

In addition, while you were shaping U.S. policy toward Saudi Arabia, your brother Joshua Kushner’s venture capital firm Thrive Capital Management (Thrive), was engaging in business with Saudi officials, including the managing director of PIF.¹⁶ Prior to entering government service, you were closely involved with Thrive, receiving millions from the fund and sitting on the fund’s board and investment committees until January 2017.¹⁷ Your intersecting family, financial, and political relationships led government ethics experts to question your impartiality in dealing with Saudi Arabia and whether you were playing a “shell game” with your assets by selling them to your brother.¹⁸

During the final two months of the Trump Administration, after President Trump lost reelection to President Biden, you traveled twice to Saudi Arabia, reportedly meeting with senior Saudi officials both times.¹⁹ While these trips were nominally to advance U.S. government priorities, you returned to the region shortly thereafter as a private citizen, reportedly to raise funds for Affinity.²⁰

Saudi Sovereign Wealth Fund Investment Raises Significant Concerns

On January 21, 2021, the day after the Trump Administration ended and your first full day as a private citizen, you incorporated Affinity in the state of Delaware.²¹ Six months later, Affinity secured a $2 billion investment from the Saudi sovereign wealth fund, PIF, which is controlled by Crown Prince bin Salman. The Crown Prince reportedly made this investment against the recommendation of the PIF's own investment committee, a panel of experienced financiers and government officials charged with screening and evaluating potential investments.

According to reports, PIF's investment committee expressed significant concerns about the "inexperience of the Affinity Fund management" and about your own limited experience in private equity. The panel also concluded that Affinity's operations were "unsatisfactory in all respects." Notwithstanding these objections, PIF's full board, led by Crown Prince bin Salman, overruled the investment panel and decided to invest $2 billion with Affinity. Based on Securities and Exchange Commission filings, it appears that, as of March 30, 2022, PIF was one of only two investors in Affinity.²²

You stand to gain personally from this investment. Reports indicate that PIF's investment will generate $25 million in annual asset management fees for Affinity, which you own. In addition, Affinity will enjoy a 20% share of any profits from its investments.²³

A presentation to potential investors prepared by Affinity suggests that its business model is focused on trading on the relationships you built while working for your father-in-law in the White House. The presentation underscores "Affinity's unique network and experience" and its promise to draw on the "operational and geopolitical expertise of the unique Affinity network." The presentation specifically highlights the Abraham Accords, the Peace to Prosperity Plan for the Middle East, and the OPEC+ 2020 Production Cut—all foreign policy matters that you either "led," "oversaw," or were "instrumental" in facilitating.²⁴ When Saudi Arabian officials questioned Affinity on the risks posed by the large investment being sought by your firm, Affinity reportedly responded that it would help the Saudis "capitalize on the capabilities of Affinity's founders' deep understanding of government policies and geopolitical systems," an apparent reference to your political access and personal connections, rather than your economic expertise.²⁵

The limited details that have been revealed about Affinity and the PIF investment raise serious questions about your decision to seek a significant investment from a country with whom you recently dealt in an official capacity while purportedly serving the American people, as well as PIF's motivation in providing a $2 billion dollar investment in a brand-new fund with a principal who has no specialized experience in these types of funds.

Concerns About Your Post White House Activities and Committee Requests

The Committee is concerned by your decision to solicit billions of dollars from the Saudi government immediately following your significant involvement in shaping U.S.-Saudi relations. Your close relationship with Crown Prince bin Salman, your pro-Saudi positions during the Trump Administration, and PIF's decision to fund the lion's share of your new business venture—only six months after the end of your White House tenure—create the appearance of a quid pro quo for your foreign policy work during the Trump Administration.²⁶ Recent reports that you have both solicited investments from and invested funds in other countries for which you held responsibility while in a position of government authority raise similar concerns.²⁷

The Committee on Oversight and Reform has broad oversight and legislative jurisdiction over government ethics throughout the executive branch and is considering reforms of the post-employment activities of senior government officials. The Committee's investigation may lead to legislation including, but not limited to, post-employment restrictions limiting the scope and nature of business relationships for former high-level executive branch officials with foreign entities. The Committee has passed numerous legislative proposals to strengthen federal ethics laws for federal employees, including White House employees.²⁸

The basic obligation of public service is to place loyalty to the Constitution, laws, and ethical principles above private gain. When government officials fail to act ethically they can undermine public confidence in the integrity of the federal government.²⁹ In light of the significant ethics issues raised by the Saudi government's $2 billion investment in your fund and in order to understand the full scope of the potential conflicts of interest posed by your government service and post-employment activities, the Committee requests that you and Affinity produce the following documents, to include your personal communications and records, by June 16, 2022:

1. All documents and communications regarding PIF's investment in Affinity, including but not limited to any references to your government employment, foreign policy initiatives in which you participated, the Trump Administration and related policies or events, or your relationship to Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman or other Saudi officials;
2. All communications between you and Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman or other Saudi officials from January 2017 to the present, and all documents related to such communications, related to your or your family's present or future business ventures, including but not limited to Saudi investments or participation in any of these ventures;³⁰
