

A mounted marker at the United States Military Academy bears the words "Ku Klux Klan." The Commission visited West Point and worked closely with leaders and historians there to identify assets such as these that have clear ties to the Confederacy, while also gathering information to determine whether or not those assets fall within the Commission's remit.