Cause Of Death Usually Does Not Impact Life Insurance Payment

July 31, 2017 /

UNLESS A SUICIDE WAS INVOLVED AND OCCURRED WITHIN CONTESTABILITY PERIOD

Many people mistakenly assume that the cause of death might impact whether the life insurance company pays the claim for life insurance. Under most circumstances, however, the cause of death would only directly impact the life insurance company's decision to pay the benefit owed (1) if the deceased committed suicide and (2) if the death occurred within the "look back" period, referred to as the contestability period. This rule would not apply to an accidental death policy.

How We Investigate

How does the FBI work a case?

It starts with world-class training provided to our agents, analysts, and other personnel at the FBI's Training Academy in Quantico, Virginia. The FBI's highly trained personnel then use intelligence, science, technology, and other tools to investigate federal crimes and terrorism. In some cases, the FBI turns to special tactics and teams to catch dangerous suspects in high-pressure situations.

Signs of Being Under Federal Investigation

Find out if you're under government investigation as a federal contractor. When investigators contact you, or agents serve you with a subpoena request, or you receive a DOJ target letter, you must be very careful of how you proceed next.

When looking at obvious and not-so-obvious signs of being under federal investigation, and despite thinking that you have done nothing wrong, the reality is that agents will continue to investigate. If prosecutors believe that they can remotely have a case against you, then they will target you for an investigation and move forward with a possible indictment.
