UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

THE CENTER FOR INVESTIGATIVE REPORTING and WILL EVANS,

No. 3:22-cv-07182-WHA

Plaintiffs,

v.

ORDER ON CROSS-MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGEMENT

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,

Defendant.

INTRODUCTION

In this FOIA action, both sides move for summary judgement. For the reasons stated below, both motions are DENIED IN PART AND GRANTED IN PART.

STATEMENT

Plaintiff Center for Investigative Reporting (“CIR”) is a non-profit, investigative news organization that publishes Reveal, a news website and hosts a weekly public radio show. Plaintiff Will Evans is a staff reporter for Reveal and is an employee of CIR (Dkt. No. 1 ¶¶ 18-19). Defendant Department of Labor is a department of the executive branch which oversees the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (“OFCCP”).

Employers with 100 or more employees are required to submit annual reports using Standard Form 100, also known as “EEO-1 Reports,” to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission

1 (“EEOC”). Companies that contract with the federal government and have at least fifty employees 2 are required to submit EEO-1 reports to OFCCP. The EEO-1 reports contain data about the 3 gender, racial or ethnic background, and one of ten job categories of the company’s employees 4 (Dkt. No. 38 at 2). The EEOC and OFCCP collect the EEO-1 data jointly. OFCCP uses the EEO-5 1 reports to see if the contractors are complying with Executive Order 11246, which prohibits 6 employment discrimination by government contractors (Dkt. No. 1 at 4).

7 OFCCP does not proactively disclose the EEO-1 reports. An individual or an entity must 8 submit a FOIA request to gain access to the reports. Once a FOIA request has been submitted, 9 OFCCP must notify each federal contractor that their EEO-1 report has been requested and OFCCP 10 must then make a separate determination as to whether an exemption to disclosure applies. This 11 process allows the contractor to object prior to responding to the FOIA request (Dkt. No. 38 at 3).

12 Between January 2019 and June 2022, plaintiffs submitted four FOIA requests (which were 13 consolidated into a single request by June 2022) to defendant for all EEO-1 reports submitted by all 14 federal contractors from 2016 through 2020. This request covered roughly 75,000 reports from 15 24,355 federal contractors. By August 2022, OFCCP published a notice in the Federal Register 16 informing all contractors of plaintiffs’ request and provided them with an opportunity to object to 17 the request. By April 2022, OFCCP had released all EEO-1 reports of all non-objecting 18 contractors (Dkt. No. 39 at 5). Contractors numbered at 4,796 objected to the disclosure (Dkt. No.
19 38 at 5).

20 In April 2023, an order directed defendant to select six representative objecting contractors 21 for a bellwether summary judgment motion (Dkt. No. 38 at 5). The following companies are 22 bellwether objectors: DHL Global Business Services (“DHL”); Network Management Resources, 23 Inc. (“NMR”); Allied Universal Security Services (“Allied Universal”); Brandenburg Industrial 24 Service Co. (“Brandenburg”); and NorthShore University HealthSystem (“NorthShore”). The sixth 25 bellwether objector is no longer proceeding in this matter. Both sides have filed motions for 26 summary judgement. This order follows full briefing and oral argument.

1 ANALYSIS

2 1. LEGAL STANDARD.

3 A. The Freedom of Information Act (“FOIA”) (5 U.S.C. § 4 552).

5 FOIA’s purpose is to facilitate “public access to official information ‘shielded 6 unnecessarily’ from public view and establish[ing] a ‘judicially enforceable right to secure 7 such information from possibly unwilling official hands.’” Lahr v. Nat’l Transp. Bd., 569 F.3d 8 964, 973 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting Dep’t of Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 361 (1976)).
 9 FOIA is designed to “pierce the veil of administrative secrecy and to open agency action to the 10 light of public scrutiny.” Dep’t of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. at 361 (1976) (internal 11 quotation marks omitted). FOIA “mandates a policy of broad disclosure of government 12 documents.” Church of Scientology of California v. U.S. Dep’t of Army, 611 F.2d 738, 741 (9th 13 Cir. 1979), overruled on other grounds by Animal Legal Def. Fund v. U.S. Food & Drug 14 Admin., 836 F.3d 987 (9th Cir. 2016).

15 After a request is made, an agency may withhold part of or an entire document if the 16 material falls into one of nine statutory exemptions found in 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Maricopa 17 Audubon Soc. v. U.S. Forest Serv., 108 F.3d 1082, 1085 (9th Cir. 1997). “These exemptions 18 are explicitly exclusive and must be narrowly construed in light of FOIA’s dominant objective 19 of disclosure, not secrecy.” Ibid. (citations and quotations omitted). “FOIA’s strong 20 presumption in favor of disclosure places the burden on the government to show that an 21 exemption properly applies to the records it seeks to withhold.” Hamdan v. U.S. Dep’t of 22 Justice, 797 F.3d 759, 772 (9th Cir. 2015).

23 B. Summary Judgment.

24 To prevail on summary judgment in a FOIA case, the agency must show that, drawing all 25 reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the requester, there is no genuine issue of 26 material fact with respect to the agency’s compliance with FOIA. Lahr, 569 F.3d at 986. The 27 agency may meet this burden by through affidavits or declarations which demonstrate that the 28 agency’s actions are FOIA-compliant by explaining in reasonable detail that it qualifies for an

1 exemption to FOIA. Am. C. L. Union of N. Cal. v. Dep't of Just., No. 12-cv-04008-MEJ, 2014 2 WL 4954121 at *6 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 30, 2014) (Judge Maria-Elena James). Therefore, an 3 agency's burden is not met using conclusory or generalized allegations of exemptions. Ibid.
4 (citing Kamman v. IRS, 56 F.3d 46, 48 (9th Cir. 1995)).

5 Where, as here, both sides have filed cross-motions for summary judgment, "each motion 6 must be considered on its own merits." Fair Hous. Council of Riverside Cty., Inc. v. Riverside 7 Two, 249 F.3d 1132, 1136 (9th Cir. 2001) (quotation omitted). "In fulfilling its duty to review 8 each cross-motion separately, the court must review the evidence submitted in support of each 9 cross-motion." Ibid.

10 2. COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL

11 Defendant argues that disclosure of EEO-1 reports is prevented under Exemption 4 of 12 FOIA and the Trade Secrets Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1905. Plaintiffs, however, contend that 13 defendant's claims for Exemption 4 and the Trade Secrets Act are barred because these issues 14 have already been litigated in Center for Investigative Reporting v. U.S. Department of Labor, 15 424 F.Supp.3d 771 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (Judge Kandis A. Westmore) ("CIR I").

16 This order finds that plaintiffs are not permitted to bring a claim of offensive collateral 17 estoppel against the government to prevent the relitigation of these issues. U.S. v. Mendoza, 18 464 U.S. 154, 162 (1984) ("nonmutual offensive collateral estoppel simply does not apply 19 against the government."). The Supreme Court recognized that the government is not "in a 20 position identical to that of a private litigant," in terms of the sheer number of cases the 21 government files across the country, dwarfing even the most litigious private parties. Id. at 159 22 (citing INS v. Hibi, 414 U.S. 5, 8 (1973)). Further, government litigation often involves issues 23 of public importance, where the government is the only appropriate party. Id. at 160. As such, 24 defendant is not barred from raising the matter in this court and plaintiffs' argument is rejected.

25 3. EXEMPTION 4 TO FOIA.

26 Exemption 4 of FOIA excuses mandatory disclosure for any commercial or financial 27 information obtained from a person or by the government that is also privileged or 28 confidential. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Defendant contends that the EEO-1 reports sought by 1 plaintiffs are both commercial and confidential in nature which would exempt defendant from 2 producing them (Dkt. No. 38 at 10, 17).

3 A. ‘Commercial’ Requirement of Exemption 4.

4 Defendant maintains that EEO-1 reports are commercial in nature because they contain 5 information about headcount totals and staffing levels across job occupation categories 6 (McKay Decl., Dkt. No. 34-1 ¶¶ 14, 22). Defendant also asserts that the demographic data in 7 the report reveals the company’s diversity within its workforce which is also commercial (Dkt.
8 No. 38 at 11). Plaintiffs argue that EEO-1 reports are not commercial because the information 9 contained therein is too attenuated from the commercial aspects of business (Dkt. No. 39 at 10 12).

11 FOIA does not define ‘commercial,’ but our court of appeals has defined the term using 12 its ordinary or common meaning. Watkins v. U.S. Bureau of Customs and Border Protection, 13 643 F.3d 1189, 1194 (9th Cir. 2011). Our court of appeals has also followed the lead of the 14 D.C. Circuit in recognizing limits to an otherwise broad understanding of ‘commercial.’ For 15 instance, “not every bit of information submitted to the government by a commercial entity 16 qualifies for protection under Exemption 4.” Pub. Citizen Health Rsch Grp, v. Food and Drug 17 Admin., 704 F.2d 1280, 1290 (D.C. Cir. 1983). Likewise, information regarding names, 18 addresses, telephone numbers, and business hours is not commercial information. Getman v.
19 N.L.R.B., 450 F.2d 670, 673 (D.C. Cir. 1971); Carlson, 504 F.3d 1123, 1129 (9th Cir. 2007).
20 Defendant argues that Getman does not apply here because this matter does not involve 21 employee addresses or a partial list of employee names, as there are in Getman. However, the 22 relevance of Getman is not found in a partial list of employee names but in the D.C. Circuit’s 23 acknowledgement that there are limits to the word ‘commercial.’ Likewise, our court of 24 appeals has recognized that, at some point, considering certain information as commercial may 25 render it “too broad a definition of commercial.” Carlson, 504 F.3d at 1129.

26 Consequently, while there is no clearly defined limit for what is considered ‘commercial’ 27 within our court of appeals, the D.C. Circuit has indicated that Exemption 4 is designed to “to 28 shield from public release intrinsically valuable business information such as ‘business sales

1 statistics, inventories, customer lists, and manufacturing processes.” Citizens for Resp. and 2 Ethics in Washington v. United States Department of Justice, 58 F.4th 1255, 1264 (D.C. Cir.
3 2023). However, merely suggesting that the disclosure of information will result in 4 commercial repercussions does not satisfy the ‘commercial’ requirement under Exemption 4; 5 the agency must demonstrate that the information is commercial in and of itself. Id., at 1268.
6 This is because FOIA exemptions must be narrowly construed. Milner v. Department of Navy, 7 562 U.S. 562, 565 (2011).

8 First, defendant argues that the EEO-1 reports reveal commercial data because the 9 workforce composition is a “core operational metric that is critical to their organizations’ 10 success” (Dkt. No. 38 at 10). One bellwether objector, Allied Universal, asserts that the 11 headcount data itself is vital to its commercial profitability because it’s primary “‘product’ is 12 the staff it employs,” and that the staffing data is a “critical component of Allied Universal’s 13 business model and key to its revenues and profitability” (Baxter Decl., Dkt. No. 34-4 ¶¶ 7,13).

14 Plaintiffs counter by arguing that while there is an obvious, definitional relationship 15 between a company’s workforce data and the company’s commercial data, the data from the 16 reports are broad and non-specific. In order to be commercially valuable, plaintiffs contend, 17 the information “almost inevitably . . . needs to be identifiable for narrow, specific aspects of a 18 firm’s operations” (Bendick Decl., Dkt. No. 34-1 ¶ 18). EEO-1 reports, according to plaintiffs, 19 reveal commercially valuable information “by proxy,” but do not relate operational or financial 20 information in a direct way (Bendick Decl., Dkt. No. 34-1 ¶ 16). This order agrees. The 21 EEO-1 form contains broadly sweeping categories such as ‘professionals’ and ‘senior officials’ 22 which are to be used irrespective of relevant job categories that are found within any one 23 industry. As a result, the report cannot itself yield any commercial insight that is specific to 24 the operations of the federal contractor.

25 Defendant also asserts that the EEO-1 report is commercial because one is able to read 26 the number of employees in one category relative to another, which could potentially reveal a 27 strategy in the distribution of a workforce. However, aside from conclusory claims that these 28

1 ten general job categories reveal the specific workforce structure of a specific company, the 2 bellwether objectors provide no plausible factual basis to establish this argument.

3 One declaration, however, provided a non-conclusory basis for establishing that the 4 EEO-1 report reveals the workforce structure of a company: Allied Universal argues that its 5 successful business model can be ascertained by looking at the ratio of security guard positions 6 to client support positions (Baxter Decl., Dkt. No. 34-4 ¶ 11). Allied United contends that its 7 security guards are its main source of revenue, and that its staffing strategies would be revealed 8 by looking at the ratio of security guards to non-security guards. However, Allied Universal 9 also explains that the most important financial metrics are established by how many hours a 10 security guard worked at a customer’s site and the negotiated ‘bill rate’ (id. at ¶ 8). A third 11 metric Allied Universal uses to determine their operating expenses is staffing costs. (ibid.). To 12 be clear, none of these three metrics are found in the EEO-1 report. While the number of 13 employees working at Allied Universal is no doubt relevant, it does not itself reveal the 14 staffing strategies of the company without any of the other three aforementioned metrics. In 15 essence, Allied United is over-stating the contents of and the potential findings one could make 16 using the EEO-1 report and therefore fails to establish the commercial nature of the data in the 17 report itself.

18 Second, defendant contends that the diversity data contained within EEO-1 reports is 19 “inherently commercial,” because it creates “business value . . . ‘that translates into a 20 competitive advantage for firms’” (Dkt. No. 38 at 11; Roberson Decl., Dkt. 34-2 ¶ 9). The 21 bellwether objectors echo this sentiment in several declarations. For example, NMR 22 Consulting uses diversity data “to allow management to determine areas of opportunity to 23 increase diversity so it can leverage these advantages” (Sobieski Decl., Dkt. No. 34-7 ¶ 16).
24 DHL finds that diversity data is beneficial to success because it “helps boost innovation, and 25 leads to the attraction, recruitment, and retention of more diverse employees” (Barcon Decl., 26 Dkt. No. 34-6 ¶ 10; see also Jasinowski Decl., Dkt. No. 34-5 ¶ 16). Likewise, at the hearing, 27 counsel for defendant stated that there is “inherent” commercial significance across 28

1 demographics of employees simply because “companies have universally determined that there 2 is commercial value in diversity.”

3 Plaintiffs reject the argument that there is commercial significance in diversity data.
4 Instead, plaintiffs assert that diversity or demographics data is not commercial for the same 5 reason that employee names and addresses are not commercial “because it concerns 6 employees, not ‘commerce, trade, or profit’” (Dkt. No. 39 at 13) (citing Carlson, 504 F.3d at 7 1129). Plaintiffs argue that these statements from the bellwether objectors’ declarations are 8 conclusory in nature and are not specific enough to meet the government’s burden (Dkt. No. 39 9 at 14).

10 This order agrees. These declarations posit a vague connection between the data and the 11 commercial success of each company but do not demonstrate the inherently commercial nature 12 of the diversity data. Like names or birthdays, the demographic background of employees 13 does not speak to the commercial contributions of a company’s workforce and cannot be 14 imposed simply because the bellwether objectors deem it so. Carlson, 504 F.3d at 1129.

15 Lastly, defendant asserts that disclosing five years’ worth of information all at once may 16 reveal insight into the company’s operations which would not be revealed by any single EEO-1 17 report (Jasinowski Decl., Dkt. No. 34-5 at 4). Because this order does not find that there is a 18 commercial gain to be found in the headcount or demographic data within the EEO-1 report, so 19 too does it not find a compounded effect by releasing five years’ worth of data to plaintiffs. To 20 be clear, it will be approximately eight years since the first FOIA request and almost four years 21 since the most recent request. Even if an objector could plausibly establish that five years’ 22 worth of information would reveal commercial information, that data would probably be stale 23 by the time it was disclosed.

24 For the aforementioned reasons, this order does not find that these EEO-1 reports are 25 commercial in nature for the purpose of Exemption 4 of FOIA.

26 B. ‘Confidential’ Requirement of Exemption 4.

27 The second requirement under Exemption 4 is that the information must be confidential.
28 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Defendant contends that the confidentiality requirement is met solely by

1 the owner of the information viewing it as confidential and actually keeping it confidential 2 (Dkt. No. 38 at 14). Plaintiffs, however, argue that customs of the industry will also affect 3 whether information is confidential and contend that some of the bellwether objectors 4 themselves have published EEO-1 material either online or in annual reports (Dkt. No. 39 at 5 14-15).

6 The Supreme Court recently changed the test for confidentiality in Food Marketing 7 Institute v. Argus Leader, 139 S.Ct. 2356 (2019) (“Argus Leader”). Before Argus Leader, our 8 court of appeals had adopted the ‘competitive harm’ test which stated that commercial 9 information cannot be deemed confidential unless it was likely to cause substantial harm to the 10 competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. However, the 11 Supreme Court rejected this test because it was inconsistent with the ordinary meaning of 12 ‘confidential’ and the Court could not justify “arbitrarily constrict[ing] it either by adding 13 limitations found nowhere in its terms.” Argus Leader, 139 S.Ct. at 2366.

14 Because the EEO-1 reports are not commercial in nature, this order need not decide 15 whether the information is confidential under Argus Leader.

16 Since defendant was not able to demonstrate that the EEO-1 reports were commercial in 17 nature, defendant’s motion for EEO-1 reports to be exempt under Exemption 4 is DENIED.

18 4. TRADE SECRETS ACT (18 U.S.C. § 1905).

19 Defendant asserts that disclosure of the EEO-1 reports is prohibited under the Trade 20 Secrets Act (Dkt. No. 38 at 20). The Trade Secrets Act prevents the government from 21 disclosing “to any extent not authorized by law” any information concerning “trade secrets, 22 processes, operations, style of work, or apparatus, or to the identity, confidential statistical 23 data, amount or source of any income, profits, losses, or expenditures of any person, firm, 24 partnership, corporation, or association.” 18 U.S.C. § 1905. Defendant contends that because 25 the EEO-1 reports fall within Exemption 4, the Trade Secrets Act may prevent defendant (as a 26 government agency) from disclosing the reports (Dkt. No. 38 at 18).

27 Before Argus Leader, our court of appeals held that Exemption 4 of FOIA and the Trade 28 Secrets Act were coextensive. Pac. Architects & Engineers Inc. v. U.S. Dep’t of State, 906

1 F.2d 1345, 1347 (9th Cir. 1990). Since Argus Leader, our court of appeals has not revisited the 2 scope of Exemption 4 relative to the Trade Secrets Act. Synopsys, Inc. v. U.S. Department of 3 Labor, 2022 WL 1501094 at *4, n. 3 (9th Cir. 2022) (“We need not decide here whether 4 Exemption 4 is indeed now broader in scope than the Trade Secrets Act.”)

5 Defendant also argues that EEO-1 reports are protected under the Trade Secrets Act 6 because the report is “confidential statistical data” under the plain meaning of the terms found 7 in the Act. This order is not convinced by defendant’s superficial argument that diversity data 8 within an EEO-1 report is protected under the Trade Secrets Act. Since Exemption 4 of FOIA 9 and the Trade Secrets Act are no longer co-extensive, this order cannot and will not assume 10 that which is considered confidential under the former statute is also considered confidential 11 under the latter. The Supreme Court in Argus Leader reevaluated the test for confidentiality in 12 the context of FOIA and did not extend the test for confidentiality outside of FOIA.

13 Defendant’s contention that ‘confidential statistical data’ under the Trade Secrets Act is simply 14 governed by the plain meaning of the terms, is made without any substantive support from 15 caselaw and could possibly render the language of the Act meaningless. As such, defendant’s 16 motion is DENIED.

17 5. FOIA IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 2016.

18 In 2016, Congress amended FOIA to add the “foreseeable harm” standard in which 19 agencies “shall withhold information” under the FOIA “only if the agency 20 reasonably foresees that disclosure would harm an interest protected by an exemption” or 21 “disclosure is prohibited by law.” 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(8)(A)(i). In other words, even if an 22 exemption applies, an agency must release a record if disclosure would not reasonably harm 23 that exemption-protected interest and its disclosure is not prohibited by law. The 24 “foreseeable harm” standard applies here, where plaintiffs requested the documents at issue 25 after the date of enactment (June 30, 2016).

26 Defendant first argues that the foreseeable harm test is not required here because 27 disclosure is prohibited by the Trade Secrets Act (Dkt. No. 38 at 20). In the alternative, 28 defendant provides four interests protected by Exemption 4 which would be harmed if the 1 reports are disclosed: the submitters' interest in the confidentiality of the reports; their 2 commercial interest in keeping the documents confidential; OFCCP's interest in the accuracy 3 and availability of contractor's information; and OFCCP's interest in the efficiency and 4 effectiveness of its oversight (Dkt. No. 38 at 21). Plaintiffs contend that defendant has not met 5 its burden because it has failed to demonstrate "in any particularized manner," that any of the 6 aforementioned interests are a "foreseeable commercial or confidential harm that is objectively 7 at risk" (Dkt. No. 49 at 16).

8 As stated earlier, the Trade Secrets Act is inapplicable in this context and defendant does 9 not meet the standard for Exemption 4. Therefore, defendant must disclose the EEO-1 reports 10 and is not required to first meet the test under the FOIA Improvement Act of 2016.

11 6. DECLARATORY RELIEF FOR ALLEGED DELAY IN WITHHOLDING 12 RECORDS.

13 Plaintiffs alleged in their cross-motion for summary judgment that defendant has failed to 14 comply with FOIA by delaying disclosure of EEO-1 reports for a number of years (Dkt. No. 39 15 at 23-24).

16 An agency must make a determination on a FOIA request within 20 days after receipt of 17 the request unless exceptional circumstances specified in the statute are present, in which case 18 it can extend its response time by a maximum of 10 days. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A)(i)(ii). A 19 determination need not be the full production of documents, but the agency must at least 20 inform the requester what documents it will produce and exceptions it will claim. Our 21 Children's Earth Found. v. Nat'l Marine Fisheries Serv., 85 F.Supp.3d 1074, 1089 (N.D. Cal.
22 Mar. 30, 2015) (Judge Samuel Conti).

23 Here, plaintiffs characterize defendant's delays to have started from January 10, 2019, 24 when plaintiffs made their initial FOIA request (Dkt. No. 39 at 24). Defendant contests that all 25 four FOIA requests were not consolidated until June 3, 2022, and prior to this date, plaintiffs 26 were "adding, withdrawing, and combining their various requests" (Dkt. No. 42 at 22 n.11).
27 Defendant argues that OFCCP communicated to plaintiffs sixteen working days after plaintiffs 28 had consolidated all four FOIA requests, on June 27, 2022, that it would be following its

1 notification procedures and informed plaintiffs that it would disclose EEO-1 data for all 2 contractors who did not object to its disclosure (Dkt. No. 42 at 22).

3 Agencies are nonetheless statutorily required to provide timely determinations for each 4 FOIA request made: no later than thirty days after the request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A)(i)(ii).
5 Therefore, this order finds that defendant did not provide plaintiffs with a timely determination 6 following the first FOIA request. For the same reason, this order finds that defendant did not 7 provide timely determinations for the second and third FOIA requests.

8 However, a declaratory judgment is not always appropriate when the agency violates 9 these time limits. Issuing declaratory judgments must always be guided by “whether a 10 judgment will clarify and settle the legal relations at issue and whether it will afford relief from 11 the uncertainty and controversy giving rise to the proceedings.” Nat’l Res. Def. Council, 966 12 F.2d 1292, 1299 (9th Cir. 1992).

13 Contrary to plaintiffs’ assertion, this order finds that declaratory judgment is not 14 appropriate here. While defendant violated FOIA deadlines, this order does not find that 15 defendant’s actions were “intentional, persistent, and extreme” (citing Dkt. No. 39 at 23-24).
16 This order recognizes the large scope of all four FOIA requests made to defendant and that 17 defendant was tasked with producing five years’ worth of EEO-1 data, notifying 25,000 18 entities, and processing thousands of objections (Dkt. No. 42 at 25). As such, plaintiffs’ 19 motion for declaratory judgment is DENIED.

20 7. DEFENDANT’S WITHHOLDING OF 621 EEO-1 REPORTS.

21 Plaintiffs allege that defendant incorrectly withheld 621 EEO-1 reports (Dkt. No. 39 at 22 25). Defendant contends that these reports were submitted by entities who were not federal 23 contractors at the time of the reports and are therefore not within OFCCP’s jurisdiction 24 (Ahaghotu Decl., Dkt. No. 35 ¶ 59). Plaintiffs assert that defendant is applying a narrow 25 reading of the FOIA request incorrectly excludes who is considered a federal contractor. This 26 disagreement over whether the submitter of these 621 reports were federal contractors or under 27 the jurisdiction of the OFCCP when the reports were submitted raises a genuine issues of 28 material fact. For this reason, plaintiffs’ cross-motion for summary judgment is DENIED.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons and to the extent stated above, plaintiffs' and defendant's cross-motions for summary judgment are DENIED IN PART AND GRANTED IN PART. Defendant shall produce the remaining EEO-1 reports at issue within 28 days of this order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dated: December 22, 2023.
