

Woman charged with using fake ID for loans

A Cleveland, Okla., woman was charged in an indictment unsealed Friday with using false Social Security numbers to obtain more than $180,000 in loans from Tulsa banks.

Lisa Jeanine Findley, 34, is also accused of depositing a total of $8,380 in counterfeit checks in May and June 2003.

The federal indictment against Findley was filed under seal on Nov. 9. The charges were made public when Findley was arraigned Friday afternoon.

A grand jury alleges that Findley used a fake Social Security number to obtain loans of $25,336 and $33,463 from Arvest Bank in May 2002.

Findley is also charged with using another false Social Security number to get a $121,734 loan from Arkansas Valley State Bank in October 2004.

In an unrelated federal case,

Melisa Kay Pollard, 34, of Claremore was sentenced Friday to eight months in custody for misapplying $22,100 from July 8, 2003, through Feb. 16, 2005, while she worked at Tulsa Federal Employees Credit Union.

U.S. Senior District Judge H. Dale Cook ordered Pollard to serve four months in prison and four months under house arrest.

Pollard pleaded guilty Aug. 17 to a charge filed June 29 by the U.S. Attorney's Office in Tulsa.

Cook found Friday that Pollard abused a position of trust in committing the crime, which enhanced her sentence.

Pollard, whose prison sentence begins Dec. 28, was fined $2,000. The credit union regained its $22,100 loss by taking the sum from Pollard's 401(k) account at the credit union.
