

Updated July 1, 2024

China Primer: China's Political System

Introduction

The People's Republic of China (PRC or China) is the only Communist Party-led state either among the five permanent members of the United Nations Security Council or among the members of the G-20 grouping of major economies. As Congress has intensified its focus on China in the context of U.S.-China strategic competition, Members have increasingly sought to legislate and conduct oversight on matters that require an understanding of the PRC political system. Select features of that system are introduced below.

The Party-State

The PRC is both a nation state and a Leninist "party-state." The Communist Party of China (CPC), also known as the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), is China's dominant political institution. It operates a powerful and expansive bureaucracy and tasks itself with "exercis[ing] overall leadership over all areas of endeavor in every part of the country." The Party tasks the government with administration. Interlocking Party and government hierarchies extend down to the level of small towns. At every level and in every institution, Party rank takes precedence over government rank.

Xi Jinping, 71, leads the PRC party-state. He has served since 2012 as CPC General Secretary and Chairman of the CPC Central Military Commission, which oversees the Party's armed wing, the People's Liberation Army (PLA). (The PLA formally and explicitly serves the Party, not the nation.) Xi also has served since 2013 as PRC President, a head-of-state position that officially has a minor role in the operations of the PRC government. Xi began his third five-year terms in his Party and state posts in 2022 and 2023.

The Communist Party of China

The CPC established the PRC on October 1, 1949. Today, the CPC's 99 million members constitute nearly 7% of China's population. All members completed an application and vetting process to join. The Party's highest institution is the Central Committee, led by the General Secretary and including a 24-man Political Bureau (Politburo) and a 7-man Politburo Standing Committee. The latter is China's top decisionmaking body. (Figure 1.)

Figure 1. Hierarchies of the Communist Party of China (CPC, left) and Its Top Decisionmaking Body, the Central Committee's Politburo Standing Committee (PBSC, right)

PBSC members are listed in rank order; current as of July 1, 2024

Source: CRS graphic by Mari Y. Lee, based on data from the Communist Party of China's news portal, <http://cpc.people.com.cn/>.

The CPC requires the Central Committee to meet at least once annually, with meetings known as “plenary sessions” or “plenums.” Politburo Standing Committee members hold concurrent posts atop other parts of the political system, ensuring Party control of all political life in China.

- The Party’s no. 2 official, Li Qiang, currently serves concurrently as Premier of the State Council, the cabinet of the Central People’s Government, overseeing the government bureaucracy. The Party’s no. 6 official, Ding Xuexiang, serves as executive Vice Premier.
- The Party’s no. 3 official, Zhao Leji, currently heads the National People’s Congress (NPC), China’s unicameral legislature and, by protocol, China’s counterpart to the U.S. Congress. The NPC’s nearly 3,000 delegates represent 33 provincial-level jurisdictions, plus, purportedly, “Taiwan compatriots,” and the PLA. A third of delegates are sitting Party and government officials. The NPC’s powers include to enact and amend laws and approve the state budget and national plans for economic and social development.
- The Party’s no. 4 official, Wang Huning, heads the Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC), a political advisory body that is central to the CPC’s claim to lead a system of “multiparty cooperation and political consultation.” The CPPCC also serves as a vehicle for the CPC’s efforts to win over every part of society to support the CPC’s goals, an exercise the CPC calls building a “patriotic united front.” Wang also oversees policy on Hong Kong, Macao, and Taiwan.

The CPC’s no. 5 official, Cai Qi, heads the Party Secretariat. It manages the CPC Central Committee bureaucracy, which includes six functional departments:

- The Organization Department is the Party’s personnel agency, responsible for recruiting and training personnel and assigning them to positions across the party-state.
- The Publicity Department (or Propaganda Department) is responsible for the Party’s messaging and for guiding the media and ideological work.
- The United Front Work Department (UFWD) seeks to win support for the CPC from non-CPC groups at home and abroad, including intellectual, ethnic and religious communities, private business, and populations in Hong Kong, Macao, Taiwan, and globally, with a focus on ethnic-Chinese diaspora communities.
- The Commission for Political and Legal Affairs is responsible for public security and “social stability.” It oversees the work of the Supreme People’s Court, the Supreme People’s Procuratorate, and the Ministries of Public Security, State Security, and Justice. The heads of all those institutions serve as commission members.
- The International Department (also known as the International Liaison Department) handles party-to-party relations. It takes the lead on diplomacy with Cuba, Laos, North Korea, and Vietnam.
- The Social Work Department, created in 2023, seeks to strengthen Party control over community governance, social work, volunteer work, industry federations,

- chambers of commerce, and the handling of complaints from the public.

The Central Committee bureaucracy also includes the offices of high-profile commissions, some of which Xi upgraded from “leading small groups” that had previously operated in the shadows. They include a National Security Commission and a Central Foreign Affairs Commission.

The Party’s no. 7 official, Li Xi, heads the Party’s Central Commission for Discipline Inspection (CCDI). Since 2012, the CCDI has investigated millions of CPC members for alleged violations of “discipline,” including corruption. Through 2022, targets included 61 full and alternate Central Committee members and 18 of the CCDI’s own members.

The State (Government)

The State Council (Figure 2) is the government’s top institution, led by the premier. Below him are four vice premiers, all members of the CPC Politburo. Below them are state councilors; they do not sit on the Politburo, but are members of other senior Party bodies and the State Council’s own Party body. State councilor positions for foreign affairs and military affairs have been vacant since October 2023, when Xi Jinping abruptly removed their incumbents. The agencies that comprise the State Council are 21 government ministries, three ministerial-level commissions, the central bank, and the National Audit Office. Most of these agency leaders, but not all, are full members of the CPC Central Committee.

Susan V. Lawrence, Specialist in Asian Affairs

IF12505

Figure 2. China’s State Council Leadership

Source: CRS graphic by Mari Y. Lee based on data from <http://www.gov.cn>. Current as of June 28, 2024.

Disclaimer

This document was prepared by the Congressional Research Service (CRS). CRS serves as nonpartisan shared staff to congressional committees and Members of Congress. It operates solely at the behest of and under the direction of Congress. Information in a CRS Report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to Members of Congress in connection with CRS’s institutional role. CRS Reports, as a work of the United States Government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS Report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS Report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain the permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.