JOURNALISM

EVERETT WALLACE SMITH, Professor

BUFORD O. BROWN, Associate Professor

JOHN HAROLD CASEY, Acting Instructor (Summer Quarter)

FRANK J. TAYLOR, Lecturer

The Journalism curriculum is based on the conviction that the proper college training for journalism provides (1) a broad foundation of general information, (2) more specific knowledge of economics, political science, history, and other subjects with which the journalist largely deals, and (3) some technical ability in journalism and an intelligent comprehension of the obligations and responsibilities of the profession.

The requirements of the Lower Division insure that the student will come into contact with the chief branches of human knowledge and lay a basis for more advanced studies along the lines of his particular needs and interests. The requirements of the School of Social Sciences insure his specializing somewhat in the work of the departments of Economics, History, Philosophy, and Political Science, and in related subjects, at the same time leaving him opportunity for meeting the Journalism requirements and for electives.

Students in the Division of Journalism will meet all the requirements of the School of Social Sciences, and will take a minimum of 30 units in Journalism, including News Writing (10 units), Copy Reading (5 units), American Journalism (3 units), and Ethics of Journalism (2 units). The work in Journalism will count toward the 80 units required by the School of Social Sciences, but will not replace any of the 36 units specifically required.

Intending journalists are encouraged to engage in college journalism and thus obtain practical experience during their course. Students in the Division of Journalism who do such work systematically and under the supervision of the Division will be given credit for it toward graduation. Lower Division students who plan to enter the Division of Journalism may receive 1 unit of credit per quarter for regular work on The Stanford Daily under the supervision of the Division of Journalism.

In some of the Journalism courses the written work must be done on the typewriter. On this account and because ability to use the typewriter is necessary for practically all newspaper work, prospective Journalism students are advised to gain this ability as early as possible.

COURSES IN JOURNALISM

100. News Writing I.—Study of the structure of the news story and of news values, with practice in writing. Sources of news and methods of news gathering. Newspaper organization and news-gathering organizations. All writing in the course must be done on a typewriter.

PHILOSOPHY

HENRY WALDGRAVE STUART, HAROLD CHAPMAN BROWN, Professors
GEORGE REBEC (University of Oregon), Acting Professor (Summer Quarter)

HOWARD DYKEMA ROELOFS, Assistant Professor

The requirements for graduation in this department constitute an adequate preparation for advanced studies in Philosophy and leave opportunity for the other elements of a general or liberal education. Major students are required to present for the degree of Bachelor of Arts 35 units in Philosophy (in which Courses 1, 2, 100, 101, 102, and 200 must be included) and also the general courses in Psychology and in Medieval and Modern European History or English History (which should be taken during the first two years in the University). The second-year courses in French or German are recommended as a part of the Lower Division work of intending major students. Each major student will be expected to devote sufficient time to a minor subject to gain a substantial knowledge of some one of its principal divisions or aspects.

The department will, as a rule, enroll students for one year only of graduate work, leading to the degree of Master of Arts or to a minor for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The philosophical section of the general library contains at present (1) upward of twenty complete sets of the leading philosophical journals—for most of which current subscriptions are carried,
