JOURNALISM

CLIFFORD FRANCIS WEIGLE, Associate Professor
THOMAS MINTON NEWELL, Instructor

The Journalism curriculum is based on the assumption that education for journalism must provide (1) general social intelligence, (2) specific knowledge of certain social, fiscal, industrial, and political principles and data, (3) an intelligent comprehension of the role of the newspaper as a social institution, and (4) some technical ability in journalism. The requirements for the degree of Master of Arts in Social Sciences—Journalism are calculated to insure a realization of these objectives.

Degree of Master of Arts.—The division will recommend to the Committee on Graduate Study for the degree of Master of Arts students who have completed five of the fields listed in Groups I–IV (under requirements for degree of Bachelor of Arts) and forty-five units of journalism, including an acceptable thesis, with a high average on their entire program of study during their final year. In order to complete this program successfully, the student must ordinarily plan his program at the beginning of his seventh quarter. It is recommended that the student have at least three months of practical experience before beginning the third year of his program.

Degree of Bachelor of Arts.—For those students who at present are unable to plan a three-year program, the division will continue to offer the degree of Bachelor of Arts. To fulfill the requirements for this degree with a major in Social Sciences—Journalism, the student will take approximately thirty units in journalism of which the following courses are required: Journalism 50, 103, 107, 120, 140, and two of the following courses: Journalism 110, 115, 116, and 125.

In addition, he will take General Psychology (Psychology 51); Europe in the Nineteenth Century (History 103) or American History since 1890 (History 122); seven units in general or English literature; and complete one field in two of the following groups (together with the appropriate prerequisites for each field):

III. Comparative Government, Public Administration, International Law and Relations, Public Law, and Political Parties and Politics.
IV. Social and Political Philosophy.

The division will approve substitute programs in the departments of History, Philosophy, and Psychology which evidence a consistent objective.

Two courses normally constitute a field, although a seminar is sometimes required also. The student, moreover, must arrange his program so as to fulfill the requirements of the School of Social Sciences for twenty units in each of two departments other than Journalism (see pages 314–315). A part of these requirements may be met while the student is in the Lower Division.

The student must make an average grade of C in courses taken in the School of Social Sciences and a significantly higher grade in the courses in journalism.

Pre-Journalism Curriculum.—It is recommended that students in the Lower Division preparing to major in journalism take the courses in English and general literature mentioned above and the social science courses that are prerequisite to the advanced courses constituting the required fields in the School of Social Sciences.

Courses in the Division of Journalism, except Journalism 50, are normally open only to students in the Upper Division. During the war emergency sophomores will be permitted to take Journalism 103, 107, and 140 in order to accelerate their graduation. Students transferring from other institutions who desire credit for some of the elementary courses in journalism may be required to take an examination in those subjects as a prerequisite to their enrollment as majors in journalism. Majors are required to take the Strong Vocational Interest Test (fee $1) before the end of the first quarter of their junior year.

Curriculum in Advertising.—The division will accept as majors properly qualified students who wish to prepare for a career in advertising. In planning sequences of study to suit individual needs, students will take Journalism 50, 103, 106, 107, 115, and 116, and will be permitted to substitute for other journalism requirements up to ten units of appropriate courses in statistics, labor problems, economic history, social psychology, graphic art, or speech.

Ph.D. Minor.—Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy who are preparing to teach journalism are, in special cases, permitted to elect journalism as a minor field. The candidate, however, will consult with his major professor as to dissertation and course of study.

PHILOSOPHY

Henry Waldgrave Stuart, Professor Emeritus

Harold Chapman Brown, Professor
Henry Lanz, Professor of Slavic Languages, and Philosophy
John Robert Reid, Associate Professor
John Leland Mothershead, Jr., Assistant Professor

[Co-operating with the department: David Elton Trueblood, Professor of Philosophy of Religion.]

Courses offered in this department are planned (1) to give students generally a more critical approach to their work and some understanding of the philo-osophical attitudes underlying special fields of learning, and (2) to enable those especially interested in philosophy to obtain, as undergraduates, a knowledge of philosophic thought and competence in philosophic methods of approach to problems and, as graduates, the more thorough knowledge required for research and teaching.

Candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy are required to take not less than 35 units within the department, including Courses 1, 5, 6, 100, 101, and 102 (unless credited with their equivalents taken elsewhere).

No student should enroll in courses of the second group before completing Course 1 or 5 (or the equivalent elsewhere) except by special permission of the instructor.

No student should enroll in courses of group three before completing two courses of the second group, except by special permission of the instructor.

Graduate Study.—The department will, as a rule, enroll students for one year only of graduate work, leading to the degree of Master of Arts or to a minor for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, but a limited number of well-qualified candidates for the Ph.D. degree will be accepted. The department will require a general written examination on the history of philosophy of all candidates for the Master’s degree; and additional written examinations in the fields of logic, metaphysics, ethics, and history of philosophy will be required of candidates for the Ph.D. degree and are to be taken at least one year before the granting of the degree.

Library.—The philosophical section of the general library contains at present (1) complete sets of upwards of twenty of the leading philosophical journals—for most of which current subscriptions are carried, (2) the best
