Head's up that it's a strange thing Dennis Zaki filmed two hours of Willow's bball games. For whatever it's worth - it gave me the creeps. (See below):

I could not do a "no comment" in front of many parents watching my reaction... trust me if I could have escaped I would have. The creepy thing is how they knew about willow's games.

Dennis Zaki is here at Willow's basketball game - filming - now wants an interview on my comments re: media. (I think this is Dennis zaki anyway.)

Before I confront him re: why he's here (I put him off w intwerview request until after willow's game ends) - does anyone know if he's got kids who play middle school basketball? It will be sort of creepy if he somehow knew I'd be here for little girls basketball and followed me in to get an interview while I'm spending precious family time w my kids.

Frank said he contracts w CNN and Muckraker. Zaki totally lied to me, I believe. He said he was there with others to film one of the guy's kids - I followed them out after they filmed me, they had no kid w them. They're up to something and accused me of giving People magazine more interviews than local - among other subtle accusations in their line of questioning.

Very very creepy and suspicious. I gave him (and Zaki has people with him) a quick interview (his "reporter" sounded annoyed re: the comments I had made about anonymous bloggers), but they couldn't answer my question w a straight face re how they happened to be here in Wasilla at a kids bball game at the same time I'm here. They haven't filmed any other teams except Willows this entire time - and many other teams are playing right now in this tournament. So... Frank can look on YouTube soon to see what Zaki is up to with this video?

I seem to remember that he's got a family, but I don't know about kids' ages. He was known last year to show up at events and videotape Don Young, for example. Then he posts it on his website.
