

Dear whom it matters:

I am writing to provide information to a questionnaire I was sent by you guys. I am willing to give you more than the basic answers to the questions so that real crime prevention can happen.

D How did I typically break into a home?

I would start "scouting" at around 2-3 pm and would drive through upper class neighborhoods, looking for many things, like porch light on w/all window blind closed, 97% of car parts have windows, so seeing if a car is there is a must. ~~I~~ I would knock on the door, ring door bell, do a walk around at this time checking for people in the home & unlocked windows or a way in without breaking anything like a doggy door or open door/window.

(If someone answered the door when knocking, I would ask them, something like, will you tell Robert I here... This makes it seem like your there to get someone, Robert who?... Smith! He dont live here! are you sure? Thank you Bye.)
(Being midday its not that off beat to people.)

If noone is home I would kick in the door rather than break glass, loud Bangs are better than loud glass breaking plus you run the risk of getting cut.

I had rules, #1 and most important Never get out of the car with anything in your pockets, NO eigeretts, lighters, change, cell phones. #2 Dont ever break stuff just because. NO Thrashing people stuff. #3 always wear gloves! ~~mask~~ Mask if possible. #4 Never steal from Friends Family or people you know.

once inside I head straight to master bedroom, very first thing ~~to~~ I grab ^{the} pillow case off bed and take the jewelry Box, Flip all cloths out of dresser, looking for cash. (Mind frame is: I'm not going to be the one picking everything, up so ~~the~~ the mess. Flip the bed over and rifle through nightstands, then closet. Most people keep valuables in main bedroom so that's where the main search happens.

yes dogs are a deal breaker for me, Big breeds, home protectors are the best to keep people out, IF I seen a Bewear of dog sign. I would move on, most likely. also Armed protection Responce sign Spook me.

my main thing I hunted for once in a home is a safe or locked Box. That to me is my goal Item to locate. I would leave everything else to get this, Nothing means more to me then the safe, But I try for all valuables.

If the house is far out in the country w/a alarm, I would try to break in fast and do a run through, just grabbing stuff like the jewelry Box and laptops, no more then 2mins inside.

Security Camera are only good if you dont wear a mask plus they give information to me that theres stuff worth Money that you feel a camera is needed to watch over.

Surveillance not so much, mainly " and I do my evaluation within my first say few minutes of seeing and walking up to the house.

also people who live out in the middle of nowhere and they put up Big gates or Fences tells me they are hiding valuables.

During Fall time, when there are ~~large~~ leaves on driveways gives signs when people have been going up and down their driveways.

Holidays are great time to find people not at home, Especially 4th of July, Because almost all people go to the beach or firework shows.

I hope that this information help in some way.
