Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Lynne ,

Although I don't particularly like the terms: "immigrants in an unauthorized status" and "undocumented immigrants," I agree with the point of the letter and would join.

I actually believe it would make the point more forcefully to say something like "immigrants who are or may be in the United States illegally" as it is this status that causes many of the problems we are suggesting need to be fixed.

Thanks to all who are taking the lead on this important issue.

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!
Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Terrific!

Thanks, Melissa, and please thank General Pruitt.

I hope that you're able to get a call arranged.

In the meantime I'm making sure some key players on this issue see Scott's letter.

Subject: BLM HF Rule Reproposal - Possible OMB/OIRA Letter and Meeting/Call

Sarah –

To follow up on my conversations with Attorney General Pruitt and you, I believe that a meeting – or perhaps more efficient, a conference call – with OIRA (the OMB Office of Information and Regulatory Analysis) on the BLM rule should be requested right away. The attached draft letter (or something like it that Scott if comfortable talking from and sending to the acting director to whom the letter is addressed) could be the basis for the meeting or call.

If we should visit among all of us, I'm available for a call almost anytime tomorrow, or late on Friday afternoon. Sheila can set something up if that would help.

Last Thursday, February 28, 2013, was the committee deadline for House Bills and Joint Resolutions.

In the Senate, the deadlines for First committee for SBs (double referrals) [February 18], Single committee for SBs [February 25], and Second committee for SBs (double referrals) [February 28] have also passed.:

The next big deadline is Thursday, March 14, which is the Deadline for Third Reading of Bills and Joint Resolutions in House of Origin. There are still almost 700 total measures alive and making their way through the process.

I have assembled the Bills and Joint Resolutions on the Calendar for both houses and am attaching them to this message. This list will include all measures, not just the ones on. In the interest of time, I thought it would be easier for each subcommittee to look at these lists for the particular bills or joint resolutions they are interested in than for me to try to do that and still leave time for the subcommittees to continue their reviews. The March 14 deadline does put some pressure on us to finish looking and making suggestions or comments.

Thus far, I have received only one suggestion, so would appreciate reports from each subcommittee. If you find the measures are ok and do not need our help, would you let me know. I would like to prepare a report for John so he knows where we are.

Also, we have some subcommittee volunteers who are not yet listed on the official

LMC e-mail address, so as you communicate with the other members of your subcommittee please pass this information on to anyone who did not receive it.

Thanks

Let me know how else I can help you or make your process easier.

Subject: BLM HF Rule Reproposal - Possible OMB/OIRA Letter and Meeting/Call

Sarah –

To follow up on my conversations with Attorney General Pruitt and you, I believe that a meeting – or perhaps more efficient, a conference call – with OIRA (the OMB Office of Information and Regulatory Analysis) on the BLM rule should be requested right away. The attached draft letter (or something like it that Scott if comfortable talking from and sending to the acting director to whom the letter is addressed) could be the basis for the meeting or call.

If we should visit among all of us, I'm available for a call almost anytime tomorrow, or late on Friday afternoon. Sheila can set something up if that would help.

Wonderful!

Any intel as to OIRA review thinking or even timing would be most helpful, even from conversations trying to arrange a call.

Clayton –

The re-proposed rule is actually in the review stage at OIRA (OMB's Office of Information and regulatory Analysis) prior to a version being approved for a second round of public comment.

Our goal is to have input to OIRA with a goal of its directing BLM to completely do away with the present thrust.

It is possible that OIRA will conclude its review very soon, hence our asks that calls be made to the head of OMB and/or OIRA pretty quickly. Hope this helps.

I've attached the leaked version of the re-proposal that we're working from.

Mr. Whitsitt,

Sorry to bother you but I have been unable to locate a Federal Register notice for the re-proposed BLM rule on Hydraulic fracturing on public lands. I know AG Pruitt sent a letter to OMB on the rule on March 12, 2013 but I have been unable to determine when the comment period deadline is for the re-proposed rule.

Do you know whether the re-proposed rule has been published in the Federal Register and if so, when the public comment period ends?

I'm not sure. Let's think about some input to EPA and OMB that might warn them that AGs from producing states will be ready to engage – and that EPA should immediately acknowledge that its methane emission estimates, that the states use as part of the suit justification, are erroneous.

Let us see what that might look like and then we'll be back in touch.

Hi, Patrick.

I just let General Pruitt know that BLM is going to propose a different version of its federal lands hydraulic fracturing rule thanks to input received – thanks for the help on this! We'll see the new proposal sometime next week I believe and we'll be back in touch on potential next steps.

Also, I've attached a copy of the notice we discussed.

Patrick –

Attached is a potential first-cut draft of a letter a (bipartisan if possible?) group of AGs might send to the acting EPA administrator and some others in the Administration in response to the NE states' notice of intent to sue for more E&P emission regulation.

It would be a shot across the bow, warning EPA not to not go down a negotiated-rulemaking or wink-at-a sue-and-settle tee-up process. If sent, I'd suggest that it be made public, at least to the Hill and to policy community publications.

It seems to me this would also be a logical outgrowth of the fossil energy AGs meeting and could be powerful with a number of signers. It is also the kind of thing that in the future could be run through the clearinghouse we discussed.

Please let me know what you and General Pruitt think, or if we can help further.

Thanks again for the heads up on the AG event. Although our internal schedules conflict with this (such as our Board of Directors meeting), one of our lead attorneys, Wendy Brooks, may be able to participate. She registered online. Please feel free to forward her contact information to AG Pruitt's office.

More senior of those. There will be at least a couple of CEOs and GCs. I'll be on a panel and will help speak to the media at the end.

The latest agenda is attached.

I think AG Pruitt's staff would like to reach out to someone...

Appreciate the update.

Since I believe that most of the states mentioned (and perhaps all) have petroleum councils and we see reports of their activities through API, can you track our efforts to be sure we're in the appropriate role in encouraging and supporting them on traditional industry issues?

Also, can we get a bit more info on gas demand growth efforts in these states? For example, are we inoculating targeted audiences (with supply and other arguments) against knee-jerk reactions against LNG export approvals? This is going to be more important now that we've seen organized opposition forming by some industrials, APGA and others who will be soliciting support for their position in these states.

Thanks.

Michelle

Tier 2 States Weekly Overview – January 4, 2013

New Jersey

KEY ACTIVITIES: As part of Governor Chris Christie's veto of last year's drilling ban, the Department of Environmental Protection will issue a report evaluating the potential environmental impacts of HF in New Jersey as well as reviewing the findings of outstanding and ongoing federal HF studies.

The DEP report will be released later this month. It is the understanding of ANGA operative Ferguson Strategies that the draft report merely restates that, except for a small portion of Utica shale in the northwest corner of the state, there are no known recoverable shale plays in New Jersey and no drilling planned in the foreseeable future. The draft report also summarizes recent federal HF studies, including environmental impacts.

ISSUES AND STRATEGIES: Hurricane Sandy once again dominates news from Trenton, as Governor Christie made national news this week with withering criticism of congressional Republicans – and in particular House Speaker Boehner – for failing to pass disaster relief funding. Meanwhile, the governor is preparing for his annual State of the State Address, which will be delivered to the Legislature on Jan. 8. The speech is expected to focus on hurricane recovery efforts as well as focusing on the state’s budget and tax issues. No gas-related policies are currently expected to be included in the governor’s address.

It is unclear how early in the new legislative year Democrats will renew their push for anti-HF legislation. The one-year drilling moratorium – imposed by the governor’s 2011 veto of legislation that would have banned drilling – will expire in two weeks.

After a break for the holidays, lawmakers return to Trenton this week with hearings on the state’s budget. No floor votes in either the Assembly or Senate are currently scheduled until later this month.

Maryland

KEY ACTIVITIES: ANGA operatives the Artemis Group are working with ANGA staff on responding to an invitation to participate in a Jan. 22 state Senate informational briefing on the Marcellus Shale.

Questions will be primarily asked around the drilling process, water use and safety and surface protection. More information will be available on the briefing when the staff and Senators return to Annapolis next week. The briefing is part of the legislature’s effort to gather input and information for a comprehensive bill to regulate gas development in the state. Several individual bills to regulate the industry – many containing anti-HF provisions – were defeated in last year’s session.

ISSUES AND STRATEGIES: The Maryland Association of Counties (MACO) held its annual Winter Conference in Cambridge, MD, this week. ANGA’s Maryland operatives were able to have good discussions with western Maryland County leaders, leaders in the Maryland legislature and several of the leading candidates for governor.

The powerful President of the state Senate, Democratic Sen. Mike Miller from Prince George’s County, is in favor of drilling in Western Maryland with appropriate regulations. This is seen as positive news for gas industry interests.

North Carolina

KEY ACTIVITIES: ANGA is reviewing a list of top priorities for legislation requested by the legislative working group. ANGA is also reviewing a request by the Senior Policy Advisor to the President Pro Tempore regarding tax provisions for natural gas exploration. ANGA operative Amy Fullbright of K&L Gates is working to set up meetings for Michelle Bloodworth and others regarding increased demand for natural gas in NC.

Governor-Elect Pat McCrory will legally become Governor Saturday at noon, at a small swearing in in the state Senate's chambers. The Governor-Elect wanted to ensure that he was sworn in before the state legislature goes back in session on Wednesday, Jan. 9. A larger, more public inauguration ceremony and inaugural address, followed by a parade, will take place a week later, on Saturday, Jan. 12. McCrory will be North Carolina's first Republican governor since January 1993.

ANGA's operative will continue to work with H&K on earned media in NC for the New Year.

ANGA is reviewing a list of top priorities for legislation requested by the legislative working group.

ISSUES AND STRATEGIES: Governor-Elect McCrory spoke to the NC Bankers Association/NC Chamber Economic Forecast Forum on Wednesday, Jan. 2. Always the premier event to kick off the New Year in NC, McCrory highlighted his goals for his new administration including natural gas exploration.

McCrory said he wants North Carolina to join with Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia to negotiate with the federal government on offshore natural gas and oil drilling. He also wants to put inland gas exploration on the fastest track possible to generate revenue and jobs for the state, as well as energy for the U.S.

"The downside right now is we've started very, very late, and now the gas price has gone very low," he said. "It's going to be a tough, competitive market to begin that process."

Interesting re Ron. But he is the midstream/downstream company head. Larry and I were thinking of Chuck Stanley, CEO of the upstream spinoff that I keep forgetting is called QEP Resources. Having both would give you the complete spectrum. As a just-in-case, I could check Chuck's availability.

The third name was Marty Durbin. He is EVP of the American Petroleum Institute and a solid policy guy who knows all aspects of what we're up against and would do a nice speaking job. We could check on him as well.

Your call.

Hi Patrick!

I hope you are doing well!

I sent the information below to Melissa and Sarah Lenti and then Bill requested that I send it to you as well.

Please see the following contact information for sending a letter to Jeffrey D. Zients, Acting Director of the Office of Management and Budget. Please copy Mr. Boris Bershteyn on this letter. You cannot hand-deliver a letter to Mr. Zients' office and sending it by mail is a lengthy process. I called their office and was directed to also send the letter by email to Mr. Zients' Confidential Assistant, Roxana Moussavian, at rmoussavian@omb.eop.gov.

If you would like to speak with Mr. Zients, please call 202-395-3080 and ask for Roxana.

Mr. Jeffrey D. Zients, Acting Director
Office of Management and Budget
725 17th Street, NW
Washington, DC 20503

Hi Melissa and Sarah,

Per Bill Whitsitt's request, please see the following contact information for sending a letter to Jeffrey D. Zients, Acting Director of the Office of Management and Budget. Please copy Mr. Boris Bershteyn on this letter. You cannot hand-deliver a letter to Mr. Zients' office and sending it by mail is a lengthy process. I called their office and was directed to also send the letter by email to Mr. Zients' Confidential Assistant, Roxana Moussavian, at rmoussavian@omb.eop.gov.

If you would like to speak with Mr. Zients, please call 202-395-3080 and ask for Roxana.

Mr. Jeffrey D. Zients, Acting Director
Office of Management and Budget
725 17th Street, NW
Washington, DC 20503

cc: Mr. Boris Bershteyn
Acting Administrator
Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs
Office of Management and Budget

If you have any questions or concerns please don't hesitate to contact me.

Kind regards,

Sheila Harder
Executive Assistant to William F. Whitsitt, Ph.D.

WARNING: This docket is a temporary 1 on the hurt scale. (And even that is subjective. ☺)

Good Morning!
Smile, let's see that lovely face! ☺

No need to fight – there is a docket for everyone.

Yes, that's right! Your personal copy of the OCC PUD Docket for Thursday is attached.

Congratulations! You have made it to the last Thursday of March and all of its madness. That means we will have to stop the madness until next year. I know I can count on you. You are so darn pleasant!

Enjoy the rest of your week. I'm proud of you, you have already made it through the roughest part. ☺

Good Morning,

It's that time of the week again. Time for you to sit calmly in your chair and sneak in a little happy dance, then resume that ever-so-professional demeanor of yours. ☺

Tah Dah! It's the OCC PUD Docket for Thursday, March 14th, 2013!

(← He just saw his docket!)

And that isn't the best part! There's more... Next week is DESK WEEK!

( Has that childhood excitement kicked in yet? ☺)

Do something good for yourself today and enjoy the rest of your week!

Good Morning!

Yet another week has arrived and you know what that means! Another Docket! ☺

I know it's Monday, so I thought this docket would cheer you up.

Ok, that probably didn't help.

Let's focus on the bright side of it 😊. It's a new day!

(Hopefully it doesn't come to this, but if you must, grab a safety pin, print out the button below and wear it all day.)

Happy Monday!
It's the start of your great week.

Now I know what your thinking, "What good is that?!"
Well...uh.... If you get cold enough you could...

Just be careful. I have a feeling the picture they took after this one looked a lot different. Let's just say that "Jim" burning the paper here is probably now a bald man with new skin on his ear and hand. ☺

On second thought, let's not do that. I appreciate your lovely hair and nice skin. And your office doesn't need to waste time talking about the tragedy and sending you "Hope your ear heals soon" and "it was only hair" cards.

Back to work people. Put the lighters away and put on a jacket instead. ☺

Happy Tuesday!

Well hello Good-Looking* -
(please see asterisk note below ☺)

I know you get enough “presents” in your e-mail, but this one is exceptional.
No, there are no promises of millions or free products- just a FREE copy of your very own OCC PUD Docket for tomorrow!

And now for the rest of your week...I present this other present. ☺

After you leave your work behind for today, make sure you grab your inner child and go play in the rain. ☺

Stay dry...for now. ☺
Enjoy the rest of your week!

And now for the * disclaimer:

Good Looking is in no way being utilized in the form of sexual harassment, which I take seriously. You may or may not be good looking today. As you are a recipient of this message via e-mail, the sender has not actually seen how you look today and thus stated you were good looking based on your love of the PUD Docket. Biased? Yes. Sexual harassment? No. If you would like further information on "Good Looking", you may reference a mirror or call for details. If you feel this message was harassing you because you are not good looking, I apologize for the inconvenience. If you feel you are not good looking TODAY, it is because of the rain. Once it stops raining, your good looking self will return. All rights reserved. Void where prohibited. Delete where prohibited. Remove e-mail from your mind where prohibited. Okay good looking? Oops. Sorry. Please start at beginning of disclaimer again. ☺

Date: 01/28/2013 08:51 AM

Good Morning!

Yet another week has arrived and you know what that means! Another Docket! ☺

I know it's Monday, so I thought this docket would cheer you up.

Ok, that probably didn't help.

Let's focus on the bright side of it ☺. It's a new day!

(Hopefully it doesn't come to this, but if you must, grab a safety pin, print out the button below and wear it all day.)

Happy Monday!
It's the start of your great week.

Ashley,

Would you be able to send me General Pruitt's electronic signature for inclusion on the ALEC letter?

Melissa approved it last week and we just got final sign off from Gov. Fallin. So we are ready to send it out.

Many thanks,
Amy

Sorry about the confusion. I would love to talk to Melissa as soon as possible to get everything squared away. I was not aware that she had wanted changes. Depending on what they are, we may be able to accommodate.

I appreciate all your help.

To expand or not to expand. That is all too often the question when it comes to government action. All too often bureaucrats joyfully answer, "Expand!" -- resulting in more and more of our money going to a failing status quo.

A recent choice by our state has been whether to expand Oklahoma's Medicaid program. OCPA was pleased with the decision not to expand the program, saving Oklahoma taxpayers at least $500 million between now and 2020. As we have written time and time and time again, the answer to Oklahoma's Medicaid problem is not a lack of spending, it's a lack of reform.

In a recent interview, Dr. Terry L. Cline, who serves as the Oklahoma Secretary of Health and Human Services and as the Commissioner of the Oklahoma State Department of Health, made the case for reform of Oklahoma's broken Medicaid and health care system.

Medicaid Dollars

Some in Oklahoma will continue to concoct a false definition of state spending. Some in Oklahoma will continue to produce flawed analysis by ignoring the reality that state spending is growing and that, in particular, Medicaid spending is comprising a larger and larger share of state spending, crowding out funding for other services. Missouri lawmakers understand this problem and the need for reliable analysis: the Show Me State's credit rating received a negative outlook for its ballooning Medicaid program and its disproportionate use of federal funds, thought by some to be "free money." Oklahoma is not immune, according to the most recent state CAFR; total state spending on Medicaid now comprises 28.79 percent of total state spending compared to 23.45 percent in FY-2005. State spending on the Medicaid program now exceeds state spending on both common education and higher education.

Those of us at OCPA recognize the importance of education- -- I challenge you to name another nonprofit public-policy organization that has raised $127,000 and awarded it to students to attend college -- but we're also big believers in transparency.

In a recent front-page story ('Push to Gauge Bang for Buck from College Gains Steam') in The Wall Street Journal, Ruth Simon and Michael Corkery reported that "U.S. and state officials are intensifying efforts to hold colleges accountable for what happens after graduation, a sign of frustration with sky-high tuition costs and student-loan debt."

Since my time as a research analyst at the Oklahoma House of Representatives and then as the director of government affairs for the Oklahoma Insurance Department, I have studied the effects of Oklahoma's broken workers' compensation system. Our current system is designed to make employers and employees adversaries, while impairing the rehabilitation of injured workers, burdening families, and placing a heavy drag on Oklahoma's economy and productivity.

Our work comp system must be replaced -- and Senate President Pro Tem Brian Bingman wants to do just that.

WorkersComp

Since my time as a research analyst at the Oklahoma House of Representatives and then as the director of government affairs for the Oklahoma Insurance Department, I have studied the effects of Oklahoma's broken workers' compensation system. Our current system is designed to make employers and employees adversaries, while impairing the rehabilitation of injured workers, burdening families, and placing a heavy drag on Oklahoma's economy and productivity.

Our work comp system must be replaced -- and Senate President Pro Tem Brian Bingman wants to do just that.

In his State of the Union address last week, President Obama lauded Oklahoma's commitment to state-funded preschool programs. But many scholars -- Harvard Business School professor Clayton M. Christensen, Brookings Institution senior fellow Grover Whitehurst, Heritage Foundation research fellow Lindsey Burke, and others -- are unconvinced by the evidence that universal pre-K is a good public investment. (Some of them have even had the audacity to point out that Oklahoma's 4th grade reading scores have declined since we implemented universal government preschool.)

The 19th century French observer Alexis de Tocqueville famously warned of a form of despotism that could one day come to America. He was right, and indeed there are examples of it here in 21st century Oklahoma.

In a column last week in The Journal Record, law professor Andrew Spiropoulos, who is teaching a course this semester on Tocqueville's Democracy in America, says America has in fact changed since Tocqueville's time. "Governments, at all levels, have wide-ranging powers to force people and institutions to take actions to which they object," he writes, "but wise leaders know that the most intrusive of these powers should only be exercised when necessary and even then with care to preserve the different ways of life of the communities that make up their state or nation."

Regrettably, wise leaders are not presently at the helm.

Family

The president and congressional Republicans have consistently disagreed about whether to allow taxes to go up on those the president deems "rich," but, to judge by rhetoric alone, they have apparently always agreed that the so-called "Bush tax cuts for the middle class" must not be allowed to expire.

To be sure, the last-minute "fiscal cliff" package Congress passed Jan. 1 -- and that the president signed by autopen in Hawaii -- didn't exactly spare the middle class. Nevertheless, it's instructive that politicians on both sides of the aisle at least pay lip service to the historic importance of the aspirations and abilities of middle-income earners to America.

What policies legislators adopt affect that all-important potential for economic mobility. At OCPA, we know income equality -- while appealing to some on its face -- is actually worth precious little if all incomes are depressed to achieve that "equality." Instead of mitigating the motivation of the able-bodied to earn success with tax-and-spend policies, we'd prefer to allow that motivation to manifest itself -- and to subsequently result in a rising standard of living for those who exercise it. How to do that? Click to read a handful of ideas on our blog.

The president and congressional Republicans have consistently disagreed about whether to allow taxes to go up on those the president deems "rich," but, to judge by rhetoric alone, they have apparently always agreed that the so-called "Bush tax cuts for the middle class" must not be allowed to expire.

To be sure, the last-minute "fiscal cliff" package Congress passed Jan. 1 -- and that the president signed by autopen in Hawaii -- didn't exactly spare the middle class. Nevertheless, it's instructive that politicians on both sides of the aisle at least pay lip service to the historic importance of the aspirations and abilities of middle-income earners to America.

What policies legislators adopt affect that all-important potential for economic mobility. At OCPA, we know income equality -- while appealing to some on its face -- is actually worth precious little if all incomes are depressed to achieve that "equality." Instead of mitigating the motivation of the able-bodied to earn success with tax-and-spend policies, we'd prefer to allow that motivation to manifest itself -- and to subsequently result in a rising standard of living for those who exercise it. How to do that? Click to read a handful of ideas on our blog.

What's the end result of socialism and overreaching government? The tiny African nation of Zimbabwe recently found out.

The nation's finance chief reported that after government workers were paid, there was $217 left in the treasury. Not $217 million, or even $217,000. We're talking $217.

Dear Friends,

Our personal beliefs and goals -- combined with knowledge, wisdom, and experience -- govern our daily choices, interactions, and long-range planning. We desire that our legacy be saturated with love and service to others. Therefore, it is vital that our life's policies be rooted and grounded with determined planning on a firm foundation.

Dear Friends,

Our personal beliefs and goals -- combined with knowledge, wisdom, and experience -- govern our daily choices, interactions, and long-range planning. We desire that our legacy be saturated with love and service to others. Therefore, it is vital that our life's policies be rooted and grounded with determined planning on a firm foundation.

SHARE:

Our friends at the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs are offering women the opportunity to participate in a fresh discussion on policy -- policy that affects us individually and corporately.

This unique opportunity, featuring Star Parker and Kate Obenshain, will demonstrate how "real life" policy messaging to women and families impacts us all on a daily basis and affects our futures.

Women's Policy and Leadership Conference

March 1, 2013
8 a.m. - 1 p.m.

Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club
7000 NW Grand Blvd.
Nichols Hills, OK 73116

You can download the invitation here or RSVP online. I hope you will participate and bring a friend with you to this important discussion! Your involvement will make a difference in our own lives and state.

A recent editorial column in the Tulsa World made the case for common-sense pension reform by consolidating the various boards of the state retirement systems. This reform is another example of necessary retirement reform, which will ensure that government keeps its promises to current employees and can realistically provide retirement benefits to future employees.

Currently, there are five separate boards that govern the six active defined-benefit retirement plans operated by the state. (Full disclosure: I serve on the board of trustees for the Oklahoma Teachers' Retirement System. The views discussed here are my own.) Oklahoma's current approach to pension governance differs from how many other states govern their pensions.

When the Lindsey Nicole Henry Scholarships for Students with Disabilities program was enacted in 2010, state Rep. It's already happening.

Last week I received an email from Tara Hood, the mother of three-year-old Chloe. She wrote: "At the time we filmed the documentary last year, Chloe had already made a lot of progress, but to see her now is even more amazing!"

And it's not just Chloe.

The cost of health insurance in Oklahoma is going up.

As Merrill Matthews and Mark E. Litow recently wrote in The Wall Street Journal ("Obamacare's Health-Insurance Sticker Shock"), "thanks to mandates that take effect in 2014, premiums in individual markets will shoot up. Some may double." Matthews, you may recall, is a co-author of the OCPA report "Has SoonerCare Achieved Its Objectives?" Litow is a past chairman of the Social Insurance & Public Finance Section of the Society of Actuaries.

Though we were all promised in 2009 that "if you like your plan you can keep it" and that our insurance costs would see little change, Matthews and Litow predict Oklahoma will see prices increase between 65 percent and 100 percent. Indeed, based on their estimated ranking of the states by average cost of covered benefits, Oklahomans could see the biggest increases in the nation.

Poor Phil Mickelson. The famous golfer was subjected to a politically correct firestorm from the big-government left when he dared to question his home state of California's new 13.3 percent top personal income tax rate. With President Obama's newly enacted top federal rate of 39.6 percent, and various other sales, property and miscellaneous taxes, Mickelson said he found himself facing an effective combined tax rate in the neighborhood of 63 percent. Perhaps, he suggested, it was time to move.

That certainly got Texas Gov. Rick Perry's attention. "Texas is the home to liberty and low taxes," Gov. Perry told Mickelson. "We'd love to have you as well."

Texas already has Torii Hunter, one of baseball's best players, who abandoned high-tax California some years ago. Florida, another no-income-tax state, has Tiger Woods for the same reason. Lots of less-high-profile high earners -- business owners, entrepreneurs, professionals, etc. -- are no doubt looking at California's amazingly high tax rates and feeling like the plump hog at a bacon factory.

Poor Phil Mickelson. The famous golfer was subjected to a politically correct firestorm from the big-government left when he dared to question his home state of California's new 13.3 percent top personal income tax rate. With President Obama's newly enacted top federal rate of 39.6 percent, and various other sales, property and miscellaneous taxes, Mickelson said he found himself facing an effective combined tax rate in the neighborhood of 63 percent. Perhaps, he suggested, it was time to move.

That certainly got Texas Gov. Rick Perry's attention. "Texas is the home to liberty and low taxes," Gov. Perry told Mickelson. "We'd love to have you as well."

Texas already has Torii Hunter, one of baseball's best players, who abandoned high-tax California some years ago. Florida, another no-income-tax state, has Tiger Woods for the same reason. Lots of less-high-profile high earners -- business owners, entrepreneurs, professionals, etc. -- are no doubt looking at California's amazingly high tax rates and feeling like the plump hog at a bacon factory.

Yesterday, the legislative session began in full force. Policymakers have an opportunity to make this session an historic one. Policymakers can accomplish this by replacing our broken, adversarial workers' compensation system with an administrative system that actually helps workers, families and the state achieve their greatest potential.

The results of Oklahoma's broken, adversarial workers' compensation system are clear. Our current system drives and rewards litigation and injury disputes instead of focusing on resolution and progress. Lt. Gov. Todd Lamb's most recent policy report succinctly presents the dire need to replace Oklahoma's current workers' compensation system.

Jonathan V. Last, a senior writer at the Weekly Standard, has written a new book called What to Expect When No One's Expecting: America's Coming Demographic Disaster.

Americans need to start having more babies, Last says. This will require a cultural shift, but Last says public policy can help, too. "The government cannot persuade Americans to have children they do not want, but it can help them to have the children they do want." He gives three starting points, one of which has to do with higher education.

'If we just expand our current system, it doesn't solve the problem'

Forward the cause:

During his State of the Union address last month, President Barack Obama proposed making "high-quality preschool available to every single child in America."

"In states that make it a priority to educate our youngest children -- like Georgia or Oklahoma -- studies show students grow up more likely to read and do math at grade level, graduate high school, hold a job, and form more stable families of their own," the president averred.

Given that Oklahoma's universal preschool program began in 1998, meaning the program's first participants are still teenagers, it's not clear Mr. Obama can be trusted when he says these Oklahomans are now more likely to hold a job and form stable families.

Indeed, "there is little evidence that taxpayers and children are benefiting" from Oklahoma's preschool program, writes Heritage Foundation research fellow Lindsey Burke.

You may have noticed that the sun rose on schedule on Saturday morning, despite dire warnings from the advocates of lots and lots of government that the evil, dastardly sequester (which trims about 2.5 percent from federal spending) would, to cite one example of overheated rhetoric from our president, "eviscerate" government services.

There were plenty of breathless stories here in Oklahoma as well, warning darkly of teacher layoffs and the like.

Forward the cause:

The Oklahoma Legislature has taken the first step toward repealing the state's franchise tax. Last month the House Revenue and Taxation Committee voted 11-1 to dump this $40 million tax, which assesses $1.25 on businesses for every $1,000 in capital invested in our state. In effect, it's a tax on existence: You exist, so pay up!

Critics who want lots of taxes and lots of government will surely protest that the state is "giving away" $40 million a year that could be better used to ... well, what could it be used for?

Forward the cause:

The big spenders at the state Capitol are out with their prescription for public education, and it's the same formula they always fall back on -- "invest" in education by spending more money! There's very little discussion of what that extra money might buy, where it would actually be spent, or who might be held accountable for it. Just "spend more!"

Oklahoma taxpayers expect a good return on their investment -- and they know they aren't getting one. It stands to reason that if you want a return from "investing" in schools it ought to be in the form of more learning. Learning is measured by (among other things) test scores, and the most conclusive test score is the ACT exam taken by most Oklahoma high school seniors each year. So how does school spending correlate to those scores?

Forward the cause:

As we head into the second half of Oklahoma's 2013 legislative session, conservatives continue to make the case for pro-growth tax cuts, while our friends on the left (liberals, progressives, socialists, whatever) continue to oppose them. As is the case with so many other issues, what we're dealing with here is, at its root, a case of conflicting worldviews. In the current issue of Perspective, Ph.D. economists Eric Fruits and Randall Pozdena (formerly the research vice president at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco) do an excellent job of explaining this clash of visions.

In short, the authors make the case that Oklahoma's progressives (have you ever noticed how "progressive" policies have regressive results?) and tax consumers continue to advocate for "a large and growing role for government and the public sector."

As we head into the second half of Oklahoma's 2013 legislative session, conservatives continue to make the case for pro-growth tax cuts, while our friends on the left (liberals, progressives, socialists, whatever) continue to oppose them. As is the case with so many other issues, what we're dealing with here is, at its root, a case of conflicting worldviews. In the current issue of Perspective, Ph.D. economists Eric Fruits and Randall Pozdena (formerly the research vice president at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco) do an excellent job of explaining this clash of visions.

In short, the authors make the case that Oklahoma's progressives (have you ever noticed how "progressive" policies have regressive results?) and tax consumers continue to advocate for "a large and growing role for government and the public sector."

Presidential inaugural addresses -- or so the editors of The Wall Street Journal tell us -- "usually include calls for national unity and appeals to our founding principles, which is part of their charm." In his second inaugural address Monday, President Barack Obama checked both those boxes -- but he also recited a list of much-cherished progressive talking points, insisting that the government must act -- and soon! -- to curb global warming, redefine marriage and equalize pay between men and women, among other of his presidential priorities.

The specificity of his statements was unexpected for an inaugural address and much remarked by pundits. It was not his specifics, however, but this generality that most struck me.

Envy

Since the beginning of the year, millions have received their first paycheck for the year 2013. Many who received their checks experienced shock and awe because their checks were lower. The reports of confused, frustrated, disappointed and angry citizens now forced to plan for less income is a valuable lesson. Envy and coveting will blind you and prevent you from giving attention to issues that impact you.

The president, by means of the politics of envy and stoking the fires of coveting was successful in convincing the majority of Americans to focus on "the rich" and those who "don't pay their fair share." Numerous polls show a majority of Americans were ready to "stick it to" those with higher incomes. Thus, the vast majority of the focus on the ever-evolving "fiscal cliff" deal was how to make "the rich" pay more.

Blinded by their desire to make "the rich" pay more, citizens across the country let the president and lawmakers focus almost entirely on raising revenue and making sure "the rich" "pay their fair share." Tied and bound together in envy, many forgot that they were paying less in taxes due to a payroll tax "holiday" that was about to expire.

Economic Growth

As Oklahoma policymakers work in 2013 to accelerate the state's upward economic trajectory, the state Senate's effort to replace our adversarial workers' compensation system with a more desirable administrative system appropriately takes center stage.

Also on the table are income tax cuts. Gov. Mary Fallin and House Speaker T.W. Shannon are promoting a reduction that would continue Oklahoma's trend of pro-growth tax cuts -- good news for hardworking Oklahomans.

But a renewed push to have a tax cut "cost" less may again prevent Oklahoma families from seeing real tax relief.

Economic Growth

As Oklahoma policymakers work in 2013 to accelerate the state's upward economic trajectory, the state Senate's effort to replace our adversarial workers' compensation system with a more desirable administrative system appropriately takes center stage.

Also on the table are income tax cuts. Gov. Mary Fallin and House Speaker T.W. Shannon are promoting a reduction that would continue Oklahoma's trend of pro-growth tax cuts -- good news for hardworking Oklahomans.

But a renewed push to have a tax cut "cost" less may again prevent Oklahoma families from seeing real tax relief.

OCPA distinguished fellow Andrew Spiropoulos has long argued that Oklahoma's system for handling workers' compensation claims is so badly broken that it's time to transform the system to one that is primarily administrative, with a more limited role for the judiciary.

OCPA fiscal policy director Jonathan Small agrees.

OCPA's articles have appeared not only in the likes of The Oklahoman and the Tulsa World, but indeed have been published in more than 200 newspapers -- not only in Oklahoma, but throughout the United States.

Whether it's an article by our late distinguished fellow J. Rufus Fears ("Power of the purse can 'redress every grievance'") or an appearance on Fox Business by our research associate Tina Korbe Dzurisin, sometimes OCPA's message needs a national audience. Thus, in the Sunday Washington Times, OCPA president Michael Carnuccio and research fellow Matt Mayer sketched out their vision for "competitive federalism" ("Fixing America must start with the states"). They write: "We must move the discussion from fiscal gamesmanship in Washington to the real issue-where do Americans want the locus of government power over their lives to reside?"

A couple of days ago, in a Wall Street Journal article to propose a second-term agenda for Mrs. Obama, Abby Schachter shared an insight that once would have been considered banal, but now can be fairly called provocative:

[Michelle Obama's] "Let's Move" campaign to encourage exercise has probably done some good for young people, but there is an even better message the first lady could promote—one likely to have an even longer-lasting and more significant effect on the lives of young people and on society in general: "Let's Marry."

Ironically enough, had every First Lady from Nancy Reagan onward espoused a "Let's Marry" campaign, they might have obviated the need for all the other campaigns.

I've often argued that public policy should encourage and reward parents, who, after all, contribute mightily to the common good by producing and maintaining human capital. Parents face countless challenges on the journey, as they worry about their children's health and safety, education, moral formation and much more. As a father with one child in college and another in diapers (and three more in between), I can assure you that college affordability is a subject often on my mind.

One investment vehicle used by many parents is the 529 college savings plan. Unfortunately, Susanna Kim of ABC News reports ("Federal College Savings Plan Primarily Helps the Wealthy, Study Finds") that "a federal plan meant to help families save for college tuition is overwhelmingly benefiting wealthy families, a federal review has found."

If we want more lower- and middle-income parents to start piling up money in 529 plans, a new vehicle called Education Savings Accounts can help.

Forward the cause:

I've often argued that public policy should encourage and reward parents, who, after all, contribute mightily to the common good by producing and maintaining human capital. Parents face countless challenges on the journey, as they worry about their children's health and safety, education, moral formation and much more. As a father with one child in college and another in diapers (and three more in between), I can assure you that college affordability is a subject often on my mind.

One investment vehicle used by many parents is the 529 college savings plan. Unfortunately, Susanna Kim of ABC News reports ("Federal College Savings Plan Primarily Helps the Wealthy, Study Finds") that "a federal plan meant to help families save for college tuition is overwhelmingly benefiting wealthy families, a federal review has found."

If we want more lower- and middle-income parents to start piling up money in 529 plans, a new vehicle called Education Savings Accounts can help.

During Blake Griffin's sophomore (and final) season at Oklahoma, I made an effort to take my sons to Norman as often as possible to watch him play. As I told them at the time: What we're seeing here doesn't come along every day. We need to appreciate it while we can.

In like manner, I hope Oklahomans realize what they've got in Sen. Tom Coburn. Encouragingly, I think they do. Prophets have been known to be stoned or sawn in two, yet our own Jeremiah-with-an-accounting-degree somehow manages to be the most popular statesman in Oklahoma. Principled and practical, Dr. Coburn endeavors to vote his conscience (even if it's not always popular), and he manages to be cordial to even his most liberal political opponents.

In typical fashion, Dr. Coburn gave a superb speech after the November election entitled "A Valley Forge Moment for Conservatives." The speech is so important we decided to publish it in this month's issue of Perspective.

Forward the cause:

The 2013 legislative session has the opportunity to be a defining one -- one that could position Oklahoma to lead the nation for years to come. One of the most important things policymakers can do is enact real pension reform. Real reform establishes a plan to keep its benefit promises to current employees and structures future benefit plans in a way that is fair and secure to both future employees and taxpayers.

Current systems face staggering amounts of debt that must be addressed to make sure that we can keep our promise to current employees and adequately fund other core areas of government in the future.

News that lawmakers are considering further pension reforms is encouraging.

More than three months after my wedding, I find myself in the dreaded line at the Department of Public Safety (a.k.a. the DMV). It's before 8:00 a.m. on a Monday morning in January and about 18 people are already assembled outside the unopened door of the office. Even though this winter has been unseasonably warm, it's more than a little chilly. In their black peep-toe heels, my toes are turning purple. "Never mind," I say to myself. "If I want to legally change my name, I have to do this."

For the past few weeks, I've repeated that sentence like a mantra as I've trekked to and fro -- from the Social Security office to the Post Office, from the Post Office to the Department of Public Safety -- to officially become "Tina Korbe Dzurisin."

As a part of my pre-New Year's resolutions (I made them in early December), I've committed myself to finally complete the name-change process. I've intentionally procrastinated this part of wedding-related to-dos (most of which I enjoy) because, to put it mildly, I'm not a fan of inefficiency -- and every experience I've ever had waiting in the TSA line at the airport has taught me not to expect particularly streamlined treatment at the offices of government agencies.

More than three months after my wedding, I find myself in the dreaded line at the Department of Public Safety (a.k.a. the DMV). It's before 8:00 a.m. on a Monday morning in January and about 18 people are already assembled outside the unopened door of the office. Even though this winter has been unseasonably warm, it's more than a little chilly. In their black peep-toe heels, my toes are turning purple. "Never mind," I say to myself. "If I want to legally change my name, I have to do this."

For the past few weeks, I've repeated that sentence like a mantra as I've trekked to and fro -- from the Social Security office to the Post Office, from the Post Office to the Department of Public Safety -- to officially become "Tina Korbe Dzurisin."

As a part of my pre-New Year's resolutions (I made them in early December), I've committed myself to finally complete the name-change process. I've intentionally procrastinated this part of wedding-related to-dos (most of which I enjoy) because, to put it mildly, I'm not a fan of inefficiency -- and every experience I've ever had waiting in the TSA line at the airport has taught me not to expect particularly streamlined treatment at the offices of government agencies.

Kansas

In a lengthy article last month ("Brownback says his changes in Kansas are a model for the nation"), The Kansas City Star reported that Kansas Gov. Sam Brownback has rammed through massive income tax cuts, wiped away thousands of public sector jobs, and slashed spending for public broadcasting and social services. He squeezed four state agencies into other departments. He handed the state's Medicaid program to private insurance companies. He's taken thousands off welfare by rewriting the rules that once made them eligible for help.

The man is just getting started. Now, backed with a growing legislative majority of conservative Republicans, Brownback stands ready to amp up his remake of state government in Kansas. His unapologetically bold agenda, backed with mounting political power, makes Kansas a proving ground for a range of conservative theory.

"The way you change America is by changing the states," Brownback is quoted as saying. "These are the sort of efforts that will bear fruit in our states and we'll be able to use federally then as models for change."

He's right. Dr. David Brown, OCPA founding chairman, formed our organization because of his long-held belief that the federal government is morally, intellectually and financially bankrupt -- and that solutions will have to come from the states.

Premier think tank expands capacity with addition of external relations director

Political strategist joins the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs from sister organization

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK (Jan. 7, 2013) -- The Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA), Oklahoma's premier free-market think tank, announced today that Dave Bond has joined the organization as director of external relations.

Dave Bond

Bond will direct legislative relations for the organization and will also focus on strategic membership growth and grassroots coalition development statewide.

"At OCPA, we are continually putting new pieces together to expand our efforts and increase our outreach across Oklahoma," said Michael Carnuccio, president of OCPA.

"For the concepts of free markets, limited government and individual liberty to be at the forefront of the discussion at our state Capitol, it is critical that OCPA members in all corners of the state be engaged at every level of the policymaking process so they can hold their elected policymakers accountable and impact the process in a substantive way."

Bond comes to OCPA from its 501(c)4 partner organization, Oklahoma Policy Solutions, where he served as director and advocated at the Capitol and to citizen groups on behalf of several policy issues, including broadening school choice for students and parents and reducing the state income tax.

"Oklahoma has a window of opportunity to become a national leader," Bond said. "We're uniquely positioned to become one of the very best states in America in which to do business, raise a family and retire.

"Compared with many states, we have fewer restrictions to take off job creators and families before they're able to realize their full potential and achieve greater personal prosperity without depending on government. And we have a majority of state lawmakers in office who understand this and have the ability to act on it."

Along with tax relief and educational choice, Bond said reforming the state workers' compensation system and identifying state-based solutions to Medicaid, public-employee pensions and other unsustainable fiscal burdens are among the key issues facing Oklahoma.

Bond will continue to be active with Oklahoma Policy Solutions as a member of its board.

Prior to his time at Oklahoma Policy Solutions, Bond worked in Oklahoma campaigns for five consecutive election cycles, focusing primarily on state legislative races. In the 2008 elections, he served as director of the Republican State House Committee, the chief political arm of the Republican caucus of the Oklahoma House of Representatives. He also previously worked at the state House of Representatives in media and communications.

Bond is a graduate of Oklahoma State University. He lives in Yukon with his wife Marsha and their two young sons, Owen and Mason.

The Venus Flytrap, using a sweet aroma, tricks unsuspecting insects into landing on its leaves. These leaves then quickly close, trapping the soon-to-be-consumed insect whose struggles only cause the plant to speed up the fatal process. In much the same way, some states have expanded their Medicaid program after being tempted by the sweet aroma of additional federal taxpayer dollars. Their judgment clouded by this temptation, they fail to see the trap -- there is no guarantee that care will improve for their citizens or that federal dollars will continue to come in the door. The only guarantee is that the states are on the hook for millions of dollars.

The Venus Flytrap, using a sweet aroma, tricks unsuspecting insects into landing on its leaves. These leaves then quickly close, trapping the soon-to-be-consumed insect whose struggles only cause the plant to speed up the fatal process. In much the same way, some states have expanded their Medicaid program after being tempted by the sweet aroma of additional federal taxpayer dollars. Their judgment clouded by this temptation, they fail to see the trap -- there is no guarantee that care will improve for their citizens or that federal dollars will continue to come in the door. The only guarantee is that the states are on the hook for millions of dollars.

In an important decision last week that could have national ramifications, the Indiana Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the nation's most expansive school-voucher program (nearly two-thirds of Indiana students are eligible, according to The New York Times).

"This opinion may be an important turning point in the legal fight to expand school choice," says Oklahoma City University law professor Andrew Spiropoulos, who also serves as the Milton Friedman Distinguished Fellow at OCPA.

Forward the cause:

National School Choice Week is in full swing across the country and also in Oklahoma (kudos to Gov. Mary Fallin for proclaiming it so).

As I told OETA's Dick Pryor, this is a week designed to highlight the many educational options available to parents, and to make the case that parents should be able to choose the safest and best options for their children-- whether that's a traditional public school, a charter school, a private school, online learning, private tutoring, homeschooling or some customized menu of options.

As I never tire of repeating, in the 21st century "public education" shouldn't mean your children have to go to the school bureaucratically assigned to them based on geography. Rather, we should remind ourselves that the goal of "public education" is to produce an "educated public"-- regardless of where that education takes place.

Economic Growth

Perennially debated issues at the state legislature have their own peculiar rhythm. With proposed tax cuts or exemptions, for example, the discussion focuses on the Oklahoma Tax Commission's estimate of how many dollars the proposal will (depending on your perspective) cost the state or benefit the taxpayers. Perhaps it would be better if, instead, we judged the proposal based on its economic impact. For example, we should ask how much economic growth will occur or how many jobs will be created if we enact this proposal. But too often, it's just easier to go with what we know.

The same problem arises with workers' compensation reform legislation.

Most readers of this blog understand that freedom works. Entrepreneurs operating in a competitive market will outperform government monopolies (especially those that are heavily unionized).

Anyone with an iPod can tell you that music players keep getting cheaper and better. If music players had suffered the same cost/performance trends as public education, says Cato Institute scholar Andrew J. Coulson, "we'd all still be lugging around cassette boom boxes, but they'd now cost almost $1,800."

Mercifully, free enterprise has made inroads into public education.

Forward the cause:

Yesterday, OCPA released its FY-2014 Budget Book, which contains our recommendations for the state's appropriated budget for the upcoming fiscal year. It's a budget that respects your family budget by focusing spending on core services and allowing for a modest tax cut that does not increase the tax burden for any Oklahoman. A real tax cut for Oklahomans is deserved and necessary, especially since the federal government increased taxes for most Oklahomans this year -- while total state tax collections, sales taxes, and state government spending are at all-time highs. Given that Oklahomans are foregoing at least two percent of their paychecks due to the payroll tax hike, we think it is completely reasonable for Oklahoma to focus on core services, eliminate unjustifiable expenditures, and cut appropriations by a little less than two percent, so citizens can keep more of the fruits of their own labor.

Tax Relief

"The entire premise of a market economy is that individuals, possessing better knowledge of their affairs, can allocate labor and capital far more effectively than any government," Andrew Spiropoulos writes in his latest column. "A government must tax to pay for those public goods that benefit everyone. A wise government takes as few dollars out of the hands of its productive citizens as it can manage." Spiropoulos, who serves as OCPA's Milton Friedman Distinguished Fellow, has some good words for the proposal by Gov. Mary Fallin and House Speaker T.W. Shannon to reduce Oklahoma's personal income tax rate from 5.25 percent to 5.00 percent.

Oklahoma's professional left (interest groups, journalists, philanthropists) continues to team up with the crony capitalist/health-care-provider complex to push for the Obamacare Medicaid expansion -- just as they did for Obamacare itself.

To her great credit, Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin is having none of it.

Dear Friends,

Last night, I attended the Oklahoma City Chapter of the Association for Women in Communications' 55th Annual Byliners Awards. This dinner and awards program recognizes the accomplishments of professional women who have made a significant contribution to our community through their professional and volunteer achievements. In attendance among the seven honorees was the Honorable Reta Strubhar. During her acceptance speech,

As we celebrate International Women's Day today, let's share the important dialogue we had just a week ago at OCPA's Women's Policy and Leadership Conference. Below are links to the each panel's recorded live stream:

Mitch Daniels at OCPA

Mitch Daniels (pictured above at an OCPA podium in Tulsa in 2011) says he's had hundreds of conversations with students and faculty, and one theme that ran through those conversations was that "the higher ed world we have known is likely headed for big change."

In his letter he mentions many of the current criticisms of higher ed, including: absence of academic rigor; escalating costs and dubious ROI; exploding student-loan debt; administrative bloat; absence of intellectual diversity; and professors who spend too much time doing research of no real value while refusing to teach enough classes.

"We cannot improve low on-time completion rates and maximize student success," Daniels writes, "if no one is willing to modify his schedule, workload or method of teaching."

In short, he says, "a growing literature suggests that the operating model employed by Purdue and most American universities is antiquated and soon to be displaced."

Mitch Daniels at OCPA

Mitch Daniels (pictured above at an OCPA podium in Tulsa in 2011) says he's had hundreds of conversations with students and faculty, and one theme that ran through those conversations was that "the higher ed world we have known is likely headed for big change."

In his letter he mentions many of the current criticisms of higher ed, including: absence of academic rigor; escalating costs and dubious ROI; exploding student-loan debt; administrative bloat; absence of intellectual diversity; and professors who spend too much time doing research of no real value while refusing to teach enough classes.

"We cannot improve low on-time completion rates and maximize student success," Daniels writes, "if no one is willing to modify his schedule, workload or method of teaching."

In short, he says, "a growing literature suggests that the operating model employed by Purdue and most American universities is antiquated and soon to be displaced."

Imagine a state where a mom using Medicaid could only take her daughter to a government hospital, or where child care subsidies from the state could only be used at a government-operated daycare center. Imagine a state where Oklahoma Higher Learning Access Program scholarships were granted only to students who enrolled at the college or university nearest their home, and that it had to be a public institution. Better yet, imagine a state in which high school students could only attend the nearest public college or university.

Needless to say these programs would face significant operational challenges and would fail many Oklahomans the programs are intended to serve. Sadly, this is the mode of operation for providing funding for K-12 public education.

It's not often that state Rep. Mike Shelton (a liberal Democrat lawmaker from Oklahoma City) and Brandon Dutcher (a conservative public policy wonk from Bartlesville) agree with one another. But it happened this week because the issue is more important than partisanship or ideological differences -- children.

Oklahoma has reason for hope

By Michael Carnuccio

Last year, Gov. Mary Fallin staked out high ground on the issue of tax relief by rolling out what was then the most aggressive plan in the nation. Likewise, Kansas Gov. Sam Brownback ushered through the biggest tax cut in his state's history. Now, Louisiana's Bobby Jindal and Nebraska's Dave Heineman have unveiled similar proposals. This year, Fallin is again calling for tax cuts. While more measured in scope, the across-the-board tax relief would be paid for entirely out of growth revenue. Such measures have proven time and again to lead to economic growth.

New year, same problem

By Michael Carnuccio

A new year means it's time for a firm resolution. Not the annual "I think I will start exercising" wishful thinking, but a steadfastness in seeing something through, which must happen in order for us to be around for 2014.

After all, we are talking about resolve. If there's one thing we must deal with successfully in 2013, it is the fiscal irresponsibility of the federal government.

As a nation, we are spending twice as much as we take in. This is not Republican or Democrat. This is unsustainable.

New year, same problem

By Michael Carnuccio

A new year means it's time for a firm resolution. Not the annual "I think I will start exercising" wishful thinking, but a steadfastness in seeing something through, which must happen in order for us to be around for 2014.

After all, we are talking about resolve. If there's one thing we must deal with successfully in 2013, it is the fiscal irresponsibility of the federal government.

As a nation, we are spending twice as much as we take in. This is not Republican or Democrat. This is unsustainable.

Facts are stubborn things

By Michael Carnuccio

The national consensus is that the federal government is bankrupt. That tends to happen when your spending growth outperforms your revenue collections. Unfortunately, government spending is at an all-time high in the Sooner State as well. Yet, politicians cry that revenue, not spending, is the problem. So, which is it?

Reality, as released late last week by the state's Office of Management and Enterprise Services, is quite clear. The Comprehensive Annual Financial Report is the primary means of reporting the state government's financial activities. And what activity there was.

OCPA Reacts to the Governor's State of the State Address

OKLAHOMA CITY (Feb. 4, 2013) -- As the OCPA team watched Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin's third State of the State address today, we were encouraged by the policy solutions she outlined. Gov. Fallin recognizes that Oklahoma's costly workers' compensation system dampens our state's business climate and constricts our job market. The cost savings from reform will allow Oklahoma's private-sector employers to expand capacity and create additional job opportunities for their friends and neighbors.

OCPA President Michael Carnuccio said, "We applaud the Governor for pointing out the positive impact tax cuts have already had on Oklahoma's economy and the opportunities they have made possible for Oklahoma families. She instinctively understands our income tax rate is still too high and puts us at a competitive disadvantage against more than one of our neighboring states."

Fiscally, Gov. Fallin challenged lawmakers to break away from the less-than-transparent state budgeting practices of decades past. In addition, she realizes changes must be made to preserve the state's employee retirement program to ensure it delivers on its promises and does not become an unnecessary burden on taxpayers.

OCPA Executive Vice President Brian Bush said Gov. Fallin's comments on President Obama's health care act were heartening. "We are proud of Gov. Fallin for standing firm in her position that the federal health care law is unaffordable and ineffective for our state, and that policymakers should continue to opt out of the law's expansion of Medicaid," Bush said.

Knowing that the Governor is entering the legislative session with this mindset, and knowing the priorities of leaders like President Pro Tempore Brian Bingman and Speaker T.W. Shannon, OCPA is optimistic that Oklahoma's second century will continue to be better than its first.

"The more that Oklahoma policymakers stick to the concepts of limiting the size of government and unleashing the entrepreneurial spirit within our state's borders, the more opportunities Oklahoma families will have before them in the decades to come," Bush said.

Statement from OCPA on passage of administrative system proposal

OKLAHOMA CITY (Feb. 19, 2013) -- Brian Bush, executive vice president of the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA), released the following statement this morning after a state Senate committee passed legislation that would change Oklahoma's workers' compensation structure to an administrative system:

"We're pleased that the conversation around workers' compensation reform is now centered on moving Oklahoma to an administrative system for processing comp claims. This is an idea OCPA has promoted for nearly two decades, and we're encouraged about the possibility that the reform could happen soon.

"For too long, we've acted in Oklahoma as though being one of only two states with an adversarial workers' compensation system has no connection to the fact that employers here pay some of the highest workers' comp premiums in America. This is a penalty on entrepreneurs and job creators that prevents our state from reaching its full potential.

"Moving to an administrative system for workers' compensation claims and gradually phasing down Oklahoma's income tax are the two most important steps our state can take toward being able to boast the best environment in America for growth and opportunity. That state policymakers are working to achieve each should be of great interest to Oklahoma employers and families."

Statement from OCPA on passage of administrative system proposal

OKLAHOMA CITY (Feb. 19, 2013) -- Brian Bush, executive vice president of the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA), released the following statement this morning after a state Senate committee passed legislation that would change Oklahoma's workers' compensation structure to an administrative system:

"We're pleased that the conversation around workers' compensation reform is now centered on moving Oklahoma to an administrative system for processing comp claims. This is an idea OCPA has promoted for nearly two decades, and we're encouraged about the possibility that the reform could happen soon.

"For too long, we've acted in Oklahoma as though being one of only two states with an adversarial workers' compensation system has no connection to the fact that employers here pay some of the highest workers' comp premiums in America. This is a penalty on entrepreneurs and job creators that prevents our state from reaching its full potential.

"Moving to an administrative system for workers' compensation claims and gradually phasing down Oklahoma's income tax are the two most important steps our state can take toward being able to boast the best environment in America for growth and opportunity. That state policymakers are working to achieve each should be of great interest to Oklahoma employers and families."

OCPA's mission is to accumulate, evaluate and disseminate public policy ideas and information for Oklahoma, consistent with the principles of free enterprise, limited government and individual initiative.

Tax cuts are working

By Michael Carnuccio

For the past decade, the Sooner State has benefited from being the most recent to remove union shackles from employees, while further empowering citizens with a 25-percent reduction in the top individual income tax rate.

However, nothing happens in a vacuum. As we begin another legislative session, Oklahoma's government should recognize that we are landlocked in a competitive heartland that is moving the ball quite rapidly.

Two proposals in the Legislature right now could spur Oklahoma's economy significantly.

First, the income tax cut proposed by Gov. Mary Fallin and Speaker T.W. Shannon, R-Lawton, will reduce the rate from 5.25 to 5 percent, thereby allowing Oklahoma citizens to keep more of the fruits of their labor and invest in their families and communities. Support for the bill continues to grow. The State Chamber of Oklahoma, Greater Oklahoma City Chamber and Americans for Prosperity have offered endorsements.

However, there's another big so-called tax cut being considered that could also shoot some adrenaline into the economy.

You are invited to a special briefing at OCPA that should be of interest to anyone who desires smaller government at the state and federal level.

On Thursday, Jan. 31, OCPA will be proud to host Robert G. Natelson, senior fellow in constitutional jurisprudence at the Independence Institute, Colorado's premier free-market think tank.

Professor Natelson is one of America's best-known constitutional scholars and a leading expert on the American founding. You can learn more about him here.

At OCPA, Professor Natelson's presentation will be two-fold:

- 1) How Article V of the U.S. Constitution authorizes states to propose constitutional amendments, and what the historical and legal record says about how this process operates. Many see this as a potential avenue for a federal balanced-budget amendment.
- 2) The implications of a federal lawsuit filed in Colorado that, if successful, would potentially restrict state taxpayers from approving constitutional limits on legislative powers (such as, limiting the ability of Oklahoma lawmakers to increase state taxes).

Professor Natelson's briefing will take place on Thursday, Jan. 31, at 5:30 pm. Refreshments and hors d'oeuvre will be provided.

If you plan to attend, please RSVP to Jennie Kleese at 405-602-1667 or jennie@ocpathink.org.

I hope to see you on the 31st. The effort to preserve liberty in America continues. It requires vigilance and perseverance, and we at OCPA appreciate you standing on the front lines with us.

All the best,

Dave Bond
Director of External Relations,

You are invited to a special briefing at OCPA that should be of interest to anyone who desires smaller government at the state and federal level.

On Thursday, Jan. 31, OCPA will be proud to host Robert G. Natelson, senior fellow in constitutional jurisprudence at the Independence Institute, Colorado's premier free-market think tank.

Professor Natelson is one of America's best-known constitutional scholars and a leading expert on the American founding. You can learn more about him here.

At OCPA, Professor Natelson's presentation will be two-fold:

- 1) How Article V of the U.S. Constitution authorizes states to propose constitutional amendments, and what the historical and legal record says about how this process operates. Many see this as a potential avenue for a federal balanced-budget amendment.
- 2) The implications of a federal lawsuit filed in Colorado that, if successful, would potentially restrict state taxpayers from approving constitutional limits on legislative powers (such as, limiting the ability of Oklahoma lawmakers to increase state taxes).

Professor Natelson's briefing will take place on Thursday, Jan. 31, at 5:30 pm. Refreshments and hors d'oeuvre will be provided.

If you plan to attend, please RSVP to Jennie Kleese at 405-602-1667 or jennie@ocpathink.org.

I hope to see you on the 31st. The effort to preserve liberty in America continues. It requires vigilance and perseverance, and we at OCPA appreciate you standing on the front lines with us.

All the best,

Dave Bond
Director of External Relations,
Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs

We told you so

By Michael Carnuccio

So-called provider fees - more properly called provider taxes - are a shell game. The state levies the tax on hospital revenues. The tax monies are then funneled into a pool that receives matching funds from the federal government through the Medicaid program. That same pool, enriched by the federal matching funds, is then redistributed to hospitals in Oklahoma. Essentially, provider taxes use federal funds to match federal funds and thereby increase the amount of money a state receives from the federal government.

Yes, the government that is broke, like borrow-$1-trillion-per-year broke.

Spend-happy politicians often act as though federal dollars really were free dollars. However, as we know, they're not.

Tax relief, not reform

By Michael Carnuccio

When you believe in the mission, you see it through until the job is done.

You move the ball down the field, whether it's a 40-yard strike or three yards at a time, while blocking to prevent a sack.

This applies to tax cuts. The objective is to let taxpayers keep more of what they earn, leaving more capital in the economy.

With federal taxes rising and clear evidence that high income taxes suppress economic growth, many around the nation are cutting income taxes. Last year, Kansas dropped its tax rate below Oklahoma's. Other states are working to do the same.

However, as the Obama administration demonstrated in the fiscal cliff negotiations, tax "reform" doesn't always equal tax relief for moms, dads, entrepreneurs and job creators.

Tuesday lessons

By Michael Carnuccio

Geoffrey Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury, declared that "the country and the Commonwealth last Tuesday were not far from the Kingdom of Heaven." Likewise, Tuesday, Jan. 8 was an important day in Oklahoma, albeit not the Coronation Day of Queen Elizabeth II. However, three monumental events will have great influence on the public policy outcomes for the year.

Stating that prosperity and opportunity are created by conservative policies, T.W. Shannon was sworn in as Oklahoma's speaker of the House. The fact that he is the youngest and first black lawmaker to hold the position renders mute media bias that would have us believe the GOP is out of touch with minorities and the future. Bringing a refreshing prose to the leadership post, Shannon's posture at the podium was of federalism and fiscal discipline.

While this is encouraging, the speaker and his colleagues have their work cut out for them.

Governing is a game of half-truths. Advance your cause by eliciting enough support through selective application of information. Remember, politics is the process of power and control, not the truth setting you free.

Sequestration is a perfect example. What was supposed to be a double down on the president's agenda where class warfare feeds increased government dependency quickly turned into overplaying perceived leverage.

Gov. Mary Fallin said last week that "she has no plans to revisit her decision to reject an expansion of Medicaid in Oklahoma," according to the Associated Press.

Good for her. As I point out in the current issue of the Oklahoma Gazette, "Gov. Fallin should be applauded for saying, 'No thanks,' to the Obamacare Medicaid expansion. It took some political courage -- many of the crony capitalists who supported Obamacare and its Medicaid expansion are significant GOP players -- but it was the right decision. Quite simply, it's a bad idea to borrow money from China in order to expand a dysfunctional, fraud-ridden welfare program that is almost certainly the worst health plan in America."

Free markets do the best job of delivering quality products at affordable prices while maintaining customer satisfaction. As National School Choice Week wraps up -- a major thank you to Gov. Mary Fallin for proclaiming it School Choice Week in Oklahoma, too -- now is a good time to be reminded that freedom especially works in education.

Cato Institute scholar Andrew J. Coulson, who spoke in 2011 at an Oklahoma symposium on digital learning, is the author of the important book Market Education: The Unknown History. And after writing that book "comparing the performance of alternative school systems over the past 2,000 years," he writes, "I surveyed the modern econometric literature on the subject for the Journal of School Choice. What I found is that the freest, most market-like education systems consistently outperform the sorts of state monopolies" preferred by the education establishment.

This should not surprise us. Readers of this publication, of all people, should expect free markets to outperform state monopolies -- especially those that are heavily unionized.

OHCA needs leadership

By Michael Carnuccio

Some Republican governors, with moderate to left-leaning

electorates, have accepted Obamacare's Medicaid expansion to save their political futures. Meanwhile, Gov. Mary Fallin, Oklahoma's elected leaders and policymakers in the position to make the decision, continue to strongly oppose the burdensome proposition. Such opposition is reasoned and indeed wise.

Cost estimates to the state for expanding this government program are staggering. Based on the unrefuted analysis of Jagadeesh Gokhale of the CATO Institute (entitlement expert and Social Security Advisory Board member), realistic estimates reveal that Oklahoma's share of Medicaid expansion would total about $1.6 billion in the first seven years the state is required to pay. Expansion problems abound, as Oklahoma's secretary of health and human services noted, "If we just expand our current system, it doesn't solve the problem."

Given overwhelming public opposition to the expansion and the governor's decision, the recent actions of Oklahoma Health Care Authority CEO Mike Fogarty are nothing short of insubordination.

OHCA needs leadership

By Michael Carnuccio

Some Republican governors, with moderate to left-leaning

electorates, have accepted Obamacare's Medicaid expansion to save their political futures. Meanwhile, Gov. Mary Fallin, Oklahoma's elected leaders and policymakers in the position to make the decision, continue to strongly oppose the burdensome proposition. Such opposition is reasoned and indeed wise.

Cost estimates to the state for expanding this government program are staggering. Based on the unrefuted analysis of Jagadeesh Gokhale of the CATO Institute (entitlement expert and Social Security Advisory Board member), realistic estimates reveal that Oklahoma's share of Medicaid expansion would total about $1.6 billion in the first seven years the state is required to pay. Expansion problems abound, as Oklahoma's secretary of health and human services noted, "If we just expand our current system, it doesn't solve the problem."

Given overwhelming public opposition to the expansion and the governor's decision, the recent actions of Oklahoma Health Care Authority CEO Mike Fogarty are nothing short of insubordination.

“Hats off to Rep. Shelton for proposing private-school vouchers for parents who feel their children are unsafe at school. Even though I suspect more Oklahomans would feel safer with armed teachers than without them, I nevertheless commend Rep. Shelton for sticking up for the principle of parental rights. ## Solving sequestration

By Michael Carnuccio

Sequestration -- getting by on just more than 97 percent of the current budget -- has overwhelmed our federal government. This is a short list of the predicted gloom:

- The Pentagon delayed deployment of the USS Harry Truman to key Middle East exercises as it reduced the number of aircraft carriers it has in the Gulf from two to one.
- The Department of Homeland Security released illegal immigrants being held in immigration jails across the country.
- The Department of Housing and Urban Development said some 125,000 Americans at risk of becoming homeless and 100,000 formerly homeless people might be removed from emergency shelters or other housing arrangements.
- Because of the mandatory cuts, up to 750,000 low-income women and their children are at risk of losing food and baby formula from the Women, Infants and Children supplemental nutrition program, said the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a Washington, D.C.-based left-leaning, nonprofit think tank.

How is it that our government has become so inefficient? Why must this be so painful to American taxpayers?

Hi Melissa,

Does your team have any thoughts on the $125 million in bonds being considered Thursday? The AG has mentioned to me before that he is not crazy about the master lease program and the way it is used, but I didn't know if you would want to chat about it this week. Even though the practice is constitutional, I wanted to see if your office would have any input for us given the AG's reservations about the public policy involved. We agree with him about the policy concerns, and we would appreciate any ideas or input you all might have on how to fix it.

You are invited to a special briefing at OCPA that should be of interest to anyone who desires smaller government at the state and federal level.

On Thursday, Jan. 31, OCPA will be proud to host Robert G. Natelson, senior fellow in constitutional jurisprudence at the Independence Institute, Colorado's premier free-market think tank.

Professor Natelson is one of America's best-known constitutional scholars and a leading expert on the American founding. You can learn more about him here.

At OCPA, Professor Natelson's presentation will focus on how Article V of the U.S. Constitution authorizes states to propose constitutional amendments, and what the historical and legal record says about how this process operates. Many see this as a potential avenue for a federal balanced-budget amendment.

Professor Natelson's briefing will take place at 5:30 pm on Thursday, Jan. 31, at OCPA, 1401 N. Lincoln Blvd. in Oklahoma City. Refreshments and hors d'oeuvre will be provided.

If you plan to attend, please RSVP to Jennie Kleese at 405-602-1667 or jennie@ocpathink.org.

I hope to see you on the 31st. The effort to preserve liberty in America continues. It requires vigilance and perseverance, and we at OCPA appreciate you standing on the front lines with us.

All the best,

Dave Bond

Take control of the game

By Michael Carnuccio

Like so many of the ideas enshrined in the U.S. Constitution, the concept of federalism was considered by the Founding Fathers to be essential to the success of the American experiment.

In the essay Federalist No. 39, James Madison reassured critics that the Constitution would not establish a strictly national government -- that is, one that derives its powers exclusively from and operates directly upon the people, with no regard for the authority and responsibility of the states. Instead, the Constitution would establish a government that was both national and federal -- i.e., respectful of state sovereignty.

The states had to ratify the Constitution for it to take effect.

You'll want to go to either Red Prime (just a block north of the Skirvin), or the Mantel (about three blocks east).

Red Prime is a modern steakhouse--very good. The Mantel is probably my favorite restaurant in town, it's not strictly a steakhouse and has a broader menu, but has a great intimate vibe and good wine list.

Henry/Rod/Jonathan:

A Conference Call has been scheduled for Friday, January 11, 2013, at 3:00 PM CST.

Henry has advised that he may or may not be able to participate, but that it is important that the call still take place in order to bring Jonathan up to speed. He believes the other participants will be able to do that even if he is not involved.

The Dial-In Number and the Access Codes for the Conference Call are as follows:

Dial-In Number: 605-475-4800
Host (General Pruitt, Melissa, Tom) Access Code: 1030632*
Participant (Henry, Rod, Jonathan) Access Code: 1030632#

Once you dial the above-referenced Dial-In number, you will be prompted to enter the appropriate Access Code.

If you have any questions, please let me know.

Thanks! -Rhonda

Melissa,

We need to make sure Jonathan Adler is coached up about the goals for the AG Strategy Sessions.

It would be great if General Pruitt and Tom Bates could participate. Rod Hastie knows everything going on in the states, so he can be most helpful.

Can you propose some times for Thursday or Friday?

Jonathan, what is your availability?

It's almost showtime!

Thanks.

Melissa,

We need to make sure Jonathan Adler is coached up about the goals for the AG Strategy Sessions.

It would be great if General Pruitt and Tom Bates could participate. Rod Hastie knows everything going on in the states, so he can be most helpful.

Can you propose some times for Thursday or Friday?

Jonathan, what is your availability?

It's almost showtime!

Thanks.

Henry

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Lynne,

Although I don't particularly like the terms: "immigrants in an unauthorized status" and "undocumented immigrants," I agree with the point of the letter and would join.

I actually believe it would make the point more forcefully to say something like "immigrants who are or may be in the United States illegally" as it is this status that causes many of the problems we are suggesting need to be fixed.

Thanks to all who are taking the lead on this important issue.

Lynne ,

Although I don't particularly like the terms: "immigrants in an unauthorized status" and "undocumented immigrants," I agree with the point of the letter and would join.

I actually believe it would make the point more forcefully to say something like "immigrants who are or may be in the United States illegally" as it is this status that causes many of the problems we are suggesting need to be fixed.

Thanks to all who are taking the lead on this important issue.

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Lynne ,

Although I don't particularly like the terms: "immigrants in an unauthorized status" and "undocumented immigrants," I agree with the point of the letter and would join.

I actually believe it would make the point more forcefully to say something like "immigrants who are or may be in the United States illegally" as it is this status that causes many of the problems we are suggesting need to be fixed.

Thanks to all who are taking the lead on this important issue.

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Subject: Former AG sign on letter --- Common Sense Immigration Reform
Date: Thu, Apr 4, 2013 2:00 pm

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!
Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Subject: Former AG sign on letter --- Common Sense Immigration Reform
Date: Thu, Apr 4, 2013 2:00 pm

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!
Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!

Lynne,

Although I don't particularly like the terms: "immigrants in an unauthorized status" and "undocumented immigrants," I agree with the point of the letter and would join.

I actually believe it would make the point more forcefully to say something like "immigrants who are or may be in the United States illegally" as it is this status that causes many of the problems we are suggesting need to be fixed.

Thanks to all who are taking the lead on this important issue.

Lynne ,

Although I don't particularly like the terms: "immigrants in an unauthorized status" and "undocumented immigrants," I agree with the point of the letter and would join.

I actually believe it would make the point more forcefully to say something like "immigrants who are or may be in the United States illegally" as it is this status that causes many of the problems we are suggesting need to be fixed.

Thanks to all who are taking the lead on this important issue.

Subject: Former AG sign on letter --- Common Sense Immigration Reform

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Subject: Former AG sign on letter --- Common Sense Immigraton Reform

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Subject: Former AG sign on letter --- Common Sense Immigration Reform
Date: Thu, Apr 4, 2013 2:00 pm

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!
Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Subject: Former AG sign on letter --- Common Sense Immigration Reform
Date: Thu, Apr 4, 2013 2:00 pm

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!
Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security.

Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years! Thanks

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

I have been working with Grant, Terry and Mark for the past several years in encouraging Congress to act. Those in the know believe that the law enforcement perspective provided both through a former AG letter, as well as the one circulating through NAAG/CWAG will make a difference.

Please feel free to call one of us if you want to talk further about this. I also attach below former AG Bob Stephan's comments this week at a Kansas City roundtable coordinated by the National Immigration Forum. There are likely to be lots of grass roots opportunities to speak on this topic in the next few months so please let me know if you would like to become more involved. By the way, Mark Shurtleff is on the Forum Board of Directors. Grant and Terry have also been very active in speaking out on immigration issues.

Thanks so much for your consideration

Lynne

Dear Former Attorneys General,

On behalf of former AGs Terry Goddard, Mark Shurtleff and Grant Woods, I write to ask you to join in signing on to this letter (see attached) conveying to Senate and House leadership and members support for legislative efforts to pass common sense immigration reform in conjunction with increased border security. Could you please get back to me by Tuesday, April 9 if you want to sign on. I hope to get the letter to the Hill on April 10.

Your name will be listed with your state and years in office so please send the years!
Thanks
