Saving the GOP

By Michael Carnuccio

Political pundits and activists alike seem astounded by carpetbagger Terry McAuliffe's victory in Virginia's high-profile gubernatorial contest. They shouldn't be. Republicans have been put on notice -- again.

What played out there was not unlike what converted Colorado from a solid red state to the not-so-battleground territory Democrats now enjoy. Just as Colorado's demographics have transformed from an influx of Californians, northern Virginia has changed the lead of Southern states. In fact, it's a textbook example of how growing government not only violates Republican ideals, it undercuts the GOP's future. The progression in northern Virginia is due in no small part to the swelling federal government, with bureaucrats, activists and consultants beholden to Uncle Sam. The northern portion of Virginia is blue and growing.

Empowering students

By Michael Carnuccio

Last year, an engaged educator at Roosevelt Middle School, a Title I school in the Oklahoma Public Schools District, asked his students to write a letter to their congressman. Unfortunately, their response was more apathy than enthusiasm. Most believed their letters would never be read, meaning their voices were not important. He wouldn't let that stop them, personally delivering the letters and arranging for Republican U.S. Rep. James Lankford to visit the school. During the visit, Lankford referenced the letters, identifying the students by name with their questions, thereby transforming their impression of what was possible and what they could achieve by reaching higher than society expects.

For Felix Linden, this wasn't enough. To him, they had barely scratched the surface of their potential. So, he teamed up with fellow teacher Lauren Knobbe and set out to remake what was possible for children on the south side of Oklahoma City. Together, they created the Roosevelt Leadership Academy.

"One of America's most durable myths," George Leef writes over at Forbes, "is that the more people who graduate from college, the more the economy will grow."

For many years, politicians and leaders of the higher education establishment have advanced that notion. In his first major speech as president, for example, Barack Obama said that if we want a strong economy, we need to lead the world in the percentage of the population that has earned a college degree. And in a recent op-ed in The Wall Street Journal, two college presidents (Robert Gates of William and Mary and David Boren of the University of Oklahoma) argued that decreasing state spending on higher education means that we are "sacrificing our young people's futures - and our future economic growth ..."

An Oklahoma scholarship program for special-needs students is once again under attack, Oklahoma Watchdog reports ("Lawsuit by public-school educators attacks Oklahoma scholarship program for special-needs children").

"A motley crew of plaintiffs has filed a lawsuit asking the Oklahoma courts to toss out the Lindsey Nicole Henry Scholarship for students with disabilities," adds Oklahoma City University law professor Andrew Spiropoulos. "This renewed attempt to sever a lifeline for a small group of disabled students is vindictive because these plaintiffs know that these children suffered horribly in public schools. The program enables these children to escape an environment of bullying, ineffective instruction, and profound neglect and find specialized schools where they can blossom and reveal the beauty of their true nature."

The abysmal failure of the launch of Obamacare's insurance exchanges has received much attention. Proponents of Obamacare hope that website improvements and intense marketing will be able to salvage the effort. But an even more important discussion awaits once the exchanges are "operable." Getting health insurance through Obamacare's exchanges, especially with the assistance of tax credits, poses a great risk to the health and pocketbooks of those who apply.

Forward the cause:

Several members of Oklahoma's monopoly-education establishment are continuing to complain about Oklahoma's A-F report cards. Gov. Mary Fallin, to her credit, is defending the state report cards while also drawing attention to what's called "the nation's report card," which shows that two-thirds of Oklahoma's fourth-graders are below proficient in math, while nearly three-fourths are below proficient in reading.

If state and national report cards aren't enough, I commend to your attention the Global Report Card, a sophisticated data tool which compares student achievement in Oklahoma's school districts against the performance of students in a group of 25 developed countries.

Free Market Friday: Told you so, part two

By Michael Carnuccio

In recent news, it has been revealed that yet another often-cited reason for implementing Obamacare's Medicaid expansion has proved to be untrue.

President Barack Obama and numerous proponents of some form of Obamacare's Medicaid expansion have repeatedly said that Medicaid must be expanded to address the problem of overuse of emergency rooms. Such promises claimed that if Medicaid is expanded, it would reduce use of emergency rooms. Recent studies have revealed this is not the case.

Russell D. Moore is President of the Southern Baptist Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission, the Southern Baptist Convention's official entity assigned to address social, moral, and ethical concerns. He is the keynote speaker for the Rose Day event this year at the Oklahoma state capitol.

Dr. Moore earned a B.S. in history and political science from the University of Southern Mississippi. He also received the M.Div. in biblical studies from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, and the Ph.D. in systematic theology from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. A widely-sought cultural commentator, Dr. Moore speaks frequently to issues of theology, culture, and public policy, having been quoted or published by many of the nation's leading news agencies and periodicals — including the

New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Washington Post, Chicago Tribune, USA

Today, and the Associated Press.

He blogs frequently at his “Moore to the Point” website, and is the author or editor of five books, including Tempted and Tried: Temptation and the Triumph of Christ, Adopted for Life: The Priority of Adoption for Christian Families and Churches, and The Kingdom of Christ: The New Evangelical Perspective. In addition to these, Dr. Moore is also the author of dozens of academic articles and essays within the field of systematic theology and Christian ethics. He also serves as Senior Editor of Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity.

An ordained Southern Baptist minister, Dr. Moore has served as a pastor for a number of Southern Baptist churches — most recently serving as preaching pastor at Highview Baptist Church from 2008-2012. More broadly, Dr. Moore has served his denomination at-large, as chairman and four-time member of the SBC Resolutions Committee, and as a regular columnist for Baptist

Press

Prior to entering ministry, Dr. Moore was an aide to U.S. Congressman Gene Taylor. A native Mississippian, he and his wife Maria are the parents of five boys.

Russell D. Moore is President of the Southern Baptist Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission, the Southern Baptist Convention's official entity assigned to address social, moral, and ethical concerns. He is the keynote speaker for the Rose Day event this year at the Oklahoma state capitol.

Dr. Moore earned a B.S. in history and political science from the University of Southern Mississippi. He also received the M.Div. in biblical studies from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, and the Ph.D. in systematic theology from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. A widely-sought cultural commentator, Dr. Moore speaks frequently to issues of theology, culture, and public policy, having been quoted or published by many of the nation's leading news agencies and periodicals — including the New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Washington Post, Chicago Tribune, USA Today, and the Associated Press.

He blogs frequently at his “Moore to the Point” website, and is the author or editor of five books, including Tempted and Tried: Temptation and the Triumph of Christ, Adopted for Life: The Priority of Adoption for Christian Families and Churches, and The Kingdom of Christ: The New Evangelical Perspective. In addition to these, Dr. Moore is also the author of dozens of academic articles and essays within the field of systematic theology and Christian ethics. He also serves as Senior Editor of Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity.

An ordained Southern Baptist minister, Dr. Moore has served as a pastor for a number of Southern Baptist churches — most recently serving as preaching pastor at Highview Baptist Church from 2008-2012. More broadly, Dr. Moore has served his denomination at-large, as chairman and four-time member of the SBC Resolutions Committee, and as a regular columnist for Baptist Press

Prior to entering ministry, Dr. Moore was an aide to U.S. Congressman Gene Taylor. A native Mississippian, he and his wife Maria are the parents of five boys.

In a column published last week in The Oklahoman, Lindsey M. Burke and Brittany Corona of The Heritage Foundation discussed the innovative Education Savings Account (ESA) program in Arizona, which allows parents to bank a portion of their child's per-pupil funding and use it to customize an education for their children.

ESAs are the first of their kind, giving parents full control over 90 percent of the funds that would have been spent on their child in their assigned public school. Once parents choose to withdraw a child from the public system, funds are deposited onto a restricted-use debit card; the parents are then able to direct spending to any education-related service or provider of choice.

Dear Friend,

It's December, which for the majority of us means it's time to decorate the Christmas tree, shop for holiday deals, and make memories with friends and family. But December in Oklahoma is a fundraising frenzy for politicians before the legislative session begins. Too many times our money gets us policies aimed at protecting "the next election rather than the next generation," as Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker put it at an OCPA dinner.

For 20 years, OCPA has stood for true north, and with 2014 on the horizon we need members to support the good of our communities, state, and country. As part of #GivingTuesday, please consider supporting OCPA today. As a policy organization, our high-talent, high-capacity individuals fight every day to advance liberty and freedom for you and your family.

"As rural towns in Oklahoma and all over the country continue to die statistically and wither economically, paternalistic government programs replace what used to be thriving private-sector communities characterized by personal responsibility," OCPA economist Wendy Warcholik observes in a recent article. "Where government thrives at the expense of economic growth, the people populating these communities suffer as they become addicted to government assistance. Without work to build skills and character, rural towns are breeding generational poverty and hopelessness."

Russell D. Moore is President of the Southern Baptist Ethics & Religious Liberty Commission, the Southern Baptist Convention's official entity assigned to address social, moral, and ethical concerns. He is the keynote speaker for the Rose Day event this year at the Oklahoma state capitol.

Dr. Moore earned a B.S. in history and political science from the University of Southern Mississippi. He also received the M.Div. in biblical studies from New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, and the Ph.D. in systematic theology from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. A widely-sought cultural commentator, Dr. Moore speaks frequently to issues of theology, culture, and public policy, having been quoted or published by many of the nation's leading news agencies and periodicals — including the New York Times, Wall Street Journal, Washington Post, Chicago Tribune, USA Today, and the Associated Press.

He blogs frequently at his “Moore to the Point” website, and is the author or editor of five books, including Tempted and Tried: Temptation and the Triumph of Christ, Adopted for Life: The Priority of Adoption for Christian Families and Churches, and The Kingdom of Christ: The New Evangelical Perspective. In addition to these, Dr. Moore is also the author of dozens of academic articles and essays within the field of systematic theology and Christian ethics. He also serves as Senior Editor of Touchstone: A Journal of Mere Christianity.

An ordained Southern Baptist minister, Dr. Moore has served as a pastor for a number of Southern Baptist churches — most recently serving as preaching pastor at Highview Baptist Church from 2008-2012. More broadly, Dr. Moore has served his denomination at-large, as chairman and four-time member of the SBC Resolutions Committee, and as a regular columnist for Baptist Press.

Prior to entering ministry, Dr. Moore was an aide to U.S. Congressman Gene Taylor. A native Mississippian, he and his wife Maria are the parents of five boys.

Thank you for the kind words; happy to help General Pruitt and thankful for his tremendous leadership!

Tomorrow is perfect for me, as I am pretty fluid aside from a 9:00-10:00am appointment. Unfortunately, I am traveling on Wednesday. What is a good time and location for the AG tomorrow? I'm cc'ing my colleague Cassandra, should you need assistance on our end with scheduling details.

Thank you.

Hello, Katie.

Thank you for the kind words; happy to help General Pruitt and thankful for his tremendous leadership!

Tomorrow is perfect for me, as I am pretty fluid aside from a 9:00-10:00am appointment. Unfortunately, I am traveling on Wednesday. What is a good time and location for the AG tomorrow? I'm cc'ing my colleague Cassandra, should you need assistance on our end with scheduling details.

Thank you.

Best,
Michael

Would you like to meet with the AG possibly tomorrow or Wednesday? I know starting this weekend he has a bunch of travel scheduled so I want to make sure we get this on the schedule.

Also, I have been putting together the video and I want to thank you again for participating.

You may have noticed that some Oklahomans are terribly concerned with this matter of increasing per-pupil spending in the public school system. And though I don't happen to share that concern, last Sunday in the state's largest newspaper, The Oklahoman, I offered some suggestions on how to do just that. For example, school choice - vouchers, tax credits, and education savings accounts - can incentivize parents to choose nonpublic schools, thus increasing per-pupil funding in the government's schools.

Free Market Friday: Asking for the moon

By Michael Carnuccio

Annually, state agencies are required to file their budget requests for the upcoming fiscal year. A review of requests reveals that if state agencies have their way, they might as well ask for policymakers to grant them the moon as well.

Based on a recent inquiry of budget requests submitted to the Office of Management and Enterprise Services, state agencies are requesting appropriation increases of more than $878 million. State agencies are also planning on federal funding increases of more than $277 million. To assist in this total requested increase of more than $1.1 billion, state agencies are seeking personnel additions of 2,139 full-time-equivalent employees.

Published each week, Free Market Friday is a syndicated column in The Journal Record written by OCPA president Michael Carnuccio.

Free Market Friday: Asking for the moon

By Michael Carnuccio

Annually, state agencies are required to file their budget requests for the upcoming fiscal year. A review of requests reveals that if state agencies have their way, they might as well ask for policymakers to grant them the moon as well.

Based on a recent inquiry of budget requests submitted to the Office of Management and Enterprise Services, state agencies are requesting appropriation increases of more than $878 million. State agencies are also planning on federal funding increases of more than $277 million. To assist in this total requested increase of more than $1.1 billion, state agencies are seeking personnel additions of 2,139 full-time-equivalent employees.

Local journalist and writer Mike Brake decided to spend some time in Oklahoma public-school classrooms. "What I found was scary," he writes.

Mr. Brake, who has recently authored a centennial history of Putnam City Schools, says he did encounter some excellent teachers. However, "in classroom after classroom, in subject after subject, in grade level after grade level, I encountered dreary, uninspired, boring instruction. Teachers sit at desks, often puttering on their computers, while students plod through head-down worksheets or checklists or multiple-choice tests. Or, they watch endless videos which may or may not have much to do with the subject at hand."

Hertz recently broke ground on its new corporate headquarters in Estero, Florida. Not huge news, perhaps. Just another frost belt company heading for the sun as Hertz abandons its longtime corporate headquarters in New Jersey. One reason for the move, obviously, is Florida's status as one of America's top business destinations, thanks to the absence of a personal income tax there.

Dear Friend of Freedom,

Your involvement with the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs through the years has enabled this organization to consistently produce bold policy ideas for this state we call home. By emphasizing the free market, limited government, and individual initiative, OCPA has proven that ideas can make a difference.

But the battle of ideas is never over. To quote a former U.S. president we all admire, "Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. We didn't pass it to our children in the bloodstream. It must be fought for, protected, and handed on for them to do the same."

With these thoughts in mind, I encourage you to learn more about OCPA's new action partner, OCPA Impact, which launched this month to do just that -- fight for freedom. As a 501(c)4 nonpartisan organization, OCPA Impact is already engaged in efforts to produce results on policy issues important to the members and supporters of OCPA. Guiding this essential organization is one of the freedom movement's brightest stars, Dave Bond, former Director of External Relations for OCPA. I encourage you to watch Dave's introductory remarks at www.OcpalImpact.com and contact him directly at 405-633-3475 or Dave@OcpalImpact.com to become involved, as I have.

All the best,

Michael Carnuccio

Dear Friend of Freedom,

Your involvement with the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs through the years has enabled this organization to consistently produce bold policy ideas for this state we call home. By emphasizing the free market, limited government, and individual initiative, OCPA has proven that ideas can make a difference.

But the battle of ideas is never over. To quote a former U.S. president we all admire, "Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. We didn't pass it to our children in the bloodstream. It must be fought for, protected, and handed on for them to do the same."

With these thoughts in mind, I encourage you to learn more about OCPA's new action partner, OCPA Impact, which launched this month to do just that -- fight for freedom. As a 501(c)4 nonpartisan organization, OCPA Impact is already engaged in efforts to produce results on policy issues important to the members and supporters of OCPA. Guiding this essential organization is one of the freedom movement's brightest stars, Dave Bond, former Director of External Relations for OCPA. I encourage you to watch Dave's introductory remarks at www.OcpalImpact.com and contact him directly at 405-633-3475 or Dave@OcpalImpact.com to become involved, as I have.

All the best,

Michael Carnuccio
President

As you make year-end gifts, we humbly ask that you keep OCPA in mind -- not just for the sake of the immediate work we do, but also because the personal and economic freedoms we defend on a daily basis preserve liberty for our most precious gifts, our children and grandchildren.

If you're so inclined, please consider making a tax-deductible contribution. Either way, our state and country are blessed by your philanthropy (literally "love of people!") and we want to say thank you.

"Freedom is never more than one generation away from extinction. We didn't pass it to our children in the bloodstream. It must be fought for, protected, and handed on for them to do the same, or one day we will spend our sunset years telling our children and our children's children what it was once like in the United States where men were free." - Ronald Reagan

In like manner, many of our friends on the left and in the hospital-industrial complex (which Avik Roy calls "the most heavily government-subsidized industry in the history of the world") believe the Medicaid expansion permitted under the president's rapidly crumbling health law would boost Oklahoma's economy.

Free Market Friday: A merry Christmas

By Michael Carnuccio

Every Christmas, I am reminded of the phone call that still haunts my yuletide caroling. Late Christmas morning, when I was in the fifth grade, I received a call from one of my classmates. For our purposes, we'll refer to him as James. We sat near each other in class, but didn't hang out much outside of school. The call was unique, but welcomed. After a minute of pleasantries, James asked me what all I got for Christmas. As any child would, the 11-year-old me wasted no time detailing the splendor under the tree. Then I asked James about his bounty. He brushed the question aside with a causal "oh, you know, the same stuff." He then asked me for another classmate's phone number and we ended the brief call.

Free Market Friday: A merry Christmas

By Michael Carnuccio

Every Christmas, I am reminded of the phone call that still haunts my yuletide caroling. Late Christmas morning, when I was in the fifth grade, I received a call from one of my classmates. For our purposes, we'll refer to him as James. We sat near each other in class, but didn't hang out much outside of school. The call was unique, but welcomed. After a minute of pleasantries, James asked me what all I got for Christmas. As any child would, the 11-year-old me wasted no time detailing the splendor under the tree. Then I asked James about his bounty. He brushed the question aside with a causal "oh, you know, the same stuff." He then asked me for another classmate's phone number and we ended the brief call.

One of my morning rituals is to grab a cup of coffee and read the Oklahoma Farm Report from Ron Hays. A recent edition had a very interesting snippet regarding Senator Tom Coburn and how the Renewable Fuel Standard is impacting producers in our state. Sen. Coburn, along with Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-CA), recently introduced the Corn Ethanol Mandate Elimination Act of 2013. It once again offers the perspective that the free market does it better. But don't simply take my word for it.

Producers vs. looters

By Michael Carnuccio

If you want more of something, incentivize it; if you want less of something, consequence it.

I will forever maintain that income tax is an immoral form of taxation, as it removes the first sweat from a man's brow. In Oklahoma, the very first 5.25 percent a person earns - keyword there - is confiscated by the government. Furthermore, the act is akin to the state telling hard workers that Big Brother knows better how to spend the fruits of their labor than they do. It's hard to find a more improper system for securing resources.

Despite great pressure from Oklahoma's organized left and from the hospital-industrial complex (which Avik Roy calls "the most heavily government-subsidized industry in the history of the world"), Gov. Mary Fallin has refused to go along with the Obamacare Medicaid expansion. As she said a year ago,

I have also decided that Oklahoma will not be participating in the Obama Administration's proposed expansion of Medicaid. Such an expansion would be unaffordable, costing the state of Oklahoma up to $475 million between now and 2020, with escalating annual expenses in subsequent years.

ObamaCare's Next Legal Challenge

The law says subsidies can only go through state-run exchanges.

By Scott Pruitt
Dec. 1, 2013 6:38 p.m. ET

Oklahoma City

As millions of Americans see their health-insurance premiums increase, have their coverage dropped as a result of the Affordable Care Act, and are unable to use the federal exchange, Oklahoma has sued the Obama administration. The Sooner State and several others are trying to stop the government from imposing tax penalties on certain states, businesses and individuals in defiance of the law. If these legal challenges are successful, the deficit spending associated with the new health-care law could be reduced by approximately $700 billion over the next decade.

While the president's health law is vast and extraordinarily complex, it is in one respect very simple. Subsidies are only to be made available, and tax penalties for not signing up for health insurance are only to be assessed, in states that create their own health-care exchange. The IRS, however, is attempting to enforce tax penalties in all states—including Oklahoma and the majority of the other states that have declined to create their own exchanges. Citizens and businesses in these states must use the federal exchange instead.

Bloomberg News

The distinction is critical, because under the terms of the law it is the availability of government insurance-premium subsidies that triggers the penalties against businesses if they fail to provide their employees with health insurance that the administration deems acceptable. This is a huge problem for the administration, which desperately needs to hand out tax credits and subsidies to the citizenry to quash the swelling backlash against the law.

When Oklahoma first raised this challenge in 2012, many experts predicted that the Sooner State would "go it alone" in pursuing this legal strategy. Not so. In Indiana, the state and 15 school districts have filed a lawsuit against the IRS, the agency that collects the penalties. Business owners (who, like the state of Oklahoma, would be subject to penalties as employers) and individuals in Virginia and the District of Columbia have done the same. In the D.C. lawsuit, the presiding judge recently rejected the Obama administration's attempt to have the case dismissed, as the judge in the Oklahoma case did in August.

Motions for summary judgment will soon be filed in federal district courts, and our court system will determine whether what the administration has called its "improvements" to the ACA—essentially by ignoring some of its provisions—are lawful.

They are not. Congress was exceedingly clear that tax credits and subsidies are available to people whose plans "were enrolled in through an exchange established by the State under section 1311 of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act." Even so, the administration argues that Congress intended for all Americans to receive subsidies regardless of whether they enrolled in health-care coverage through a state exchange or a federal exchange. But to arrive at that conclusion you have to ignore the plain language of the law. And nowhere in the law did Congress authorize the IRS to provide the credits or subsidies to those other than citizens who buy their insurance through an exchange established under section 1311 of the ACA—i.e., a state exchange.

Congress specified that credits and subsidies are only to be available in states that set up their own health-insurance exchange for a reason: It could not force states to set up exchanges. Instead, it had to entice them to do so. Oklahoma's lawsuit is about preserving the state's authority to make a policy decision granted to states under the Affordable Care Act. Our governor and policy makers in Oklahoma decided it wasn't in the state's best interest to create a health-care exchange. The IRS, at the administration's bidding, is attempting to take away the benefits of that choice by regulatory action. Such attempts to expand the power of the executive branch should be troubling to all Americans.

While much time has been devoted in Washington to the issue of "defunding" the Affordable Care Act, the success of these lawsuits would have much the same effect. Should the courts decide the IRS is exceeding its authority and isn't allowed to assess the employer penalties in states that have not established their own exchanges, the structure of the ACA will crumble—as one of the primary mechanisms the federal government has employed to force people into the health-insurance market evaporates.

As much as we wish the government were run like a business, the administration cannot "improve" upon legislation passed by Congress by rolling out updates in the manner that Silicon Valley does. That's not permitted under the Constitution: Congress passes laws, the president executes them. Period. That's why Oklahoma and other states are fighting to stop the administration's attempt to "fix" the health-care law through executive fiat.

Mr. Pruitt is the attorney general of Oklahoma.

Forward the cause:

In trying to win support for Obamacare, President Barack Obama lied to the American people at least 36 times. Those lies have impacted Oklahomans and serve as a lesson why Oklahoma should not adopt any form of Obamacare's Medicaid expansion, accept any Obamacare funds, or believe any of the other promises of Obamacare's proponents.

But even as President Obama continues "fundamentally transforming the United States of America," Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt is working to preserve the country given to us by America's founders. Pruitt and his team are keenly aware of the federal government's multiple attempts to go beyond its authority and to trample the rule of law. Thankfully, Pruitt has made it a top priority to block and fight this federal overreach.

As active parishioners at Saint Eugene Catholic Church in Oklahoma City, they often encountered families whose kids attended private schools - and they couldn't help but notice the resources available to those students. Meanwhile, their own children - Kevin, 14, Jacob, 13, Jocelyn, 11, and Judith, 9 - attended public schools in the Mid-Del school district. They reported mild bullying, and Jocelyn, in particular, fell behind academically. As dearly as they desired an alternative, the couple simply could not afford the cost of Catholic school tuition.

Dear Friend,

We've been fighting for the free market in Oklahoma for 20 years. I say we, because without you, our loyal supporter, OCPA could not provide solid research on policies that can transform the lives of citizens in our state. With Thanksgiving on our mind, the OCPA staff wants to say thank you for standing with us through two decades. We plan to kick off 20 more years of freedom in Oklahoma, starting with you. Please complete this brief survey before Tuesday, Dec. 3 for your chance to win a table for eight at our upcoming Citizenship Dinner. Past speakers include Rep. Paul Ryan, Gov. Sarah Palin, and most recently President George W. Bush. Stay tuned for our speaker announcement, but in the meantime click the link below to participate:

Together we can foster a society where Oklahomans can be healthier, happier and more prosperous.

Wishing you and your family a Happy Thanksgiving,

Karma Robinson

A few weeks ago OCPA research associate Tina Dzurisin appeared on Neil Cavuto's program on the Fox Business Network to discuss the slow-motion train wreck that is Obamacare. Last week on Cavuto's program, Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin did the same. Among other things, Gov. Fallin criticized the rollout of the exchanges, the premium hikes that many Americans are facing, and the oft-repeated promise that if you like your plan you can keep your plan. "That has just not proven to be true," she said.

One of the frustrations Americans have with politics is the abuse of power - at times corruption - that takes place in public office. In poll after poll, regardless of political affiliation or ideology, citizens trust government at alarmingly decreasing levels. Earlier this week Oklahomans saw these fears play out publicly.

At the same time that a former state representative was convicted of committing bribery while in office, a current Oklahoma bureaucrat was using taxpayer resources to advance an ideologically driven, personal political agenda.

Broken Arrow Schools Superintendent Jarod Mendenhall is calling for a vote of no confidence in state Superintendent Janet Barresi. He's also touting a new series of articles on Broken Arrow's website, "Pass or Fail? A Comprehensive Look at Our Students' Educational Future." To promote the articles, the district even printed and mailed 40,000 fliers to Broken Arrow patrons.

Despite spending more money on public education than many other developed countries, America's student-performance woes persist - in part because public schools often have no motivation to improve. But the increasing availability of educational options - charter schools, virtual schools, magnet schools, vouchers, homeschooling, and more - represents a positive development for students and for public schools themselves. Indeed, far from undermining public education, school choice provides an environment in which public schools can thrive.

That's the message of a recent article written either by (a) an OCPA researcher, or (b) an education professor at Langston University - a loyal Democrat who believes that "Barack Obama is one of the greatest presidents America has ever seen."

"We choose to go to the moon in this decade and do the other things, not because they are easy, but because they are hard, because that goal will serve to organize and measure the best of our energies and skills, because that challenge is one that we are willing to accept, one we are unwilling to postpone, and one which we intend to win."

On Sept. 12, 1962, President John Fitzgerald Kennedy delivered one of the history's great speeches at Rice University in Houston. Typical of JFK, the speech was bold and aggressive, challenging us to do more than was thought possible. It's a textbook display of executive leadership that moved this nation toward the mantle of history.

"We choose to go to the moon in this decade and do the other things, not because they are easy, but because they are hard, because that goal will serve to organize and measure the best of our energies and skills, because that challenge is one that we are willing to accept, one we are unwilling to postpone, and one which we intend to win."

On Sept. 12, 1962, President John Fitzgerald Kennedy delivered one of the history's great speeches at Rice University in Houston. Typical of JFK, the speech was bold and aggressive, challenging us to do more than was thought possible. It's a textbook display of executive leadership that moved this nation toward the mantle of history.

JFK Stamp

As we recall the 50th anniversary of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, some of those on the left might be a bit uncomfortable with certain aspects of JFK's legacy. Any fair examination of that legacy shows that he was hardly the big-government liberal they prefer to recall. Indeed, as Ira Stoll argues in his new book JFK, Conservative, Kennedy was devoted chiefly to anticommunism and to economic growth.

Kennedy was a stern anti-communist. And the most memorable phrase from his inaugural address - "Ask not what your country can do for you, ask what you can do for your country" - could have served as a theme for conservative welfare-reform policies of the 1990s. But he is best remembered among advocates of smaller, leaner government for his 1963 proposal to cut individual and corporate income taxes - "the most important step we could take to prevent a recession" he called it in the video posted below, a "creative tax cut" that was specifically designed to increase economic growth and create jobs.

Dear Friend,

By now I'm sure you have grown tired of reading about the latest crisis in health care. But headlines such as, "If Oklahoma wins lawsuit, 'the whole structure' of Obamacare 'starts to fall apart,' highlight the significant role Oklahoma plays in providing a lifeline to millions of Americans. As Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt once said, "I see OCPA at the forefront of continuing to put into the marketplace ideas that will help the policymakers understand that we can be the leader across the country..."

As Oklahomans continue to be impacted by government overreach, please consider supporting OCPA today. Every gift made before Dec. 20 will be matched by another generous contributor in Oklahoma, who like you and me believe freedom is worth the fight.

Cassandra,

Sorry for the delay in my email to reach out to you, the snow days hindered my ability to be in the office. I got your voicemail and Friday before 11am looks great. Does December 13th at 10 a.m. work?

Thanks!

Katie,

Michael Carnuccio will be available to film next week. We'd love to have your crew come to OCPA if it's convenient.

I will be in the office on Thursday and will call you then to find an appropriate date and time for filming. Thank you.

Best,

Attorney General Pruitt is planning to put together a short social media video to highlight his leadership in the Affordable Care Act lawsuit. The Attorney General appreciates your support of the lawsuit and wanted us to reach out to you for your participation in our video.

We were hoping you would participate by allowing us to film a brief segment (1 minute or less) of your thoughts on our leadership in the ACA lawsuit. Our goal is to produce, edit and distribute this video by mid-December. As such, we were hoping you would be available to be filmed during normal business hours on any date from December 5-11. OAG staff can come to your office or location of choice.

This participation would be greatly appreciated by Attorney General Pruitt and we look forward to hearing from you. Please contact me with any questions regarding this video.

Forward the cause:

In his State of the Union address this year, President Barack Obama praised Oklahoma for making it "a priority to educate our youngest children." The president's comments were not surprising: Oklahoma has a reputation for leading the nation in early-childhood education. One prominent Oklahoman, a key Obama fundraiser, has actually visited the White House at least 16 times to discuss early-childhood education, and has appeared on a platform with Secretary of Education Arne Duncan and Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius to promote the cause.

But as I said at the time ("President Obama's enthusiasm for Oklahoma preschool not universally shared"), Mr. Obama's praise of Oklahoma's preschool program was not warranted. And now comes more bad news for preschool advocates.

Over the past year, I've been part of the launch of a national, nonprofit organization. I spend part of every trip looking through pictures and videos of my family on my phone. It's that subtle reminder of why I do what I do. My family inspires me to achieve goals beyond my capabilities while reinforcing the importance of what I have committed to professionally.

This is why I am dedicated to free enterprise and the fight for liberty. My family, as well as yours, deserves better than the status quo. Our children should not be shackled by the suffocating debt our selfish government continues to destroy their future with.

Smith founded the Surgery Center of Oklahoma, which has garnered rave reviews and sympathetic news stories in the regional and national news media, including in Oklahoma's largest newspaper. He now regularly testifies before Congress.

In its third released and first top 40 track, Flaws, British alt-rock group Bastille wants us to accept our differences and challenges as uniqueness rather than setbacks inadequate of perfection. I submit the song as a good anthem for the GOP this pivotal election year.

Consider that it is vying to unseat Harry Reid's do-nothing leadership and recapture complete control of the legislative branch; however, the party has yet to rectify the split within its base. Two years ago, the most essential election in recent history saw Mitt Romney receive fewer votes in the general election in the battleground state of Ohio than had backed U.S. Sen. John McCain in that state four years earlier.

Dear Friend,

I hope you will consider making an end-of-year contribution to OCPA.

You can see our work through the years here, and we've already started working on behalf of Oklahomans for the upcoming year.

I'm asking you to join us now as we continue our fight against government intrusion like the Obamacare Medicaid expansion, and empower Oklahoma families with lower taxes and more school choice.

OCPA launched seven freedom centers from health care to agricultural, so please know you have a partner in OCPA who, like you, believes in free-market principles.

With only a few days remaining in 2013, please consider making a tax-deductible contribution. Thank you for your support! I look forward to updating you on our progress through the year.

Happy New Year!

Brandon Dutcher
Senior Vice President

PS: Every gift made through midnight Dec. 31 will be matched up to $20,000 by another generous contributor in Oklahoma. Visit joinocpa.org to donate today.

Free Market Friday: The night after Christmas

By Michael Carnuccio

'Twas the night after Christmas, and all giving had maxed. No investors were moving, they're afraid to get taxed!

Detailed plans had been made, for a tough twenty-fourteen; with a sad understanding, Obamacare will crush all dreams.

Politicians with promises, election strategies all mapped; but the state Equalization Board, said the revenue had napped.

When on the front porch step, arose such a clatter, a candidate with push cards, here to cure all that mattered.

Hi Sarah,

General Pruitt asked that I share his DC dates with you in hopes to set up a meeting. He will only be there 1 day in November and that is on Friday the 15th. If you are available this day we will definitely try to get something worked out. If we need to look at other dates later on we can do that as well.

Thank you,
Ashley

Ashley – I don't recall if we've met. I am a Washington DC attorney and have worked before with General Pruitt. I saw him last week during his testimony before the House Energy and Commerce Committee. I told him I had been asked to put a panel together for the upcoming American Legislative Exchange Council meeting in Washington. The panel subject is EPA overreach and particularly what it is up to on greenhouse gas performance standards for existing electric generating units. Since this is the same subject as his testimony, I asked him whether he or someone in his office would like to use this as a further platform to deliver his message. He said he was interested but that I should contact his office about the schedule. Randy Eminger at ACCCE told me you would be the right one to go through.

The panel will be between 11:00 and 12:15 on Friday December 6 here in DC. Either General Pruitt or someone on staff would be a great addition to the panel.

Ashley – great, thx. The audience will be members of ALEC – state legislators – as well as various industry people. General Pruitt told me that as a state legislator, he was a member of ALEC. As to the number of people they are expecting, I will check with the conference organizers and get back to you. I’ve spoken at ALEC before and there were more than a hundred people at my talk, but let me confirm. Thx again

Tom,

I appreciated the opportunity to chat with you during the recent AG meeting in Charleston and had meant to follow-up sooner. As I mentioned, Troutman Sanders is working with the Illinois Attorney General's office and other members of the Executive Committee in connection with a multi-state investigation concerning our client, Midland Credit Management and its parent company, Encore Capital Group. You may recall that I introduced you to Andrew Asch, who serves as Midland's lead counsel in connection with this matter. As you may know, Midland is one of the industry leaders in the debt buyer/ collection industry. Midland buys portfolios of accounts from established credit issuers, such as Chase, Bank of America, and Wells Fargo and partners with individuals as they repay their obligations and work toward financial recovery.

The multi-state effort is designed to permit Midland to address the collective concerns of the state attorneys general in a comprehensive manner. It is our hope that a multi-state action will result in consistency across the states as to how consumers are treated. We believe this effort is particularly timely, given the existing NAAG working group that is focused on the debt collection industry.

We are pleased that 39 states are participating in the multistate. To date those states are as follows:

Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin.

This effort is being led by Illinois Assistant Attorney General Jeff Feltman. His contact information is below:

Ashley – I don't recall if we've met. I am a Washington DC attorney and have worked before with General Pruitt. I saw him last week during his testimony before the House Energy and Commerce Committee. I told him I had been asked to put a panel together for the upcoming American Legislative Exchange Council meeting in Washington. Since this is the same subject as his testimony, I asked him whether he or someone in his office would like to use this as a further platform to deliver his message. He said he was interested but that I should contact his office about the schedule. Randy Eminger at ACCCE told me you would be the right one to go through.

The panel will be between 11:00 and 12:15 on Friday December 6 here in DC. Either General Pruitt or someone on staff would be a great addition to the panel.

Thx much for considering and please let me know at your earliest convenience.

Peter,

Thank you for the information. Unfortunately, we were unable to move General Pruitt's schedule around to make him available for this event. I also checked with two other people from our office who deal with these issues and they are both already committed to hearings that day. We greatly appreciate you thinking of us for this opportunity but will have to pass at this time.

Thank you again,
Ashley

Ashley – ALEC tells me as follows:

With workshops we typically expect around 100 or so folks. Most (maybe 70%) will be state legislators and the balance will be private sector members.

Hope that helps. thx

Subject: Per my discussion with General Pruitt...

Ashley – I don't recall if we've met. I am a Washington DC attorney and have worked before with General Pruitt. I saw him last week during his testimony before the House Energy and Commerce Committee. I told him I had been asked to put a panel together for the upcoming American Legislative Exchange Council meeting in Washington. The panel subject is EPA overreach and particularly what it is up to on greenhouse gas performance standards for existing electric generating units. Since this is the same subject as his testimony, I asked him whether he or someone in his office would like to use this as a further platform to deliver his message. He said he was interested but that I should contact his office about the schedule. Randy Eminger at ACCCE told me you would be the right one to go through.

The panel will be between 11:00 and 12:15 on Friday December 6 here in DC. Either General Pruitt or someone on staff would be a great addition to the panel.

Thx much for considering and please let me know at your earliest convenience.

Dear Friends,

After General Pruitt's successful January 2013 Summit on Federalism and the Future of Fossil Fuels in Oklahoma City, the Mason Law & Economics Center started making plans to launch an Initiative for Energy and the Environment. Richard Faulk, formerly of Gardere in Houston, joined us in July to lead this effort. You may recall that Rick participated in the OKC summit. Here's some more information about the Initiative. <http://www.masonlec.org/programs/initiative-energy-environment>

Rick and I are putting together the Initiative's first major event – a Public Policy Conference on “Energy and the Environment: Old Fuels, New Technologies, and Market Dynamics” to be held at George Mason University School of Law in Arlington, Virginia on Monday, April 7. A draft agenda is attached.

The target audience of this conference is the Washington public policy community plus senior staff from state AG offices.

All attendees from the OKC Summit are welcome to attend. There is no registration fee, but we do require that you register in advance. Please click here to register:

<http://www.masonlec.org/events/event/164-lec-public-policy-conference-energy-environment-old-fuels-new-technologies-market>

The Mason Attorneys General Education Program (AGEP) is subsidizing attendance of AGs and their senior staff. The AGEP reimburses transportation expenses and provides group meals and lodging. To date, 44 representatives from AGs offices are registered. We are limiting future registration to AGs and senior staff who attended the OKC Summit. AGs and senior staff must register by Friday, March 7. Please contact Colleen Cherico, Program Assistant AGEP, at ccherico@gmu.edu and 703.993.9964, with any questions.

If you are able to join us for the conference, you will be invited to a private dinner on Sunday, April 6 for speakers, AGs and their senior staff, and our friends from the OKC Summit.

Press coverage will be substantial. All sessions will be live webcast and then posted on our website for future viewing.

Finally, if you know of folks on the Hill or in government agencies who should be invited, please send us their contact information.

I look forward to seeing in April.

Thank you.

Best,

Henry

Aaron – when is the earliest you can get an article in? I can lobby for a later date with the magazine editor.

Remember that it is only 1000 -1500 words and can be cut and paste from past editorials and court filings, language that has already been approved in the past. I think the General's thoughts on this issue are clear enough and very important for readers! I am really hoping we can make this work!

John,

Good morning.

I'm sorry to write with bad news, but unfortunately we won't be able to meet your deadlines for submitting an article on regional haze/visibility. I'm sorry for the problems this may cause for your planning. I wanted to write as soon as I could with the hopes you can make alternate arrangements. We have a busy couple of weeks with legal filings on our Affordable Care Act and Dodd-Frank lawsuits so we will not have the time to produce an article on regional haze.

Please accept my apologies again for cancelling.

Aaron - It is fantastic that the General or you and your colleagues will contribute an article.

Below is more information on the publication. A few additional helpful hints follow. Attached is an article from a previous issue to give you a feeling for the tone and length. I am not sure whether we will have pictures for the authors or not. We would appreciate a draft by February 17 if possible, but could give a little more time (hopefully only a few days) if needed.

Please call me with any questions at 202-255-9531 on Friday or next week at 202-508-5711.

Mr. Eubanks -

At the suggestion of colleagues at Oklahoma Gas & Electric, I am writing regarding an opportunity for a state regulator, perhaps AG Pruitt, to contribute an article on regional haze for an environmental policy journal of the Air & Waste Management Association (the professional society of air quality specialists). Details follow:

- The theme of the May 2014 issue of the journal "EM" is visibility/regional haze.
- The articles are meant to be relatively short – e.g., 1000-1500 words. The article could include a few tables or graphics in addition.
- We are looking for draft submissions in mid-February. There would be cursory peer-review and opportunity to substantially revise later.
- There will be a broad variety of opinions and information from these committed authors:

- o EPA (OAQPS)
- o National Park Service
- o Hunton & Williams – industry attorney
- o Public Service New Mexico
- o National Parks Conservation Association

I will give you a call tomorrow to see if I can clarify any details.

DRAFT AGENDA -- LEC Public Policy Conference on Energy and the Environment April 7 2014 draft of 2-25-14.pdf

Dear Friends,

After General Pruitt's successful January 2013 Summit on Federalism and the Future of Fossil Fuels in Oklahoma City, the Mason Law & Economics Center started making plans to launch an Initiative for Energy and the Environment. Richard Faulk, formerly of Gardere in Houston, joined us in July to lead this effort. You may recall that Rick participated in the OKC summit. Here's some more information about the Initiative. <http://www.masonlec.org/programs/initiative-energy-environment>

Rick and I are putting together the Initiative's first major event – a Public Policy Conference on “Energy and the Environment: Old Fuels, New Technologies, and Market Dynamics” to be held at George Mason University School of Law in Arlington, Virginia on Monday, April 7. A draft agenda is attached.

The target audience of this conference is the Washington public policy community plus senior staff from state AG offices.

All attendees from the OKC Summit are welcome to attend. There is no registration fee, but we do require that you register in advance. Please click here to register:

<http://www.masonlec.org/events/event/164-lec-public-policy-conference-energy-environment-old-fuels-new-technologies-market>

The Mason Attorneys General Education Program (AGEP) is subsidizing attendance of AGs and their senior staff. The AGEP reimburses transportation expenses and provides group meals and lodging. To date, 44 representatives from AGs offices are registered. We are limiting future registration to AGs and senior staff who attended the OKC Summit. AGs and senior staff must register by Friday, March 7. Please contact Colleen Cherico, Program Assistant AGEP, at ccherico@gmu.edu and 703.993.9964, with any questions.

If you are able to join us for the conference, you will be invited to a private dinner on Sunday, April 6 for speakers, AGs and their senior staff, and our friends from the OKC Summit.

Press coverage will be substantial. All sessions will be live webcast and then posted on our website for future viewing.

Finally, if you know of folks on the Hill or in government agencies who should be invited, please send us their contact information.

I look forward to seeing in April.

Thank you.

Best,

Henry

All,

Attached please find a word document of OG&E's comments to RM 2013-12 which were filed January 21. It has come to our attention that the filed PDF version did not capture the revisions OG&E made in redline format. The attached word document should clearly indicate the changes.

We apologize for any confusion,

All,

Attached find drafts containing the Public Utility Division's proposed changes to the Chapter 40 and Chapter 65 Rules. Proposals highlighted in yellow are new (added) changes that the Public Utility Division has agreed to propose in light of suggestions stemming from the First and Second Technical Conferences. The sources of the highlighted changes are stated in the comment section beside each change. All non-highlighted changes, indicated by "strike-through" and "underline," are those that were originally proposed by the Public Utility Division and filed with the Notice of Proposed Rulemaking on November 21, 2013.

Comments may be received on Chapter 40 through February 3, 2014. Comments may be received on Chapter 65 through February 6, 2014. The Commission en banc will consider permanent adoption of proposed changes in both chapters at a public hearing on February 20, 2014, at 10 a.m., in Courtroom 301.

DRAFT AGENDA -- LEC Public Policy Conference on Energy and the Environment April 7 2014 draft of 2-25-14.pdf

Dear Friends,

After General Pruitt's successful January 2013 Summit on Federalism and the Future of Fossil Fuels in Oklahoma City, the Mason Law & Economics Center started making plans to launch an Initiative for Energy and the Environment. Richard Faulk, formerly of Gardere in Houston, joined us in July to lead this effort. You may recall that Rick participated in the OKC summit. Here's some more information about the Initiative. <http://www.masonlec.org/programs/initiative-energy-environment>

Rick and I are putting together the Initiative's first major event – a Public Policy Conference on “Energy and the Environment: Old Fuels, New Technologies, and Market Dynamics” to be held at George Mason University School of Law in Arlington, Virginia on Monday, April 7. A draft agenda is attached.

The target audience of this conference is the Washington public policy community plus senior staff from state AG offices.

All attendees from the OKC Summit are welcome to attend. There is no registration fee, but we do require that you register in advance. Please click here to register:

<http://www.masonlec.org/events/event/164-lec-public-policy-conference-energy-environment-old-fuels-new-technologies-market>

The Mason Attorneys General Education Program (AGEP) is subsidizing attendance of AGs and their senior staff. The AGEP reimburses transportation expenses and provides group meals and lodging. To date, 44 representatives from AGs offices are registered. We are limiting future registration to AGs and senior staff who attended the OKC Summit. AGs and senior staff must register by Friday, March 7. Please contact Colleen Cherico, Program Assistant AGEP, at ccherico@gmu.edu and 703.993.9964, with any questions.

If you are able to join us for the conference, you will be invited to a private dinner on Sunday, April 6 for speakers, AGs and their senior staff, and our friends from the OKC Summit.

Press coverage will be substantial. All sessions will be live webcast and then posted on our website for future viewing.

Finally, if you know of folks on the Hill or in government agencies who should be invited, please send us their contact information.

I look forward to seeing in April.

Thank you.

Best,

Henry

DRAFT AGENDA -- LEC Public Policy Conference on Energy and the Environment April 7 2014 draft of 2-25-14.pdf

Dear Friends,

After General Pruitt's successful January 2013 Summit on Federalism and the Future of Fossil Fuels in Oklahoma City, the Mason Law & Economics Center started making plans to launch an Initiative for Energy and the Environment. Richard Faulk, formerly of Gardere in Houston, joined us in July to lead this effort. You may recall that Rick participated in the OKC summit. Here's some more information about the Initiative. <http://www.masonlec.org/programs/initiative-energy-environment>

Rick and I are putting together the Initiative's first major event – a Public Policy Conference on “Energy and the Environment: Old Fuels, New Technologies, and Market Dynamics” to be held at George Mason University School of Law in Arlington, Virginia on Monday, April 7. A draft agenda is attached.

The target audience of this conference is the Washington public policy community plus senior staff from state AG offices.

All attendees from the OKC Summit are welcome to attend. There is no registration fee, but we do require that you register in advance. Please click here to register:

<http://www.masonlec.org/events/event/164-lec-public-policy-conference-energy-environment-old-fuels-new-technologies-market>

The Mason Attorneys General Education Program (AGEP) is subsidizing attendance of AGs and their senior staff. The AGEP reimburses transportation expenses and provides group meals and lodging. To date, 44 representatives from AGs offices are registered. We are limiting future registration to AGs and senior staff who attended the OKC Summit. AGs and senior staff must register by Friday, March 7. Please contact Colleen Cherico, Program Assistant AGEP, at ccherico@gmu.edu and 703.993.9964, with any questions.

If you are able to join us for the conference, you will be invited to a private dinner on Sunday, April 6 for speakers, AGs and their senior staff, and our friends from the OKC Summit.

Press coverage will be substantial. All sessions will be live webcast and then posted on our website for future viewing.

Finally, if you know of folks on the Hill or in government agencies who should be invited, please send us their contact information.

I look forward to seeing in April.

Thank you.

Best,

Henry

Attached is a Word version of the Chapter 5 rules we will discuss Wednesday afternoon at 1:30. We are scheduled to meet in Room 105.

I will be putting these rules on the white board so we can wordsmith them. These rules are identical to those used at the January 14 technical conference, with the exception of the words in yellow highlighting that I changed as a result of comments made at the tech conference.

Please forward these to whomever you think would benefit from having them prior to the 1:30 meeting.

Please look at the attached rules one more time, before I send them to Susan Conrad for distribution. The yellow highlighted language reflects changes since our tech conference yesterday. I have proofed them, but obviously didn't do a very good job the last time I proofed them so would appreciate more eyes on them.

Subject: RHR SIP approved; FIP withdrawn
Date: 02/10/2014 11:03 AM
Attachments: FINAL FINAL SIP Approval NR.DOC

General Pruitt/Melissa: I tried to reach you both this morning with the news that the EPA has finally approved the state SIP regarding our compliance plan for the regional haze rule and the MATS rule.

EPA also formally withdrew its federal implementation plan for regional haze.

Attached is our news release relating to the EPA's action today.

Scott, I wanted to tell you personally how much I appreciate your efforts to pave the way for a state solution to meeting the RHR challenge. Your lawsuit against EPA, and your encouragement of our efforts to settle this issue in a way that benefits the state, were instrumental in giving us the time and the opportunity to develop a revised state plan. I'm very pleased that the EPA recognized the revised state plan as more cost-effective and more beneficial to Oklahoma and to our customers than the FIP would have been.

Thanks again for your support. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to give me a call.

It was apparent at the tech conference this afternoon that the energy and telecom industry would benefit from a group work session regarding the proposed Chapter 5 rules of practice revisions. Please come join us next Wednesday, 2/5/14 at 1:30 in Courtroom B. We will put the rules on the wall and see if some agreed to language can be developed. The most current version of the rules can be found here:

<http://www.occeweb.com/rules/proprules/CH5PropRules011414.pdf>

Please feel free to pass this invitation along to others who might be interested in the proposed changes to the PUD fee assessment rules, assessment against unregulated entities and discovery rules

Scott, I wanted to tell you personally how much I appreciate your efforts to pave the way for a state solution to meeting the RHR challenge. Your lawsuit against EPA, and your encouragement of our efforts to settle this issue in a way that benefits the state, were instrumental in giving us the time and the opportunity to develop a revised state plan. I'm very pleased that the EPA recognized the revised state plan as more cost-effective and more beneficial to Oklahoma and to our customers than the FIP would have been.

Judge Grants Oklahoma Attorney General's Request to Intervene in Lawsuit between EPA and Environmental Group

Oklahoma now a part of the settlement proceedings, which could impact consumers and businesses

OKLAHOMA CITY – A federal judge in Denver granted Oklahoma Attorney General Scott

Pruitt's request to intervene in the settlement of a lawsuit between the EPA and an environmental group over emission standards in Oklahoma and other states.

The State of Oklahoma had not been given a chance to intervene in the settlement proceedings between Wild Earth Guardians and the EPA even though the agreement would have significant impact on Oklahoma consumers and businesses. The judge's decision means the Attorney General now can represent the interests of the state as a settlement is negotiated.

"This is good news for the State of Oklahoma. In many cases, these kinds of 'sue and settle' lawsuits on environmental regulations are settled without input from the states and industries affected by the agreements," General Pruitt said. "In this case, the lawsuit appears to be another example of a 'friendly lawsuit' between the EPA and an environmental group with the goal of imposing an anti-fossil fuel agenda. We're thankful the court granted our request to intervene so that we can protect the best interests of the citizens and State of Oklahoma."

Wild Earth Guardians' lawsuit asks the federal court to order the EPA to take action on Oklahoma and other states to enforce emission standards for nitrogen dioxide (NO₂). Wild Earth Guardians claims Oklahoma and other states have failed to submit state implementation plans to address air quality standards relating to NO₂ emissions. The environmental group is asking the court to force the EPA declare the states out of compliance and allow the EPA to implement federal implementation plans.

In January 2011, Oklahoma submitted monitoring data to the EPA that showed all areas of the state were in compliance with the federal nitrogen dioxide standard. Since 2011, Oklahoma has been preparing its state implementation plan, which demonstrates how the state will continue to maintain compliance with the NO₂ standard. The Oklahoma plan was made available for public comment in January.

"The Clean Air Act gives states the primary authority to design and implement plans to deal with these issues," General Pruitt said. "For an out-of-state environmental group and the EPA to use the courts to regulate through litigation is wrong and undermines the rule of law. The Attorney General's Office will continue to challenge the EPA and other federal agencies that seek to impose an agenda or policies beyond what's provided under the law."

Free Market Friday: Opportunity abounds

By Michael Carnuccio

You probably haven't heard the news, but over the last couple of weeks, Secretary of Finance and Revenue Preston Doerflinger and state Treasurer Ken Miller have said through reports that the state's tax collections have never been higher.

Total state tax collections have increased $1.5 billion since the recession. Given the state's current cash position, it is no surprise that lawmakers are considering a reasonable measure to lower the state's penalty on work, the personal income tax, to 4.75 percent starting in 2015, and to further systematically lower it to 4 percent by 2018. Such an idea expresses belief in and support for taxpayers, as well as an understanding of economics.

Free Market Friday: Opportunity abounds

By Michael Carnuccio

You probably haven't heard the news, but over the last couple of weeks, Secretary of Finance and Revenue Preston Doerflinger and state Treasurer Ken Miller have said through reports that the state's tax collections have never been higher.

Total state tax collections have increased $1.5 billion since the recession. Given the state's current cash position, it is no surprise that lawmakers are considering a reasonable measure to lower the state's penalty on work, the personal income tax, to 4.75 percent starting in 2015, and to further systematically lower it to 4 percent by 2018. Such an idea expresses belief in and support for taxpayers, as well as an understanding of economics.

We'd like to draw your attention to a special upcoming event, the Oklahoma Growth and Opportunity Summit, which will be held this Saturday, February 15, on the Lemley Campus of Tulsa Tech . The theme of the summit is "Making Oklahoma the Place to Prosper," and the program will highlight the need to increase economic freedom and opportunity for Oklahoma families and job-creators by adopting a more growth-friendly tax policy and reducing the burden of state government.

OCPA staffers will be playing significant roles in the program:

- Jonathan Small, OCPA vice president for policy, will outline the steps to be taken to turbocharge economic freedom in Oklahoma.
- Steve Anderson, OCPA research fellow and former budget director for Gov. Sam Brownback, will explain how Kansas is now on a path to zero state income tax.

Other panel participants include:

- Travis Brown, author of How Money Walks, who will discuss how, across America, capital is moving from high-tax locations to low-tax locations.
- Several of Oklahoma's federal and state officials, including Congressman Jim Bridenstine and Attorney General Scott Pruitt, who will emphasize the importance of economic freedom in our state and nation.

The Growth & Opportunity Summit is being hosted by organizations who often partner with us on various projects: Americans for Prosperity and OCPA Impact, along with the Tulsa 912 Project.

For tickets and to RSVP, please visit www.OKGrowthSummit.com. Individual tickets are only $12, and include lunch.

For more information, visit www.facebook.com/OKGrowthSummit, call 405.633.3475, or email info@ocpaimpact.com.

We are proud of the great research and ideas of our staff in seeking a better way for Oklahoma, and we are honored that the organizations conducting this event show such respect for the work of OCPA staffers by inviting them to participate in this program. We hope you can be a part of the event as well!

Kelly,

Here's a blog post from AG Pruitt. Please let me know if you need a photo or bio information. Also, links to our Twitter and FB profiles are in my email signature if there's an opportunity for you to use those.

Thanks,
AC

When Congress first debated religious liberty in the late 1700s, representatives expressed concern that the wording of the First Amendment could lead to the abolishment of religion altogether. James Madison, the principle author of the Bill of Rights, assured them that the First Amendment simply meant Congress should not “establish a religion” or in effect endorse a particular denomination at the expense of others, or “enforce the legal observation of it by law.” That it represented freedom to believe and freely exercise our faith unencumbered by government mandate or restraint.

What we see now, though, is a government that respects our freedom to exercise religion only so long as they agree with it. In the Hobby Lobby case, the government is enforcing a mandate that causes an employer to violate their lawful religious beliefs and practices. This goes directly against the ideals our Founding Fathers set in place to protect Americans from an overbearing and intrusive government.

Dr. Russell Moore noted in his recent visit to OCPA that religious liberty has been transformative for our country. It motivates us to achieve and overcome injustice and was at the heart of the abolitionist and civil rights movements.

I am proud to join David Green and his family in their fight to protect their ability to exercise their faith wherever, whenever and however they choose. The Hobby Lobby case is a reminder that our Constitution ensures religion is not a silent practice confined to four walls, but an opportunity to live out our faith in the public square.

Ashley,

The Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs was hoping to have Atty. Gen. Pruitt write a guest blog for us about religious liberty. It only needs to be 250-350 words and we'll publish it on our blog/social media. If at all possible, we would love to have the blog post by Tuesday next week.

Please let me know if he is interested!

FROM: Brandon Dutcher

As you may know, this week is National School Choice Week, and Gov. Mary Fallin has issued a proclamation declaring it to be School Choice Week in Oklahoma, too. In observation of School Choice Week, OCPA is holding a press conference on Tuesday, January 28, at 1:00 PM in the Blue Room of the state capitol building to release our annual Oklahoma school-choice survey. This public-opinion survey, conducted by Braun Research, Inc. and released by the Friedman Foundation for Educational Choice and OCPA, finds strong support among Oklahomans for charter schools, vouchers, tax credits, and education savings accounts.

There are several chairs in the Blue Room, and there's plenty of standing room in the back, so I urge you to join us at the press conference to show your support for school choice. Hope to see you there!

Free Market Friday: Parents want to choose

By Michael Carnuccio

At a state Capitol press conference last week, state Reps. Jason Nelson, R-Oklahoma City, and Tom Newell, R-Seminole, rolled out legislation that would create an education savings account program in Oklahoma. The time for this idea has come.

In a public-opinion survey to be released on Tuesday by the Friedman Foundation for Educational Choice (margin of error +/- 4.0 percentage points), registered Oklahoma voters were asked: "An education savings account -- often called an ESA -- allows parents to take their child out of a public district or charter school, and receive a payment into a government-authorized savings account with restricted but multiple uses. Parents can then use these funds to pay for private school tuition, virtual education programs, private tutoring, or saving for future college expenses. In general, do you favor or oppose this kind of savings account system?"

Good morning,

First, apologies for sending this from my Gmail account. We're having issues with our office e-mail system this morning.

I wanted to check on the Hobby Lobby event this week and whether 1) it's open to the media and 2) will you be sending any press releases (pre- or post-event), e-newsletter or social media hits.

We'd like to coordinate any press - and could provide a statement from the AG - as well as make sure we're using the correct handles and hashtags for social media.

Finally, do you have alternate plans in place in case of inclement weather?

Thanks for your time,
Aaron

Karma,

I hope you had a wonderful weekend.

I was wondering if there were any plans or conversations about what would happen if weather conditions did not permit.

Let me know if you have any thoughts on this for the Hobby Lobby breakfast Feb 5th.

Thanks!

If you could choose any type of education for your child -- traditional public school, charter, private, even home-school -- what would you select in order to obtain the best education for your child?

The Friedman Foundation for Educational Choice asked Oklahomans that very question last month. The answers may surprise you.

Dear Friend,

Knowing you care about the future of the next generation, I am writing to ask you to help Oklahoma children like Chloe, whose life changed for the better thanks to a school choice opportunity.

As a longtime education advocate, an OCPA trustee, and most importantly as a parent, I consider bettering Oklahoma's education system for all children my top priority. The best way to do that is by empowering parents to choose the educational method that best fits their individual child. And Oklahomans agree.

Survey results released this week show 56% of Oklahomans believe things in Oklahoma's K-12 education system have generally gotten off on the wrong track. The majority of Oklahomans say they want more options when it comes to education.

If, like me, you believe that a child's life should not be determined by socioeconomic status or geography, then please consider giving $56.00 today as part of National School Choice Week, and support OCPA's work toward expanding school choice options. Together we can provide a better way for all Oklahoma children to receive the education they deserve.

Bill Price
OCPA Trustee

P.S. To show your support during National School Choice Week, join us on Facebook and share Chloe's story.

Jonathan,

My name is Emily Shipley. I'm the new public policy coordinator for the AG as of October 2013. I do not believe we have had a chance to meet yet, so I wanted to preface with a quick intro!

I have a quick question for you about an education tech company and event General Pruitt was invited to next week in Tulsa. Melissa Houston said to drop OCPA a line to see if you all have ever heard of the company, and I think you were walking out the door as I called.

If you can give me a call at your earliest convenience, I would greatly appreciate it. My cell is 405-250-6095.

Thanks.

Sounds great- will send the request over to our communications department. Thank you for the information.

I was actually going to try and contact someone today to find out when Grover Norquist was coming to speak for you all. Any chance you would know or could give me some contact information on someone who would? General Pruitt heard he was coming when he was over there on Wednesday!

Thanks!

By Michael Carnuccio

As the legislative session began this week, those who insist they need more of our money were already putting the pressure on lawmakers and the governor's office. To her credit, in the State of the State address, Gov. Mary Fallin analyzed this effort superbly, saying:

"Those who like bigger government and higher taxes will say the sky is falling. Entrenched interest groups and even some agency heads may say the same thing. But guess what? It's not. The cuts we've proposed this year amount to 5 percent or less of agency (appropriated) budgets, and in total amount to about 1 percent of state spending."

Date: 02/05/2014 02:22 PM

We'd like to bring to your attention a special upcoming event in Tulsa highlighting the need to increase economic freedom and opportunity for Oklahoma families and job-creators by adopting a more growth-friendly tax policy and reducing the burden of state government.

The Oklahoma Growth & Opportunity Summit will be held Saturday, February 15, on the Lemley Campus of Tulsa Tech, with the theme, "Making Oklahoma the Place to Prosper," and OCPA staffers are playing significant roles in the program:

- Jonathan Small, OCPA vice president for policy, outlining the steps to be taken to turbocharge economic freedom in Oklahoma
- Steve Anderson, OCPA research fellow and former budget director for Gov. Sam Brownback,

explaining how Kansas is now on a path to zero state income tax

Other panel participants include:

- Travis Brown, author of How Money Walks, discussing how, across America, capital is moving from high-tax locations to low-tax locations
- Several of Oklahoma's federal and state officials, including Congressman Jim Bridenstine and Attorney General Scott Pruitt, emphasizing the importance of economic freedom in our state and nation

The Growth & Opportunity Summit is being hosted by organizations who often partner with us on various projects: Americans for Prosperity and OCPA Impact, along with the Tulsa 912 Project.

For tickets and to RSVP, please visit www.OKGrowthSummit.com. Individual tickets are only $12, and include lunch.

For more information, visit www.facebook.com/OKGrowthSummit, call 405.633.3475 or email info@ocpaimpact.com.

We are proud of our staff for their great research and ideas seeking a better way for Oklahoma, and we are honored that the organizations conducting this event respect their work enough to invite them to participate in the program. We hope you can be a part of the event as well!

Subject: Oklahoma Growth & Opportunity Summit
Date: 02/05/2014 02:21 PM

We'd like to bring to your attention a special upcoming event in Tulsa highlighting the need to increase economic freedom and opportunity for Oklahoma families and job-creators by adopting a more growth-friendly tax policy and reducing the burden of state government.

The Oklahoma Growth & Opportunity Summit will be held Saturday, February 15, on the Lemley Campus of Tulsa Tech, with the theme, "Making Oklahoma the Place to Prosper," and OCPA staffers are playing significant roles in the program:

- Jonathan Small, OCPA vice president for policy, outlining the steps to be taken to turbocharge economic freedom in Oklahoma
- Steve Anderson, OCPA research fellow and former budget director for Gov. Sam Brownback,

explaining how Kansas is now on a path to zero state income tax

Other panel participants include:

- Travis Brown, author of How Money Walks, discussing how, across America, capital is moving from high-tax locations to low-tax locations
- Several of Oklahoma's federal and state officials, including Congressman Jim Bridenstine and Attorney General Scott Pruitt, emphasizing the importance of economic freedom in our state and nation

The Growth & Opportunity Summit is being hosted by organizations who often partner with us on various projects: Americans for Prosperity and OCPA Impact, along with the Tulsa 912 Project.

For tickets and to RSVP, please visit www.OKGrowthSummit.com. Individual tickets are only $12, and include lunch.

For more information, visit www.facebook.com/OKGrowthSummit, call 405.633.3475 or email info@ocpaimpact.com.

Subject: World editorial on AG cost saving effort
Date: 02/18/2014 03:09 PM

Good afternoon.

In case you missed it, I wanted to draw your attention to an editorial from the World that lauded the effort of the AG's Office to get agencies to spend less money on private attorneys and utilize the AG staff more.

Thought you guys would be interested. Let me know if you need any more information.

Thanks,
AC

Editorial: Legal services

By World's Editorials Writers | Posted: Sunday, February 16, 2014 12:00 am

The Oklahoma attorney general's office is not the largest law firm in the state but it ought to be the largest law firm for the state.

Most state agencies once relied exclusively on the AG's staff for legal advice and representation. But over the years, state agencies started "lawyering up" - receiving the statutory green light to hire their own counsel.

By Attorney General Drew Edmondson's last term, ending in 2010, agencies had about 250 lawyers, and Edmondson unsuccessfully pushed to consolidate legal services under the AG's office, which is what at least a dozen states do.

At the same time, Rep. Ken Miller, now the state treasurer, also ran into a hornets' nest affixed to a brick wall when he tried to pass a bill equalizing agency attorneys' salaries with those of assistant attorney generals. Agencies protected their turf.

Since taking office in 2011, Attorney General Scott Pruitt has made it a priority to persuade more agencies to use AG staff and to reduce money spent on private attorney contracts by increasing the number of state agencies that the AG represents. In fiscal year 2011, the amount spent on private attorney contracts totaled $11.78 million. Since then, that number has dropped impressively by more than $4.25 million.

In recent tough budget years, the Legislature began the process of forced prioritization that helped direct investment into areas of greatest return. That must continue. There will be $170 million less money to spend this coming year. Core services such as common education are gasping for air.

"There's still a great opportunity to eliminate inefficiency in state government," Miller recently said. "Unfortunately, some of the biggest cost-saving opportunities lie in areas extremely resistant to change and backed by forces dedicated to maintaining the status quo."

Two such opportunities are consolidation of the boards and administrations of the state's seven pension system and of state legal services with the AG's office.

"Both present great opportunities for cost savings that could be better directed into other core areas. But this will require political courage. Anyone looking for an excuse for inaction will always find one," Miller said.

Pruitt continues to push for greater utilization of his staff. The AG has 14 new contracts with agencies. The hourly rate ranges from $75 to $85 an hour. Private counsel had ranged from $125-$300 an hour. In all, the unit has 62 contracts with agencies. The staff also provides services at no charge to 28 boards and commissions.

Yet, issues remain. If an agency wants outside legal services it must go through a process. If the request is below $20,000, the AG simply records the request but does not have the authority to approve or disapprove. The AG has authority to approve or disapprove outside counsel requests above $20,000. That system is being abused with many agencies, boards, etc., purposely holding requests below $20,000.

Sometimes outside counsel is necessary, Pruitt says, when certain expertise is required as was the case in the state's water lawsuit. But it makes little sense that some agencies are turning down the AG's offer to perform work at $75 an hour and instead seeking outside counsel for $200-plus an hour, even when no specific subject matter expertise is called for.

The AG's staff once represented almost all of state government, which it could do again. But to do so the Legislature would need to buck up and make powerful agencies an offer they can't refuse.

DRAFT AGENDA -- LEC Public Policy Conference on Energy and the Environment April 7 2014 draft of 2-25-14.pdf

Dear Friends,

After General Pruitt's successful January 2013 Summit on Federalism and the Future of Fossil Fuels in Oklahoma City, the Mason Law & Economics Center started making plans to launch an Initiative for Energy and the Environment. Richard Faulk, formerly of Gardere in Houston, joined us in July to lead this effort. You may recall that Rick participated in the OKC summit. Here's some more information about the Initiative. <http://www.masonlec.org/programs/initiative-energy-environment>

Rick and I are putting together the Initiative's first major event – a Public Policy Conference on “Energy and the Environment: Old Fuels, New Technologies, and Market Dynamics” to be held at George Mason University School of Law in Arlington, Virginia on Monday, April 7. A draft agenda is attached.

The target audience of this conference is the Washington public policy community plus senior staff from state AG offices.

All attendees from the OKC Summit are welcome to attend. There is no registration fee, but we do require that you register in advance. Please click here to register:

<http://www.masonlec.org/events/event/164-lec-public-policy-conference-energy-environment-old-fuels-new-technologies-market>

The Mason Attorneys General Education Program (AGEP) is subsidizing attendance of AGs and their senior staff. The AGEP reimburses transportation expenses and provides group meals and lodging. To date, 44 representatives from AGs offices are registered. We are limiting future registration to AGs and senior staff who attended the OKC Summit. AGs and senior staff must register by Friday, March 7. Please contact Colleen Cherico, Program Assistant AGEP, at ccherico@gmu.edu and 703.993.9964, with any questions.

If you are able to join us for the conference, you will be invited to a private dinner on Sunday, April 6 for speakers, AGs and their senior staff, and our friends from the OKC Summit.

Press coverage will be substantial. All sessions will be live webcast and then posted on our website for future viewing.

Finally, if you know of folks on the Hill or in government agencies who should be invited, please send us their contact information.

I look forward to seeing in April.

Thank you.

Best,

Henry
