call if it was before or after the restraint. He said he could not remember if any restraint was done because resident kicked the wall. Mr. [redacted] reported normally the child would be restrained again as kicking the wall indicated he was not calm and was still a threat.

Mr. [redacted] at first said Mr. A, staff member, only comes in to make dinner and clean the house. When asking about him and Mr. [redacted] were unable to understand Ca when he complained of his arms being hurt, Mr. [redacted] then stated Mr. A does come on the day he works from 7AM-10PM.

Mr. [redacted] was asked about preferred de-escalation technique for both Ca and A and he did not understand what it meant. He said he was never given a copy of resident’s service plan or admission assessment to know what they prefer to do to avoid being restrained. He reported this is the first time hearing the word preferred de-escalation techniques. Mr. [redacted] said as he spends time with the residents, he learns more about each of their personality and characteristic. He reported drawing his own conclusion what works for the kids and what he could do to keep them calm.

MrI was interviewed at the facility on 11/18/13.

MrI said he has lived here for 2 years. MrI reported he liked it here OK but he knows a lot of other kids don’t. He reported there are a lot of fighting among the kids and the way staff restrain the kids is the biggest problem.

MrI stated he has been restrained several times since his placement but it has been a while. He said staff pretty much leaves him alone as they know he won’t take abuse from staff.

MrI stated most of the kids here don’t like [redacted] because of the way he restrained them. He reported Allyn can be aggressive and the way he restrains the kids is improper and it causes pain to them. MrI stated he would grab the kids any way he can and when he put them in a restraint, he tends to do it rough. He reported pretty much every single kid got restrained by [redacted] complained of the same thing.

MrI reported he was in the van and witnessed the incident when C was restrained by both Mr. [redacted] and Mr. [redacted]. He reported sitting on the first row of the van and did not see how Mr. [redacted] grabbed a hold of C. However, he was aware of the incident when Mr. [redacted] ordered the rest of the kids off the bus during the restraint. He said he refused to leave and staff (Mr. [redacted] and Mr. [redacted]) let him stay behind. MrI stated he observed Mr. [redacted] put C on the bench facing down but turned him over when C tried to kick Mr. [redacted]. He reported Mr. [redacted] had his body leaning over C and held his arms against the seat during the restraint. He reported Mr. [redacted] held C for about 3 minutes when Mr. [redacted] got on the van and he asked Mr. [redacted] to assist him with the restraint. MrI reported C tried to kick staffs with his leg and Mr. [redacted] pushed his knee against C’s knee to keep him from kicking.

He said C’s legs were half way down the floor while his body was lying on the bench. He reported Mr. [redacted] had his hand pushed up against C’s chin to keep him from moving his head while hold his other hand with his hand. He reported hearing C screaming in Spanish that they were hurting his knee; however, neither staff let C go and he does not know if they did not understand what C was saying because neither staff speaks Spanish.

MrI reported at one point he told both staff members that they needed to let C go because he seemed to be hurting. He said C was held for another 3 minutes before he was let go by both staff members. He said both staffs did tell C to calm down before they released the restraint. C
