

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Matt Wolf <m.w.wolf@gmail.com>

Date: Wed, Oct 4, 2017 at 6:36 AM

Subject: Suggested Outline

To: Jeff Callaway <jeff.callaway@canaccord.com>

Cc: Cam Davies <daviesyycse@gmail.com>, Randy Kerr <r.kerr@telus.net>

I don't think you need a script to read, but below is the rough outline of what I'd suggest.

Tweak as you see fit.

Paul will introduce you, and make the point that he's known you since the very beginning, and that he sees more and more Wildrosers supporting Jason,

MW

I guess it's obvious by my being here that my leadership campaign will not be going forward.

I'm proud of what we accomplished in the past 2 months. I've travelled the province, talking to countless Albertans, etc.

I first got into the race to ensure that the grassroots philosophy that started Wildrose lived on in the new United Conservative Party,

Our new party can't be out of touch with its members and everyday Albertans. We've seen how that worked out before.

But this movement is bigger than any one man. This is about doing what's right for Albertans.

There is obviously one candidate in this race that I know very well: I served as Wildrose president during Brian Jean's period as leader. I see many recognizable faces here today that also served under Brian's leadership, but are noticeably supporting someone else today.

But I also got to know the other candidates better during the past 2 months.

And after having listened to Jason, having watched him in action, I'm confident that he understands the need to let the members decide the direction of their party.

<https://mail.google.com/mail/u/0?ik=4bec5d8a18&view=pt&search=all&permmsgid=msg-f%3A1628038363207421230&siml=msg-f%3A16280383632...> 1/2

14/03/2019

Gmail - Fwd: Suggested Outline

While some other candidates are dictating policy, Jason recognizes that platform development must come from the members. Jason listens to members. He listens to Albertans.

The very fact that we have a United Conservative Party today is testament to the fact that Jason understands that the members are in the driver's seat. We've seen how backroom deals work – and fail.

And after having listened to Jason, having watched him in action, I'm confident that he understands the need to let the members decide the direction of their party.

s://mail.google.com/mail/u/0?ik=4bec5d8a18&view=pt&search=all&permmsgid=msg-f%3A1628038363207421230&siml=msg-f%3A16280383632...

3/2019

Gmail - Fwd: Suggested Outline

While some other candidates are dictating policy, Jason recognizes that platform development must come from the members. Jason listens to members. He listens to Albertans.

The very fact that we have a United Conservative Party today is testament to the fact that Jason understands that the members are in the driver's seat. We've seen how backroom deals work – and fail.

We also need to ensure that the next leader has the experience to walk into the Premier's office on day one and get to work fixing this terrible mess our province is in.

I think it's clear that Jason – with his decades of experience, including serving as Stephen Harper's most trusted and able minister – has what it takes to run a government.

This is a critical choice the members are making in just a few weeks: They're not just choosing the first UCP leader – it's quite likely that they're picking the next Premier of Alberta.

We need a leader with the experience and determination to get our province on the right track,

We need a leader that is consistent in his conservative convictions, A leader that doesn't wildly change his positions depending on which way the wind is blowing.

We need a leader with the fortitude to withstand the onslaught from the NDP and its special interest friends.

I'm confident that leader is Jason Kenney.