Q33. As you may know, Congress recently held a hearing with the CEO of the company that produces Truvada for PrEP. Some lawmakers and HIV activists have accused the company of hindering access to the drug by steadily raising its price.

Truvada costs $1,780 per month in the U.S., more than double what the company charged when the drug debuted in 2004. Outside the U.S., the generic of the drug costs significantly less.

Do you agree or disagree that Congress should be doing more to hold drug companies accountable to make access to drugs like Truvada more affordable and accessible?
