Subject: GateHouse Media inquiry

Dear Mr. Scott,

I am a reporter for GateHouse Media. We are working on a multi-part investigative series into NCAA athletes who transfer schools after being found responsible for sexual misconduct.

It is our understanding that Coach Anderson brought Darreon Jackson and Kirk Merritt onto his football team after Jackson was found responsible for sexual misconduct at Boise State and Merritt was convicted of indecent exposure at Texas A&M.

Darreon Jackson chose to leave Boise State although he was eligible to return and enrolled at Coffeyville (Kan.) Community College, where he played the 2016 football season before transferring to Arkansas State.

Kirk Merritt pleaded 'no contest' to indecent exposure and was not expelled from Texas A&M University. He transferred to Arkansas State from East Mississippi Community College, where he played the 2017 season.

We also understand Coach Anderson recruited Kendall Sanders shortly after he was dismissed from Texas and tried and acquitted for a gang-rape. The transfers happened in 2016, 2017 and 2018.

Kendall Sanders was found 'not guilty' of any charges in a court of law in Texas. He was dismissed from the Texas football team in 2014 prior to that verdict, but did not sign with Arkansas State until 2016 (two years later).

We will be mentioning that in our series, and as such we are reaching out to Arkansas State for comment. We would like to request interviews with Coach Anderson, Jackson and Merritt. We also are requesting answers to the following questions by 2 p.m. ET Monday, Nov. 11:

This is a collective vetting process by campus leadership, thus we are responding to your request with a unified response.

- Why does Coach Anderson exhibit a pattern of recruiting players from top schools shortly after they've been accused of and disciplined for sexual assault?

Darreon Jackson and Kirk Merritt were not accused or disciplined for sexual assault.

Coach Anderson does not exhibit such a pattern. Any potential student-athlete with a history of alleged or confirmed sexual misconduct who displays interest in attending Arkansas State University is first highly vetted and approved or unapproved collectively by campus leadership, who then communicates to Coach Anderson if it is permissible is to recruit that student-athlete. Every case is unique, and thus evaluated on a case-by-case basis to determine if a second chance is warranted.

When we learn of potential student-athletes who have accusations of sexual misconduct in their past, the vast majority are not recruited by Coach Anderson in consultation with campus leadership. Additionally, he recruits exponentially more potential student-athletes with an impeccable record compared to those with alleged or confirmed misconduct of any type in their background.

- Was Arkansas State aware of Darreon Jackson's past disciplinary action at the time of his transfer? Merritt's? Sanders'?

Yes, in all three instances. They have all three earned their bachelor's degree and have lived up to the expectations we hold all our student-athletes to.

If not:

- What steps did Arkansas State take to check Jackson's background? Merritt's? Sanders'?

If so:

- What factors were taken into consideration in accepting them to campus?

In all three instances, all information available was highly vetted by Athletics Department and University administrative officials and legal counsel before Coach Anderson was given permission to recruit them. Multiple interviews were conducted when vetting each individual.

- What made Arkansas State confident they wouldn't reoffend?

See answer to the question directly above this one.

- What specific measures were taken to ensure student safety?

There are clear expectations set for all students that sexual misconduct will not be tolerated.

Thank you and let me know if you have any questions.

Best,

Kenny Jacoby

It's common for student athletes to change schools for a variety of reasons. With each transfer student athlete we accept, we review their reasons for leaving their previous institutions. We talk to their former coaches or members of our network who know them before making decisions. Hello Kenny,

Below is a statement from Coach Bobeck in response to your inquiry. Please let me know if you have any further questions.

Thanks,

Adrienne

Alex Figueroa was recruited two years after he was expelled from Miami University. The decision to bring him to the University of Central Oklahoma was made after I examined the court records regarding the case in question from Florida. I found that the Florida case was closed without prosecution in early 2016 after Alex successfully completed a deferred prosecution plan approved by the Miami-Dade County court. Additionally, Alex graduated Garden City Community College in Kansas with an associate's degree before coming to UCO. We followed all of our review procedures and determined he was not a threat to the campus community. All student athletes at UCO are required to abide by a strict set of standards set forth by the university and the athletic department that require a high level of integrity in their personal and academic conduct. While at UCO he was an exemplary student and team member.

Mr. Giovanetti, do you have an update for me?

In the spring of 2018, Texas Tech Track and Field recruited Derrius Rodgers as a potential transfer from Illinois State University. Per Texas Tech athletics department policy, the Texas Tech coaching staff conducted a social media search and reviewed information received from Illinois State, including his academic transcript. Neither the social media findings nor the Illinois State transcript identified anything problematic that would impact his being an active participant on the team. In addition, Illinois State completed a transfer tracer form in which they indicated that the student-athlete was never disqualified or suspended for disciplinary reasons.

During the recruiting process, a Texas Tech assistant coach had a conversation with Rodgers' previous sprint coach at Illinois State and was told that, while there had been problems within the team, they were "handled internally." There was no indication of a Title IX complaint or adjudication against Rodgers. Prior to him enrolling at Texas Tech, he was an active participant with the Illinois State team and continued to be enrolled as a student until he later declared his intent to transfer.

Rodgers enrolled at Texas Tech in the fall of 2018 and is a current student-athlete in the men's track and field program.

Here is our statement that answers all of your written questions below:

We are unaware of any violations of university policies at previous institutions involving this student-athlete. He did not transfer to UNT directly from Purdue. He came to UNT from Independence Community College. The academic records and official transcripts from his previous institutions do not indicate any discipline or dismissal for disciplinary reasons. In addition, the NCAA transfer tracer form specifically indicated he was in good academic standing at Purdue and was not dismissed from the institution for disciplinary reasons.

Kenny,

Please see below in red our response to your questions.

Eric,

We are writing again to request comment from UNT. In addition to Faison, our investigation found Coach Littrell recruited Darius Turner after he was found responsible for sexual harassment at Arizona Western.

We will be highlighting these two cases in our story. As such, we are again requesting an interview with Coach Littrell and answers to the following questions:

- What steps did UNT take to check Turner's background?
- Was UNT aware of the past disciplinary action taken against Turner before admitting him to campus?
- If so: What factors were taken into consideration in admitting him to campus? What specific measures were taken to ensure student safety?
- Why was Turner released from the team?

We are unaware of any violations of university policies at a previous institution involving this student-athlete. He left the UNT football program in January of 2017 and is no longer part of the campus community.

UNT recruiting policies and procedures are developed to provide oversight in our recruiting process that reflect our commitment to compliance with NCAA and institutional rules. We review these policies annually and have made modifications over the past two years. We have attached some of the forms we use to collect information. With the creation of the NCAA portal, the questions that potential transfers answer have been standardized. It is important to note, some student records are protected under FERPA, the federal student record privacy law, and are not shared between institutions without written consent from the student. Absent any evidence of misconduct, those records normally would not be requested. Any time we receive information of misconduct, it is reviewed in coordination with campus resources.

My name is Shawn Lutz and I am the head football coach at Slippery Rock University. I declare that I have first-hand knowledge of the recruitment and transfer of Eric Glover-Williams from The Ohio State University to Slippery Rock University, and that the following responses represents my recollection of the manner of recruitment of Eric Glover-Williams.

STORY CONTEXT PRESENTED BY GATEHOUSE MEDIA:

It is GateHouse Media's understanding that Slippery Rock brought Eric Glover-Williams onto its football team after he was found responsible for rape at Ohio State.

QUESTION: Was Slippery Rock aware of Eric Glover-Williams's past disciplinary action at the time of his transfer?

NO. Slippery Rock University was not aware of any allegations that Eric Glover-Williams was found responsible for rape at Ohio State.

YES. SRU was aware that there was an issue that was dealt with internally by student conduct at OSU. SRU was also aware of a violation of team rules issue that was dealt with by the coaching staff at OSU.

"The first step in our process before accepting a transfer student-athlete is for our coaching staff to speak directly with the staff at the transfer university. Our coaching staff spoke directly with members of the OSU staff. No issues of sexual misconduct or violent misconduct were disclosed. We were informed by the OSU staff during our evaluation that there was an issue that was dealt with internally by the OSU Student Conduct Office. When we asked for more information, we were told the incident in question was not a legal issue and that Eric was never charged or held responsible for any wrongdoing. No additional information was provided. OSU staff also informed SRU that Eric was allowed to remain a student at OSU and a member of the OSU football team as the issue was resolved. It was our understanding that Eric would not have been afforded those privileges if he was charged with any form of serious misconduct and he played in every game in 2016 for OSU. Eric was presented by the coaches as a positive addition to our program."

QUESTION: If not, what steps did Slippery Rock take to check Eric Glover-Williams' background?

"Step One: Extensive conversations with staff at the transfer university. See above.

Step Two: Our second step in the process is to conduct an extensive Internet and Social Media search for any information relating to the student-athlete. That search returned no information of any criminal activity or any sort of misconduct as it relates to Eric. To this day, an online search still reveals no information that would imply he was involved in any type of serious misconduct.

Step Three: Our third step is to meet with the student and their family. We met with Eric and his family to discuss his departure from Ohio State and his desire to join our football program.

After meeting with the family, hearing from the OSU staff that he was a ‘good kid that would be a good addition to our program’ and doing online research, we felt comfortable with Eric and recommended that he apply for admission.”

QUESTION: What factors were taken into consideration in accepting him to campus?

“Step Four in the process is a review of the student application. There were no flags presented by OSU and no criminal activity reported. Eric was admitted to the University via transfer. No issues were discovered during his admission process that would prohibit Eric from being enrolled at SRU and nothing was discovered by our coaching staff or administration that would prohibit him from joining our football team.”

QUESTION: What specific measures were taken to ensure student safety?

“All football student-athletes sign a code of conduct and go through a mandatory sexual assault training and awareness program. Eric has completed that each year he has been here and we have seen no issues with him as it relates to any University disciplinary conduct. Since he has been here, Eric has been a model student-athlete that has maintained above a 2.8 GPA and is on track to graduate this December.”

STATEMENT

Due to federal and state student privacy laws, Tennessee State University is prohibited from disclosing individual student educational record information to third parties. For this reason, the University cannot provide the information requested in your email. However, please know that TSU takes seriously any threat to the safety of the campus community. Students, including student athletes, transfer to TSU for a variety of reasons. A student's transfer to TSU does not necessarily mean that TSU recruited the student to attend TSU. In addition, the University is not always made aware of matters in which a student may have been involved at a previous institution. TSU does not conduct criminal background checks on its general student body; nor does it treat its student athletes differently with respect to background checks than its general student body.

Also, as a general matter, in instances when TSU receives or discovers information about a prospective student, the institution evaluates the risks associated with an individual's presence on campus. In all instances, the institution's paramount interest rests with ensuring the safety of its students and campus community. Additionally, if a currently enrolled student engages in criminal activity or other wrongdoing, the student is subject to the institution's disciplinary process, which may result in suspension or expulsion from the institution.

Kenny,

Here is Indiana State University's response to your question:

"Except for an assistant football coach, we know of nobody at Indiana State University who was aware of Jordan Goldenberg's student conduct background when he was admitted to the institution. The assistant football coach received a suspension. We are including the coach's suspension letter, which is a public document, in this reply.

"As indicated previously, after the athlete was dismissed from the football team more than three years ago, ISU began asking all applicants for admission whether they have been expelled or suspended from an institution of higher education. This also followed national trends in assessing prior misconduct. If an applicant has been expelled or suspended, a personal statement explaining why is required. The information is evaluated to make a determination about admission. Every coach in ISU's athletic department who recruits prospective student-athletes vets those students carefully."

See attachment for suspension letter.

Thanks.

Dear Gary:

This letter shall serve as a written reprimand for your failure to provide contemporaneous information during our conversation on August 25, 2016 concerning Jordan Goldenberg. On August 18, 2016, you allowed a student manager to use your assigned parking permit contrary to university policy. Together, these two occurrences suggest a pattern of poor decision-making on your part. Consequently, you will be suspended with pay for two days – Friday, September 2, 2016 and Saturday, September 3, 2016 (including the game versus Butler University).

If your judgement does not improve, this office will be compelled to implement progressive disciplinary action that may lead to termination.

I hope this official reprimand serves as sufficient motivation for you to exercise the level of leadership and prudence that is expected of an Indiana State University staff member and a Division I coach.

Your signature below acknowledges that you had the opportunity to ask questions regarding this matter and that you received a copy of this letter of reprimand.

Below is the statement from Gary Hyman, who is now the special teams coordinator for University of Texas at San Antonio football.

When I arrived at KU in 2015, Jordan Goldenberg was already enrolled there and a member of the football team. When he was subsequently suspended from the team, the coaching staff was informed of the suspension but we were not provided with any information or details as to why the action had been taken.

In 2016, after I accepted a position at Indiana State to further pursue my career, Goldenberg and his parents contacted me saying he was potentially transferring there. When I asked him why he was leaving Kansas, they told me he was looking for a fresh state and an opportunity to continue playing football. They did not disclose the allegations against him or his expulsion from KU.

He was admitted to Indiana State through the university's regular application process and was then given walk-on status in football. I never pursued or recruited Goldenberg.

The day that the civil suit against KU became public was the first time I became aware of the magnitude of the allegations and that Goldenberg had been found responsible for sexual misconduct.

Following that disclosure, I met with the Indiana State Athletic Director and the head coach. They asked me why I had not previously mentioned there were issues with Goldenberg. I told them that I had been unaware of the severity of the allegations and that, as I had looked into the possibility of him joining the team -- including reaching out to assistant coaches who were still at Kansas -- the matter had not come up. Nor was it flagged by Indiana State's admissions office. The university felt I should have been more aware of the student's background and, as a result, I received a two-day suspension.

I deeply regret that I was not more communicative with the limited information I had about Goldenberg. At no time, though, was there any deception or ill intent on my part.

This matter has been the toughest of learning experiences for me and I recognize that I have an obligation to go beyond basic information when considering a student to be a member of the team. I need to ask tough questions and demand the highest standards both from the student-athletes and from myself.

Since 2017, I have been hired by two other Athletics Departments that scrutinized, and ultimately felt comfortable with, my background. They recognized the contributions I could make to their teams, and to being a responsible leader -- both on and off the field.

I hope past failings on my part will not reflect negatively on the deep commitment and demonstrated leadership of UTSA to confronting the issue of sexual misconduct in college sports and creating a zero-tolerance environment. It is something I strongly believe in as a coach, as a husband and as a father-to-be.

Kenny,

Thank you for the update.

Under federal law, the University is unable to disclose information about an ongoing conduct review of any particular student. We can share that Tyrik's enrollment status with the University and our team has not changed. He remains eligible to participate.

In regards to the helmet ribbon decal you referenced, I don't know whether it is true that Tyrik's helmet for our game on September 28 did not bear the decal. However, I can tell you it would not have been intentionally absent from his helmet. In discussing with our equipment staff, they indicated Tyrik has had some issues with helmet fitting throughout the season and it is possible that prior to the game they put him in a different back-up helmet that may not have had a ribbon decal. They couldn't recall specifically, but indicated standard procedure would be to put a decal on every player's helmet, but not necessarily on all back-up helmets.

Coach Charlie Strong Statement:

"Treating women with respect has long been one of the five main rules any student-athlete that is part of my program must follow. My staff and I take very seriously the role of mentoring, developing and educating young men to be good, respectful and productive members of our community. Neither I, my staff or our office of compliance was aware of any past issues involving Tyrik Jones when we signed him in 2018, and no information provided by Arizona Western University or its coaching staff indicated an issue. Upon being made aware of a past issue, we followed standard processes in referring the information to the proper university office for a full review. That review is ongoing."

Statement from Ryan Huff, CU Boulder chief spokesperson

“We have procedures to review and evaluate applicants who disclose prior misconduct allegations or convictions. Jash Allen is currently a student in good standing and a member of the CU Boulder football team. FERPA does not allow us to comment on a specific student’s educational records. We can say that any time we become aware of prior misconduct at another institution, we evaluate the case to determine if we feel a student would pose a safety threat to our campus.”

Good afternoon Kenny,

We at Capital have carefully considered your request from earlier this week. We are denying the request to speak with Coach Weiss. Instead, we are offering the following statement to represent the stance of both Capital University and Coach Weiss. Please feel free to use our statement as written and in its entirety. (please note that our response has been updated and is more detailed than our previously issued statement from your request a few weeks ago)

“Capital University’s admission application asks of all prospective students whether they have been convicted or pleaded guilty to a felony, been suspended or expelled from any high school or college, or been found responsible for any academic or other misconduct at any high school or college. At the time Calvin Lortie applied and subsequently was accepted to Capital as a transfer student, he responded “no” to all of these questions. It is our understanding that those were truthful responses at the time of his application, and transcripts on file from his previous institution give no indication of suspension, dismissal, or behavioral issues. While Mr. Lortie was not recruited to Capital as a student-athlete, he joined Capital’s track and field team as a walk-on, competed and graduated from Capital in 2017 without any incidents of academic or student misconduct during his time here.”

Do you have an idea of what the launch date for this upcoming piece will be?

Best,
