

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF WEST VIRGINIA

BECKLEY DIVISION

FRANK G. TREADWAY, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

CIVIL ACTION NO. 5:16-cv-12149

BLUESTONE COAL CORP., et al.,

Defendants.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

The Court has reviewed the Complaint (Document 1), the Motion of Defendants to Dismiss Complaint or in the Alternative for a More Definite Statement (Document 6) and the Plaintiff's Response in Opposition to Motion to Dismiss (Document 8). Although the Plaintiff submitted exhibits (Document 9) in support of their response in opposition, the Court finds that the exhibits were not integral to the complaint, and therefore, the Court did not consider them in analyzing or issuing the ruling herein. For the reasons stated herein, the Court finds that the motion should be denied.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Plaintiffs, Frank G. Treadway, Joey Clark Hatfield, and Charles W. Hensley, initiated this putative class action on December 14, 2016. They name Bluestone Coal Corp., Bluestone Industries, Inc., and Mechel Bluestone, Inc., as Defendants. The Plaintiffs were employees of Mechel Bluestone and Bluestone Coal Corporation at the Burke Mountain Strip Mine. They allege that "Mechel Bluestone owned, controlled, operated, and maintained the Burke Mountain Strip Mine, in coordination with Bluestone Industries, through the subsidiary Bluestone Coal Corporation.” (Compl. at ¶ 9.) They assert that “at least approximately 105 employees” were employed at the Burke Mountain Strip Mine, which they allege is a single site of employment. (Id. at ¶¶ 7, 11.)

Mr. Treadway and Mr. Hatfield allege that they were laid off without prior written notice on March 2, 2012, and Mr. Hensley alleges that he was laid off without prior written notice on December 28, 2011. On December 28, 2011, management verbally informed employees that they were laid off indefinitely. Approximately forty (40) workers were called back on January 3, 2012, while approximately sixty-five (65) employees remained laid off. About five miners were laid off on February 11, 2012, and another thirty employees were laid off on March 2, 2012. Neither the miners nor their union received written notice of the layoffs in advance. The employees were not called back to work for a period lasting in excess of six months.

The Plaintiffs allege that the layoffs violate the WARN Act. They bring their claim on their own behalf and on behalf of all employees subject to layoff from the Burke Mountain Strip Mine during the relevant time period. The Defendants filed a motion to dismiss and for a more definite statement, which is now ripe for review.

MOTION FOR A MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT

The Defendants argue that the Plaintiffs should be required to amend their complaint to provide a more definite statement under Rule 12(e) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. They argue that the Plaintiffs’ allegations regarding the Defendants’ corporate structure and status as employers are vague, ambiguous, and unclear, and that the Plaintiffs failed to allege which Defendant was responsible for each allegation. The Plaintiffs argue that the complaint complies with the applicable pleading standard. They contend that some of the allegations complained of do not relate to a material element of the claim, and none are so vague or ambiguous as to prevent a responsive pleading.

Rule 12(e) permits a party to move for a more definite statement of a pleading that “is so vague or ambiguous that the party cannot reasonably prepare a response.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e). “[W]hen the complaint conforms to Rule 8(a) and it is neither so vague nor so ambiguous that the defendant cannot reasonably be required to answer, the district court should deny a motion for a more definite statement.” Hodgson v. Virginia Baptist Hosp., Inc., 482 F.2d 821, 824 (4th Cir. 1973). The Fourth Circuit further explained that a Rule 12(e) motion should be denied where discovery will permit the parties to ascertain the unpled information. Id.; see also Tilley v. Allstate Ins. Co., 40 F. Supp. 2d 809, 814 (S.D.W. Va. 1999) (Haden, C.J.) (Rule 12(e) is “ordinarily restricted to situations where a pleading suffers from unintelligibility rather than want of detail.”) (quoting Robinette v. Griffith, 483 F.Supp. 28, 36 (W.D.Va.1979)).

The Court finds that allegations in the complaint are sufficiently clear to permit a response. The Defendants primarily complain of a lack of clarity regarding which Defendant is allegedly liable. The Plaintiffs clearly pled that the Defendants jointly employed workers at the Burke Mountain Strip Mine and that representatives of each Defendant were involved in management. (Compl. at ¶¶ 7, 9, 13.) To the extent it is unclear which Defendant allegedly took an action, there is no impediment to each Defendant answering the allegation with a denial, affirmation, or explanation, as appropriate. Finally, the Court does not find that allegations regarding the relationship between the Defendants (Paragraphs 9 and 30) to be at all unclear. Therefore, the motion for a more definite statement should be denied.

MOTION TO DISMISS

A. Standard of Review

A motion to dismiss filed pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) tests the legal sufficiency of a complaint. Francis v. Giacomelli, 588 F.3d 186, 192 (4th Cir. 2009); Giarratano v. Johnson, 521 F.3d 298, 302 (4th Cir. 2008). “[T]he legal sufficiency of a complaint is measured by whether it meets the standard stated in Rule 8 [of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure] (providing general rules of pleading) . . . and Rule 12(b)(6) (requiring that a complaint state a claim upon which relief can be granted.)” Id. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2) requires that a pleading must contain “a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2).

In reviewing a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim, the Court must “accept as true all of the factual allegations contained in the complaint.” Erikson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 93 (2007). The Court must also “draw[] all reasonable factual inferences from those facts in the plaintiff’s favor.” Edwards v. City of Goldsboro, 178 F.3d 231, 244 (4th Cir. 1999). However, statements of bare legal conclusions “are not entitled to the assumption of truth” and are insufficient to state a claim. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 (2009). Furthermore, the Court need not “accept as true unwarranted inferences, unreasonable conclusions, or arguments.” E. Shore Mkts., v. J.D. Assocs. Ltd. P’ship, 213 F.3d 175, 180 (4th Cir. 2000). “Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice... [because courts] ‘are not bound to accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation.’” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)).

To survive a motion to dismiss, “a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, ‘to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.’” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570.) In other words, this “plausibility standard requires a plaintiff to demonstrate more than ‘a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.’” Francis v. Giacomelli, 588 F.3d 186, 193 (4th Cir. 2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570.) In the complaint, a plaintiff must “articulate facts, when accepted as true, that ‘show’ that the plaintiff has stated a claim entitling him to relief.” Francis, 588 F.3d at 193 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557.) “Determining whether a complaint states [on its face] a plausible claim for relief [which can survive a motion to dismiss] will ... be a context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense.” Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679.

B. Discussion

The Defendants move to dismiss the Plaintiffs’ complaint, asserting that the alleged WARN Act violations were not timely filed. The Defendants argue that the appropriate statute of limitations on WARN Act violations in West Virginia is two years. The Plaintiffs argue that the proper statute of limitations for WARN Act claims in West Virginia is five years, and therefore, the complaint was timely filed and should not be dismissed.¹

According to the Supreme Court of the United States, the WARN Act as codified in 29 U.S.C. § 2101 et seq. contains no statute of limitations. North Star Steel Co. v. Thomas, 515 U.S. 29, 32 (1995). Because Congress failed to include a statute of limitations, the Supreme Court held in North Star Steel that statute of limitations questions concerning the WARN Act should be resolved by applying the statute of limitations from the “most closely analogous” state law to the federal act. Id. at 34, 36.

The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals has not addressed the appropriate state law statute of limitations to apply to WARN Act claims. In Bell v. Philips Electronics N.V. of the Netherlands, however, the Northern District of West Virginia heard the issue and ruled that the five-year contractual statute of limitations found applicable to the West Virginia Wage Payment and Collection Act (WVWPCA) should apply to WARN Act claims. Bell v. Philips Electronics N.V. of the Netherlands, 897 F.Supp. 938, 940 (N.D.W.Va. 1995) (citing Lucas v. Moore, 172 W.Va. 101, 303 S.E.2d 739 (1983), for the holding that the five-year contractual statute of limitations applies to WVWPCA claims). In Bell, similar to the case at hand, the plaintiffs brought an action under the WARN Act, and the defendant moved to dismiss based on the complaint being untimely filed. Id. at 939. The plaintiffs argued that WARN Act claims in West Virginia should be subject to the five-year statute of limitations in the WVWPCA, while the defendant employer argued that such claims should be subject to West Virginia’s two-year statute of limitations applicable to personal injury suits. Id.

The Bell court ultimately found that the WVWPCA was closely analogous to the WARN Act, and that the five-year contractual statute of limitations applicable to the WVWPCA was better suited for WARN Act claims than was the two-year statute of limitations applicable to personal injury actions. Id. at 940. In applying the five-year statute of limitations to the WARN Act claim, the court found that the “legislative purpose [of the WVWPCA] of allowing discharged employees remedies for enforcement and salary” was similar to the legislative purpose of the WARN Act, and that “the remedies available under both [the WARN Act and the WVWPCA] are quite similar in that they mandate payment based on the employees' regular rate of pay for a certain period and are triggered by the employers' failure to comply with a statutory duty." Id.

This Court agrees with the analysis of the Northern District of West Virginia. The Defendants in the case at hand argue that the two-year statute of limitations should control because claims for wrongful discharge in West Virginia generally arise in tort. The Defendants rely on Luczkovich v. Melville Corp., a decision from the Eastern District of Virginia, to bolster their position. However, in Luczkovich, the district court found that the statute of limitations in Virginia's wrongful discharge law should apply to WARN Act claims in Virginia specifically because Virginia's wrongful discharge law did not treat wrongful discharge claims as though they arose in tort. Luczkovich v. Melville Corp., 911 F.Supp. 208 (E.D.Va. 1996) ("[T]he court must reject the plaintiff's argument [that the two-year personal injury statute of limitations should apply] because there is no basis at common law or in common sense for the contention that a WARN Act violation causes personal injury. A WARN Act injury is an economic injury.").

Wrongful discharge actions in West Virginia have a long legal history of arising in tort, unlike Virginia's wrongful discharge law. See, McCourt v. Oneida Coal Co., Inc., 425 S.E.2d 602 (W.Va. 1992); Stanley v. Sewell Coal Co., 285 S.E.2d 679 (W.Va. 1981); Shanholtz v. Monongahela Power Co., 270 S.E.2d 178 (W.Va. 1980). Thus, even under the reasoning of Luczkovich, West Virginia's wrongful discharge law is not analogous to the WARN Act, and therefore, its two-year statute of limitations should not apply.² As the Bell court held, the WVWPCA was created for a similar purpose and closely analogizes the WARN Act in that both statutes create rights “that would not exist but for the statute and but for an employer’s refusal to comply with a legislatively determined standard to ease the financial burden on terminated employees.” Bell, 897 F. Supp. at 938. Clearly, a WARN Act claim does not arise in tort, and the statute of limitations applicable to torts or personal injury actions is not that which is the “most closely analogous” to such claims.

The Court finds that West Virginia’s Wage Payment and Collection Act is the state law most closely analogous to the WARN Act, and the five-year statute of limitations applicable to the WVWPCA also applies to WARN Act claims in West Virginia. Because the Plaintiffs filed their complaint within five years of the Defendants’ alleged WARN Act violations, their complaint is timely, and the motion to dismiss should be denied.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, after careful consideration, the Court ORDERS that the Motion of Defendants to Dismiss Complaint or in the Alternative for a More Definite Statement (Document 6) be DENIED.

The Court DIRECTS the Clerk to send a copy of this Order to counsel of record and to any unrepresented party.
